29.6.10 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to transfers and relocation and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.6.11 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.6.12 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

29.6.13 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

29.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.6.15 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.6.16 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to transfers and relocation and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to transfers and relocation.

29.6.18 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

29.6.19 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with transfers and relocation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.6.20 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with transfers and relocation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on transfers and relocation within 15 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.6.22 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to transfers and relocation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.6.23 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with transfers and relocation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.6.24 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.6.25 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to transfers and relocation. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to transfers and relocation and on the applicable legal requirements.

29.6.26 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to transfers and relocation. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for transfers and relocation and shall make them available to all employees.

29.6.27 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with transfers and relocation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.6.28 HR shall respond to every written query on transfers and relocation within 14 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for transfers and relocation and shall make them available to all employees.

29.6.29 HR shall respond to every written query on transfers and relocation within 2 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with transfers and relocation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

29.6.30 HR shall respond to every written query on transfers and relocation within 5 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.6.31 HR shall respond to every written query on transfers and relocation within 10 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

29.6.32 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

29.7 Procedure and Process Steps

29.7.1 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.7.2 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.7.3 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

29.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.7.6 The employee shall initiate the process relating to transfers and relocation by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager.

29.7.7 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.7.8 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

29.7.9 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.7.10 The employee shall initiate the process relating to transfers and relocation by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

29.7.11 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.7.12 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

29.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.7.16 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.7.17 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.7.18 The employee shall initiate the process relating to transfers and relocation by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 3 working days of receiving it.

29.7.19 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.7.20 The employee shall initiate the process relating to transfers and relocation by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

29.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.7.22 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.7.23 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.7.24 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.7.25 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

29.7.26 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.7.27 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.7.28 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.7.30 The employee shall initiate the process relating to transfers and relocation by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

29.7.31 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.7.32 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 3 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

29.7.33 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

29.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

29.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to transfers and relocation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

29.8.2 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

29.8.3 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.8.4 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.8.6 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. All documents relating to transfers and relocation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

29.8.7 Records relating to transfers and relocation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.8.8 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.8.10 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.8.11 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

29.8.12 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.8.13 All documents relating to transfers and relocation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.8.14 All documents relating to transfers and relocation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.8.15 All documents relating to transfers and relocation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

29.8.17 Records relating to transfers and relocation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.8.18 Records relating to transfers and relocation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

29.8.20 All documents relating to transfers and relocation shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

29.8.21 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

29.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.8.23 Records relating to transfers and relocation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.8.24 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

29.8.25 All documents relating to transfers and relocation shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to transfers and relocation that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

29.8.26 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.8.27 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.8.28 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.8.29 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to transfers and relocation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

29.8.30 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.8.31 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

29.8.33 Records relating to transfers and relocation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

29.9.1 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.9.2 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

29.9.3 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

29.9.4 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.9.5 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice.

29.9.7 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.9.9 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.9.10 Exceptions to the provisions on transfers and relocation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.9.11 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

29.9.12 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.9.13 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Exceptions to the provisions on transfers and relocation may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

29.9.14 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.9.15 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

29.9.16 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.9.17 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

29.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

29.9.20 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

29.9.21 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.9.22 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.9.23 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on transfers and relocation may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

29.9.24 Exceptions to the provisions on transfers and relocation may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on transfers and relocation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on transfers and relocation may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

29.9.27 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

29.9.28 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

29.9.29 Exceptions to the provisions on transfers and relocation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.9.30 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.9.31 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions to the provisions on transfers and relocation may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

29.9.32 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice.

29.9.33 Exceptions to the provisions on transfers and relocation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

29.10.1 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.10.2 Where an external regulator requests information concerning transfers and relocation, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.10.3 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to transfers and relocation. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.10.4 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.10.5 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.10.6 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.10.7 Where an external regulator requests information concerning transfers and relocation, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

29.10.8 An internal audit of transfers and relocation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.10.9 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.10.10 An internal audit of transfers and relocation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.10.11 An internal audit of transfers and relocation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

29.10.12 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.10.13 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.10.14 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Compliance with the provisions on transfers and relocation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

29.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

29.10.16 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to transfers and relocation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.10.17 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Compliance with the provisions on transfers and relocation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

29.10.18 An internal audit of transfers and relocation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Compliance with the provisions on transfers and relocation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

29.10.20 Where an external regulator requests information concerning transfers and relocation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.10.21 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Compliance with the provisions on transfers and relocation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

29.10.22 An internal audit of transfers and relocation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

29.10.23 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.10.24 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.10.25 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where an external regulator requests information concerning transfers and relocation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

29.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.10.27 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.10.28 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.10.29 Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.10.30 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to transfers and relocation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Compliance data relating to transfers and relocation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

29.10.31 Compliance with the provisions on transfers and relocation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

29.10.32 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.10.33 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

29.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

29.11.2 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.11.3 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to transfers and relocation shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.11.4 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

29.11.5 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.11.6 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.11.7 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

29.11.8 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

29.11.9 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on transfers and relocation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.11.11 A failure to comply with the provisions on transfers and relocation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

29.11.12 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.11.13 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to transfers and relocation shall be treated as serious misconduct. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.11.14 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.11.15 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

29.11.16 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.11.17 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to transfers and relocation shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.11.18 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.11.19 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.11.21 A failure to comply with the provisions on transfers and relocation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

29.11.22 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.11.23 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.11.24 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.11.25 A failure to comply with the provisions on transfers and relocation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.11.26 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to transfers and relocation shall be treated as serious misconduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.11.27 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to transfers and relocation shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

29.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.11.29 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.11.31 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

29.11.32 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

29.11.33 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

29.12 Review and Amendment

29.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

29.12.4 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.12.5 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

29.12.6 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on transfers and relocation through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.12.7 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on transfers and relocation through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.12.8 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on transfers and relocation through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

29.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.12.10 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.12.11 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on transfers and relocation through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

29.12.14 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.12.15 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.12.16 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

29.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.12.18 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.12.19 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

29.12.20 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on transfers and relocation through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.12.21 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

29.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.12.23 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

29.12.24 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.12.25 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.12.27 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

29.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.12.31 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.12.32 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

29.12.33 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

Chapter 30

Secondments and Deputation

30.1 Purpose and Scope

30.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

30.1.2 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.1.3 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

30.1.4 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

30.1.5 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.1.6 The Company recognises that secondments and deputation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

30.1.7 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.1.8 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. The Company recognises that secondments and deputation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

30.1.9 The Company recognises that secondments and deputation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

30.1.10 The Company recognises that secondments and deputation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.1.11 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

30.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.1.13 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation.

30.1.14 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to secondments and deputation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

30.1.15 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation.

30.1.16 The objective of these provisions on secondments and deputation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

30.1.17 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.1.18 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

30.1.19 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to secondments and deputation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

30.1.20 The objective of these provisions on secondments and deputation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation.

30.1.21 The Company recognises that secondments and deputation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

30.1.22 The objective of these provisions on secondments and deputation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.1.23 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The objective of these provisions on secondments and deputation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

30.1.24 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.1.25 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

30.1.26 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation.

30.1.27 The Company recognises that secondments and deputation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.1.28 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The objective of these provisions on secondments and deputation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

30.1.29 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to secondments and deputation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

30.1.30 The Company recognises that secondments and deputation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation.

30.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.1.32 The Company recognises that secondments and deputation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

30.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on secondments and deputation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

30.2 Definitions and Interpretation

30.2.1 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.2.2 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation.

30.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation.

30.2.4 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

30.2.5 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.2.6 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation.

30.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

30.2.9 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

30.2.10 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.2.11 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

30.2.12 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "secondments and deputation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.2.13 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

30.2.14 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.2.15 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "secondments and deputation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

30.2.16 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.2.17 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

30.2.18 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.2.20 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

30.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.2.22 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "secondments and deputation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

30.2.23 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

30.2.24 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation.

30.2.25 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.2.26 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

30.2.27 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.2.28 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to secondments and deputation. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

30.2.29 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

30.2.30 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

30.2.31 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.2.32 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.2.33 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

30.3 Eligibility and Applicability

30.3.1 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility for secondments and deputation shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

30.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for secondments and deputation restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

30.3.3 Eligibility for secondments and deputation shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

30.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

30.3.5 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

30.3.6 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on secondments and deputation. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.3.7 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

30.3.8 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.3.9 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for secondments and deputation restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.3.10 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

30.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for secondments and deputation restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.3.12 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on secondments and deputation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

30.3.13 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on secondments and deputation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.3.14 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for secondments and deputation restricted until the matter is concluded.

30.3.15 Eligibility for secondments and deputation shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.3.16 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Eligibility for secondments and deputation shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

30.3.17 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on secondments and deputation. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.3.19 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on secondments and deputation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.3.20 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for secondments and deputation restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

30.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.3.22 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.3.23 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.3.24 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

30.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.3.26 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.3.27 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.3.28 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on secondments and deputation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.3.30 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.3.31 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for secondments and deputation restricted until the matter is concluded.

30.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on secondments and deputation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

30.3.33 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

30.4 Responsibilities of Employees

30.4.1 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

30.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.4.3 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with secondments and deputation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to secondments and deputation and shall not withhold material facts.

30.4.4 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on secondments and deputation and shall comply with them at all times.

30.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

30.4.7 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

30.4.8 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with secondments and deputation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.4.9 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to secondments and deputation and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.4.10 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with secondments and deputation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

30.4.12 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

30.4.13 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.4.14 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

30.4.15 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on secondments and deputation and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.4.16 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

30.4.17 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with secondments and deputation.

30.4.18 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on secondments and deputation and shall comply with them at all times.

30.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.4.20 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with secondments and deputation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

30.4.21 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

30.4.22 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on secondments and deputation and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.4.23 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on secondments and deputation and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.4.24 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on secondments and deputation and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

30.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on secondments and deputation and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

30.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with secondments and deputation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

30.4.27 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

30.4.28 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

30.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

30.4.30 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

30.4.31 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of secondments and deputation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

30.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on secondments and deputation and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to secondments and deputation and shall not withhold material facts.

30.4.33 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

30.5.1 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to secondments and deputation within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.5.2 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on secondments and deputation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on secondments and deputation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.5.4 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.5.5 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to secondments and deputation within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to secondments and deputation to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

30.5.7 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.5.8 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on secondments and deputation. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.5.9 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on secondments and deputation and applies them consistently.

30.5.10 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on secondments and deputation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on secondments and deputation.

30.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

30.5.12 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on secondments and deputation and applies them consistently.

30.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.5.15 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to secondments and deputation to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.5.16 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to secondments and deputation to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

30.5.17 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.5.18 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on secondments and deputation and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on secondments and deputation.

30.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

30.5.20 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on secondments and deputation.

30.5.21 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on secondments and deputation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.5.22 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on secondments and deputation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.5.23 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to secondments and deputation to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on secondments and deputation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.5.25 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to secondments and deputation to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Line

Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on secondments and deputation.

30.5.26 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.5.27 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on secondments and deputation.

30.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to secondments and deputation to the HR Director without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to secondments and deputation within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

30.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

30.5.30 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to secondments and deputation to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on secondments and deputation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

30.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.5.32 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on secondments and deputation. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.5.33 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to secondments and deputation to the HR Director without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

30.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

30.6.1 HR shall respond to every written query on secondments and deputation within 30 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.6.2 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to secondments and deputation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.6.3 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.6.4 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for secondments and deputation and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.6.5 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with secondments and deputation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to secondments and deputation and on the applicable legal requirements.

30.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with secondments and deputation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

30.6.8 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to secondments and deputation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.6.9 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with secondments and deputation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.6.10 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to secondments and deputation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

30.6.11 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.6.12 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to secondments and deputation. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to secondments and deputation and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to secondments and deputation.

30.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with secondments and deputation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

30.6.15 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on secondments and deputation within 10 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.6.17 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

30.6.18 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.6.19 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with secondments and deputation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

30.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.6.21 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to secondments and deputation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.6.22 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for secondments and deputation and shall make them available to all employees. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to secondments and deputation and on the applicable legal requirements.

30.6.23 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with secondments and deputation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

30.6.24 HR shall respond to every written query on secondments and deputation within 15 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to secondments and deputation.

30.6.25 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

30.6.26 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.6.27 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

30.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.6.30 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.6.31 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for secondments and deputation and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

30.6.32 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to secondments and deputation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.6.33 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for secondments and deputation and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to secondments and deputation.

30.7 Procedure and Process Steps

30.7.1 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

30.7.2 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

30.7.3 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

30.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.7.5 The employee shall initiate the process relating to secondments and deputation by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

30.7.6 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 30 working days of receiving it.

30.7.8 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.7.9 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.7.10 The employee shall initiate the process relating to secondments and deputation by submitting a written request to the Line Manager. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.7.11 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

30.7.12 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.7.13 The employee shall initiate the process relating to secondments and deputation by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

30.7.14 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

30.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 7 working days of receiving it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.7.16 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

30.7.17 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.7.18 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

30.7.19 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

30.7.20 The employee shall initiate the process relating to secondments and deputation by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.7.21 The employee shall initiate the process relating to secondments and deputation by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

30.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

30.7.23 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

30.7.24 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

30.7.25 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

30.7.26 The employee shall initiate the process relating to secondments and deputation by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.7.27 The employee shall initiate the process relating to secondments and deputation by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

30.7.28 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 2 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

30.7.29 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.7.30 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.7.31 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

30.7.32 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.7.33 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

30.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

30.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to secondments and deputation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.8.2 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

30.8.3 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.8.4 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.8.5 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.8.6 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

30.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.8.8 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

30.8.9 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

30.8.10 All documents relating to secondments and deputation shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

30.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

30.8.12 Records relating to secondments and deputation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.8.14 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

30.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.8.16 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.8.17 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

30.8.18 Records relating to secondments and deputation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.8.20 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

30.8.21 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.8.22 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to secondments and deputation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.8.23 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

30.8.24 Records relating to secondments and deputation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. All documents relating to secondments and deputation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

30.8.25 All documents relating to secondments and deputation shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.8.26 All documents relating to secondments and deputation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.8.27 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. All documents relating to secondments and deputation shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

30.8.28 All documents relating to secondments and deputation shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

30.8.29 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.8.30 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to secondments and deputation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.8.32 All documents relating to secondments and deputation shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.8.33 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

30.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

30.9.1 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

30.9.2 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.9.3 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

30.9.4 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

30.9.5 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.9.6 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.9.7 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

30.9.8 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.9.9 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

30.9.10 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.9.11 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.9.12 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

30.9.13 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.9.14 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

30.9.15 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.9.16 Exceptions to the provisions on secondments and deputation may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.9.17 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

30.9.18 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.9.19 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

30.9.20 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.9.21 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.9.22 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.9.23 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.9.24 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

30.9.25 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

30.9.26 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

30.9.27 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

30.9.28 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

30.9.29 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.9.30 Exceptions to the provisions on secondments and deputation may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

30.9.31 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

30.9.33 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

30.10.1 Where an external regulator requests information concerning secondments and deputation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

30.10.2 Compliance data relating to secondments and deputation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.10.3 Where an external regulator requests information concerning secondments and deputation, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

30.10.4 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

30.10.5 Compliance with the provisions on secondments and deputation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.10.6 An internal audit of secondments and deputation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.10.7 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.10.8 Compliance data relating to secondments and deputation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where an external regulator requests information concerning secondments and deputation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

30.10.9 Where an external regulator requests information concerning secondments and deputation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

30.10.10 Compliance with the provisions on secondments and deputation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

30.10.11 Compliance with the provisions on secondments and deputation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.10.12 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to secondments and deputation.

30.10.13 Compliance with the provisions on secondments and deputation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.10.14 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

30.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.10.16 Compliance data relating to secondments and deputation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.10.17 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to secondments and deputation. Compliance with the provisions on secondments and deputation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

30.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.10.20 Where an external regulator requests information concerning secondments and deputation, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.10.21 Where an external regulator requests information concerning secondments and deputation, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on secondments and deputation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

30.10.23 Compliance with the provisions on secondments and deputation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.10.24 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Compliance with the provisions on secondments and deputation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

30.10.25 An internal audit of secondments and deputation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning secondments and deputation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.10.27 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.10.28 Where an external regulator requests information concerning secondments and deputation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.10.29 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to secondments and deputation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Compliance with the provisions on secondments and deputation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

30.10.30 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.10.31 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

30.10.32 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Compliance data relating to secondments and deputation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

30.10.33 An internal audit of secondments and deputation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

30.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

30.11.1 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

30.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to secondments and deputation shall be treated as serious misconduct.

30.11.3 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.11.4 A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.11.5 A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.11.6 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.11.7 A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

30.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.11.9 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

30.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.11.11 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to secondments and deputation shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.11.12 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to secondments and deputation shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

30.11.13 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

30.11.14 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under

this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

30.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

30.11.17 A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

30.11.18 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.11.20 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.11.21 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to secondments and deputation shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

30.11.22 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.11.23 A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.11.24 A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

30.11.25 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to secondments and deputation shall be treated as serious misconduct.

30.11.26 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

30.11.27 A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.11.28 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

30.11.29 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to secondments and deputation shall be treated as serious misconduct. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.11.30 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.11.31 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to secondments and deputation shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

30.11.32 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

30.11.33 A failure to comply with the provisions on secondments and deputation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

30.12 Review and Amendment

30.12.1 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.12.2 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

30.12.3 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.12.4 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

30.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

30.12.6 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

30.12.7 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.12.8 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.12.9 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

30.12.10 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

30.12.11 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.12.12 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on secondments and deputation through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect.

30.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

30.12.14 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

30.12.15 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

30.12.16 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

30.12.17 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on secondments and deputation through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

30.12.18 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.12.19 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on secondments and deputation through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

30.12.20 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on secondments and deputation through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to secondments and deputation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

30.12.21 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

30.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to secondments and deputation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

30.12.24 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

30.12.25 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

30.12.26 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

30.12.27 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

30.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

30.12.29 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

30.12.30 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

30.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

30.12.32 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

30.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

Chapter 31

Resignation and Notice

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Notice period	30 days
Senior notice period	60 days

31.1 Purpose and Scope

31.1.1 The Company recognises that resignation and notice has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.1.2 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on resignation and notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.1.3 The Company recognises that resignation and notice has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.1.4 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

31.1.5 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on resignation and notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.1.6 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on resignation and notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

31.1.7 The objective of these provisions on resignation and notice is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

31.1.8 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.1.9 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

31.1.10 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.1.11 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

31.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on resignation and notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.1.13 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on resignation and notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.1.15 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on resignation and notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.1.16 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on resignation and notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.1.17 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to resignation and notice and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

31.1.18 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to resignation and notice and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

31.1.19 The objective of these provisions on resignation and notice is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

31.1.20 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.1.21 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to resignation and notice and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The objective of these provisions on resignation and notice is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

31.1.22 The objective of these provisions on resignation and notice is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.1.23 The Company recognises that resignation and notice has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.1.24 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The objective of these provisions on resignation and notice is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

31.1.25 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on resignation and notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.1.26 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to resignation and notice and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

31.1.27 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on resignation and notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

31.1.28 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to resignation and notice and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.1.29 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to resignation and notice and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

31.1.30 The Company recognises that resignation and notice has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.1.31 The objective of these provisions on resignation and notice is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

31.1.32 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to resignation and notice and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.1.33 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.2 Definitions and Interpretation

31.2.1 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

31.2.2 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to resignation and notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

31.2.4 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.2.5 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.2.6 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

31.2.7 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to resignation and notice.

31.2.9 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

31.2.10 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to resignation and notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.2.11 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

31.2.12 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.2.14 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "resignation and notice" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

31.2.15 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.2.16 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.2.17 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "resignation and notice" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

31.2.18 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

31.2.19 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

31.2.21 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "resignation and notice" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.2.22 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

31.2.23 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

31.2.24 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

31.2.25 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "resignation and notice" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

31.2.26 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

31.2.27 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.2.28 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to resignation and notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

31.2.29 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "resignation and notice" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.2.30 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

31.2.31 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

31.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

31.2.33 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.3 Eligibility and Applicability

31.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.3.2 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on resignation and notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

31.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.3.4 Eligibility for resignation and notice shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.3.5 Eligibility for resignation and notice shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

31.3.6 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for resignation and notice restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on resignation and notice. Eligibility for resignation and notice shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

31.3.8 Eligibility for resignation and notice shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.3.9 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

31.3.10 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

31.3.11 Eligibility for resignation and notice shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

31.3.12 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.3.13 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

31.3.14 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.3.15 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on resignation and notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

31.3.16 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

31.3.17 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility for resignation and notice shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

31.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on resignation and notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.3.19 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by

HR.

31.3.20 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

31.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

31.3.22 Eligibility for resignation and notice shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

31.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on resignation and notice.

31.3.24 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on resignation and notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.3.25 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for resignation and notice restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.3.26 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for resignation and notice restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.3.28 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for resignation and notice restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

31.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on resignation and notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for resignation and notice restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.3.31 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on resignation and notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

31.3.32 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

31.3.33 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

31.4 Responsibilities of Employees

31.4.1 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.4.3 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

31.4.4 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of resignation and notice as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

31.4.5 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

31.4.6 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with resignation and notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

31.4.7 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

31.4.8 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on resignation and notice and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.4.9 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with resignation and notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of resignation and notice as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.4.11 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on resignation and notice and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.4.12 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.4.13 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of resignation and notice as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

31.4.14 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on resignation and notice and shall comply with them at all times.

31.4.16 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with resignation and notice.

31.4.17 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

31.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of resignation and notice as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.4.20 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to resignation and notice and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

31.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

31.4.22 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with resignation and notice. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

31.4.23 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to resignation and notice and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.4.24 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of resignation and notice as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on resignation and notice and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.4.26 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of resignation and notice as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

31.4.27 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.4.28 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with resignation and notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

31.4.29 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on resignation and notice and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.4.30 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Head of Department at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with resignation and notice.

31.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on resignation and notice and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. The staff member shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

31.4.33 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

31.5.1 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on resignation and notice and applies them consistently.

31.5.2 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on resignation and notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

31.5.3 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on resignation and notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.5.4 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on resignation and notice and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on resignation and notice and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

31.5.6 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to resignation and notice to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.5.7 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on resignation and notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.5.8 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on resignation and notice and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

31.5.9 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

31.5.10 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

31.5.11 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to resignation and notice within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.5.12 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

31.5.13 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on resignation and notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

31.5.14 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on resignation and notice and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.5.15 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to resignation and notice to the Policy Committee without undue delay. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.5.16 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on resignation and notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.5.17 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to resignation and notice to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.5.18 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to resignation and notice to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

31.5.19 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

31.5.20 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on resignation and notice and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.5.21 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.5.22 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to resignation and notice to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

31.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on resignation and notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.5.24 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to resignation and notice to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

31.5.25 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on resignation and notice and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.5.26 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

31.5.27 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on resignation and notice and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on resignation and notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.5.29 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on resignation and notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under

this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.5.30 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to resignation and notice to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

31.5.31 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on resignation and notice.

31.5.32 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to resignation and notice to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

31.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to resignation and notice within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

31.6.1 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to resignation and notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.6.2 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to resignation and notice and on the applicable legal requirements.

31.6.3 HR shall respond to every written query on resignation and notice within 15 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.6.4 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to resignation and notice and on the applicable legal requirements.

31.6.5 HR shall respond to every written query on resignation and notice within 30 working days of receipt. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to resignation and notice.

31.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for resignation and notice and shall make them available to all employees. HR shall respond to every written query on resignation and notice within 30 working days of receipt.

31.6.7 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to resignation and notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.6.8 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for resignation and notice and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.6.9 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to resignation and notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.6.10 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to resignation and notice and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with resignation and notice in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

31.6.12 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.6.13 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to resignation and notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

31.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

31.6.15 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with resignation and notice in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

31.6.16 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to resignation and notice and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to resignation and notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

31.6.18 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with resignation and notice in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

31.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

31.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.6.21 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for resignation and notice and shall make them available to all employees. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

31.6.22 HR shall respond to every written query on resignation and notice within 3 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.6.23 HR shall respond to every written query on resignation and notice within 2 working days of receipt. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for resignation and notice and shall make them available to all employees.

31.6.24 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.6.25 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to resignation and notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.6.26 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with resignation and notice in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

31.6.27 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.6.28 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for resignation and notice and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to resignation and notice.

31.6.29 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with resignation and notice in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

31.6.30 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for resignation and notice and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

31.6.31 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to resignation and notice and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with resignation and notice in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

31.7 Procedure and Process Steps

31.7.1 Notice period. Employees below the Senior Manager grade shall serve a notice period of 30 days.

31.7.2 Senior notice period. Employees at Senior Manager grade and above shall serve a notice period of 60 days.

31.7.3 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.7.4 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 7 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The employee shall initiate the process relating to resignation and notice by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department.

31.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

31.7.6 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.7.7 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.7.8 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.7.9 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The employee shall initiate the process relating to resignation and notice by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager.

31.7.10 The employee shall initiate the process relating to resignation and notice by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

31.7.11 The employee shall initiate the process relating to resignation and notice by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

31.7.12 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.7.14 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 14 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

31.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 3 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

31.7.16 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.7.17 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.7.18 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.7.19 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.7.20 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 10 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

31.7.21 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

31.7.22 The employee shall initiate the process relating to resignation and notice by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to resignation and notice by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to resignation and notice by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

31.7.25 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

31.7.26 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.7.27 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

31.7.28 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

31.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

31.7.30 The employee shall initiate the process relating to resignation and notice by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

31.7.31 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.7.32 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

31.7.33 The employee shall initiate the process relating to resignation and notice by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

31.7.34 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

31.7.35 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

31.8.1 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to resignation and notice that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

31.8.2 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to resignation and notice that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

31.8.3 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

31.8.4 Records relating to resignation and notice shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

31.8.5 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.8.6 Records relating to resignation and notice shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.8.7 Records relating to resignation and notice shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

31.8.8 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.8.9 All documents relating to resignation and notice shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

31.8.10 All documents relating to resignation and notice shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

31.8.11 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to resignation and notice that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records relating to resignation and notice shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

31.8.12 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.8.13 All documents relating to resignation and notice shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.8.14 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to resignation and notice that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.8.15 Records relating to resignation and notice shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.8.17 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

31.8.18 All documents relating to resignation and notice shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.8.20 Records relating to resignation and notice shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.8.21 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to resignation and notice that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

31.8.22 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.8.23 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

31.8.24 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

31.8.25 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.8.26 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

31.8.27 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to resignation and notice that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

31.8.28 Records relating to resignation and notice shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. All documents relating to resignation and notice shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

31.8.29 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.8.30 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. All documents relating to resignation and notice shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

31.8.33 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

31.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on resignation and notice may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.9.2 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

31.9.3 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

31.9.4 Exceptions to the provisions on resignation and notice may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

31.9.5 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.9.6 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

31.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.9.8 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

31.9.9 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

31.9.10 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions to the provisions on resignation and notice may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

31.9.11 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Exceptions to the provisions on resignation and notice may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

31.9.12 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Exceptions to the provisions on resignation and notice may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

31.9.13 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

31.9.14 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.9.15 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.9.16 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

31.9.17 Exceptions to the provisions on resignation and notice may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.9.18 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

31.9.20 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

31.9.21 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.9.22 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

31.9.23 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.9.24 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

31.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on resignation and notice may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

31.9.27 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

31.9.28 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

31.9.29 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.9.30 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.9.31 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.9.32 Exceptions to the provisions on resignation and notice may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.9.33 Exceptions to the provisions on resignation and notice may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

31.10.1 Compliance data relating to resignation and notice shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.10.2 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.10.3 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to resignation and notice. Compliance data relating to resignation and notice shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

31.10.4 Where an external regulator requests information concerning resignation and notice, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.10.5 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to resignation and notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.10.6 Compliance with the provisions on resignation and notice shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

31.10.7 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where an external regulator requests information concerning resignation and notice, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

31.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

31.10.9 Compliance data relating to resignation and notice shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.10.10 Compliance data relating to resignation and notice shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.10.11 Where an external regulator requests information concerning resignation and notice, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.10.12 Where an external regulator requests information concerning resignation and notice, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

31.10.13 Where an external regulator requests information concerning resignation and notice, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

31.10.14 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.10.15 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

31.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

31.10.17 Compliance with the provisions on resignation and notice shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.10.18 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

31.10.19 Compliance data relating to resignation and notice shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.10.20 An internal audit of resignation and notice shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.10.21 Compliance data relating to resignation and notice shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on resignation and notice shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.10.23 An internal audit of resignation and notice shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance with the provisions on resignation and notice shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

31.10.24 Where an external regulator requests information concerning resignation and notice, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.10.25 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning resignation and notice, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.10.27 Compliance with the provisions on resignation and notice shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.10.28 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

31.10.29 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Compliance with the provisions on resignation and notice shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

31.10.30 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

31.10.31 An internal audit of resignation and notice shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.10.32 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. An internal audit of resignation and notice shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

31.10.33 Compliance data relating to resignation and notice shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

31.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

31.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on resignation and notice may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

31.11.4 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

31.11.5 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

31.11.6 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.11.7 A failure to comply with the provisions on resignation and notice may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.11.8 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.11.9 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to resignation and notice shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

31.11.11 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

31.11.12 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

31.11.13 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to resignation and notice shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.11.14 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.11.15 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to resignation and notice shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

31.11.16 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to resignation and notice shall be treated as serious misconduct. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.11.17 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to resignation and notice shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A failure to comply with the provisions on resignation and notice may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

31.11.18 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.11.19 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

31.11.20 A failure to comply with the provisions on resignation and notice may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

31.11.21 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.11.22 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

31.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

31.11.24 A failure to comply with the provisions on resignation and notice may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.11.25 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.11.26 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

31.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.11.28 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

31.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

31.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.11.31 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

31.11.32 A failure to comply with the provisions on resignation and notice may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.11.33 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to resignation and notice shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.12 Review and Amendment

31.12.1 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.12.2 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

31.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.12.4 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on resignation and notice through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect.

31.12.5 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.12.6 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.12.7 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.12.8 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

31.12.9 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.12.10 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

31.12.11 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on resignation and notice through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect.

31.12.12 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.12.13 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.12.14 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

31.12.15 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

31.12.16 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on resignation and notice through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect.

31.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

31.12.18 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

31.12.19 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

31.12.20 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

31.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

31.12.22 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.12.23 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

31.12.24 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on resignation and notice through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

31.12.25 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on resignation and notice through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

31.12.26 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on resignation and notice through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect.

31.12.27 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

31.12.28 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

31.12.29 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on resignation and notice through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

31.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to resignation and notice made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

31.12.31 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to resignation and notice, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

31.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

31.12.33 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on resignation and notice through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

Chapter 32

Termination and Redundancy

32.1 Purpose and Scope

32.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to termination and redundancy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

32.1.2 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.1.4 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy.

32.1.5 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.1.6 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

32.1.7 The Company recognises that termination and redundancy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.1.8 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

32.1.9 The Company recognises that termination and redundancy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy.

32.1.10 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to termination and redundancy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.1.11 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.1.12 The objective of these provisions on termination and redundancy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.1.13 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.1.14 The objective of these provisions on termination and redundancy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Company recognises that termination and redundancy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

32.1.15 The objective of these provisions on termination and redundancy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to termination and redundancy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

32.1.16 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy.

32.1.17 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy.

32.1.18 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The objective of these provisions on termination and redundancy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

32.1.19 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to termination and redundancy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.1.20 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to termination and redundancy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.1.21 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.1.22 The Company recognises that termination and redundancy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy.

32.1.23 The objective of these provisions on termination and redundancy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.1.24 The Company recognises that termination and redundancy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

32.1.25 The objective of these provisions on termination and redundancy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.1.26 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to termination and redundancy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

32.1.27 The Company recognises that termination and redundancy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy.

32.1.28 The Company recognises that termination and redundancy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

32.1.29 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to termination and redundancy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

32.1.30 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.1.31 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.1.32 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on termination and redundancy. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.2 Definitions and Interpretation

32.2.1 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.2.2 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

32.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to termination and redundancy. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.2.6 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to termination and redundancy.

32.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

32.2.8 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

32.2.10 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

32.2.12 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to termination and redundancy. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.2.13 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.2.14 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.2.15 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

32.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.2.17 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

32.2.18 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

32.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

32.2.20 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.2.22 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.2.23 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

32.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.2.25 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.2.26 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

32.2.27 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.2.28 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.2.29 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

32.2.30 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

32.2.31 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "termination and redundancy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

32.2.32 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to termination and redundancy. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.2.33 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to termination and redundancy.

32.3 Eligibility and Applicability

32.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for termination and redundancy restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on termination and redundancy.

32.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

32.3.5 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

32.3.7 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

32.3.8 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.3.9 Eligibility for termination and redundancy shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.3.10 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Eligibility for termination and redundancy shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

32.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for termination and redundancy restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.3.12 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

32.3.13 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

32.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

32.3.15 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on termination and redundancy. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Eligibility for termination and redundancy shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

32.3.16 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.3.17 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

32.3.18 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for termination and redundancy restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.3.19 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

32.3.20 Eligibility for termination and redundancy shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

32.3.21 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for termination and redundancy restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.3.22 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

32.3.23 Eligibility for termination and redundancy shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.3.25 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

32.3.26 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

32.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.3.28 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

32.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on termination and redundancy. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for termination and redundancy restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.3.31 Eligibility for termination and redundancy shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.3.32 Eligibility for termination and redundancy shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

32.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for termination and redundancy restricted until the matter is concluded.

32.4 Responsibilities of Employees

32.4.1 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of termination and redundancy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to termination and redundancy and shall not withhold material facts.

32.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.4.3 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

32.4.4 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.4.5 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to termination and redundancy and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on termination and redundancy and shall comply with them at all times.

32.4.6 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.4.7 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

32.4.8 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.4.9 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.4.10 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Head of Department at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.4.11 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to termination and redundancy and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The employee shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

32.4.12 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.4.13 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on termination and redundancy and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.4.14 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on termination and redundancy and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

32.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.4.16 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with termination and redundancy.

32.4.17 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on termination and redundancy and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

32.4.18 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with termination and redundancy. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.4.19 The staff member shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

32.4.20 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.4.21 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to termination and redundancy and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with termination and redundancy.

32.4.22 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of termination and redundancy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.4.23 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of termination and redundancy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

32.4.24 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

32.4.25 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.4.26 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to termination and redundancy and shall not withhold material facts. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

32.4.27 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of termination and redundancy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with termination and redundancy.

32.4.28 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of termination and redundancy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.4.29 The employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.4.30 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.4.31 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to termination and redundancy and shall not withhold material facts. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on termination and redundancy and shall comply with them at all times. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

32.4.33 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with termination and redundancy. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

32.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

32.5.1 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to termination and redundancy within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

32.5.2 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on termination and redundancy. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

32.5.3 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

32.5.4 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to termination and redundancy within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.5.5 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on termination and redundancy and applies them consistently. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to termination and redundancy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

32.5.6 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.5.7 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on termination and redundancy and applies them consistently. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.5.8 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to termination and redundancy to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

32.5.9 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on termination and redundancy and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to termination and redundancy to the HR Director without undue delay.

32.5.10 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on termination and redundancy. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to termination and redundancy to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

32.5.11 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on termination and redundancy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.5.12 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to termination and redundancy within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

32.5.13 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on termination and redundancy and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to termination and redundancy within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

32.5.14 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on termination and redundancy and applies them consistently. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to termination and redundancy to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

32.5.15 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to termination and redundancy to the HR Director without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.5.16 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to termination and redundancy to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.5.17 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to termination and redundancy to the HR Director without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to termination and redundancy within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

32.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to termination and redundancy within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

32.5.19 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on termination and redundancy and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

32.5.20 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on termination and redundancy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.5.21 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.5.22 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on termination and redundancy. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.5.23 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on termination and redundancy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

32.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to termination and redundancy to the HR Director without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on termination and redundancy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

32.5.25 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.5.26 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on termination and redundancy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to termination and redundancy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

32.5.27 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

32.5.28 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on termination and redundancy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

32.5.29 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on termination and redundancy. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

32.5.30 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on termination and redundancy and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.5.31 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.5.32 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to termination and redundancy to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.5.33 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on termination and redundancy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

32.6.1 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.6.2 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to termination and redundancy and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.6.3 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for termination and redundancy and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall respond to every written query on termination and redundancy within 7 working days of receipt.

32.6.4 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.6.5 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to termination and redundancy. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.6.6 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

32.6.7 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to termination and redundancy and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.6.8 HR shall respond to every written query on termination and redundancy within 30 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.6.9 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with termination and redundancy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

32.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for termination and redundancy and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.6.11 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to termination and redundancy and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

32.6.12 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with termination and redundancy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall respond to every written query on termination and redundancy within 5 working days of receipt.

32.6.13 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for termination and redundancy and shall make them available to all employees.

32.6.15 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with termination and redundancy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. HR shall respond to every written query on termination and redundancy within 10 working days of receipt.

32.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on termination and redundancy within 21 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

32.6.17 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with termination and redundancy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

32.6.18 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for termination and redundancy and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

32.6.19 HR shall respond to every written query on termination and redundancy within 21 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.6.20 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to termination and redundancy. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

32.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on termination and redundancy within 5 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with termination and redundancy in accordance with the Data Protection

Chapter.

32.6.22 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with termination and redundancy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.6.23 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to termination and redundancy. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.6.24 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to termination and redundancy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.6.25 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to termination and redundancy. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with termination and redundancy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

32.6.26 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to termination and redundancy and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with termination and redundancy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

32.6.27 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.6.28 HR shall respond to every written query on termination and redundancy within 5 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

32.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

32.6.30 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for termination and redundancy and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.6.31 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to termination and redundancy. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for termination and redundancy and shall make them available to all employees.

32.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with termination and redundancy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.6.33 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for termination and redundancy and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

32.7 Procedure and Process Steps

32.7.1 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.7.2 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.7.3 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

32.7.4 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 14 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.7.7 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.7.8 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.7.9 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.7.10 The employee shall initiate the process relating to termination and redundancy by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.7.11 The employee shall initiate the process relating to termination and redundancy by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

32.7.12 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

32.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The employee shall initiate the process relating to termination and redundancy by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner.

32.7.15 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.7.16 The employee shall initiate the process relating to termination and redundancy by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.7.17 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.7.18 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.7.19 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.7.20 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 30 working days of receiving it.

32.7.21 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.7.22 The employee shall initiate the process relating to termination and redundancy by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.7.23 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.7.24 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

32.7.25 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

32.7.26 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.7.27 The employee shall initiate the process relating to termination and redundancy by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

32.7.28 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.7.29 The employee shall initiate the process relating to termination and redundancy by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.7.30 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to termination and redundancy by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.7.32 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

32.7.33 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

32.8.1 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.8.2 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

32.8.3 All documents relating to termination and redundancy shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.8.4 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.8.5 Records relating to termination and redundancy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.8.6 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.8.7 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.8.8 All documents relating to termination and redundancy shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Records relating to termination and redundancy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

32.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

32.8.10 Records relating to termination and redundancy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.8.11 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to termination and redundancy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

32.8.12 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

32.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

32.8.15 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. All documents relating to termination and redundancy shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

32.8.17 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.8.18 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to termination and redundancy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.8.19 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.8.20 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.8.21 All documents relating to termination and redundancy shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.8.22 Records relating to termination and redundancy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years.

32.8.23 Records relating to termination and redundancy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

32.8.24 All documents relating to termination and redundancy shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Records relating to termination and redundancy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years.

32.8.25 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.8.26 Records relating to termination and redundancy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.8.27 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.8.28 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to termination and redundancy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

32.8.29 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. All documents relating to termination and redundancy shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

32.8.30 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. All documents relating to termination and redundancy shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

32.8.31 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Records relating to termination and redundancy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

32.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

32.9.1 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.9.2 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.9.3 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.9.4 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

32.9.5 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions to the provisions on termination and redundancy may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

32.9.6 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.9.7 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.9.8 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Exceptions to the provisions on termination and redundancy may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

32.9.9 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.9.10 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

32.9.11 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.9.12 Exceptions to the provisions on termination and redundancy may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.9.13 Exceptions to the provisions on termination and redundancy may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.9.14 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.9.16 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.9.17 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.9.18 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice.

32.9.19 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.9.21 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

32.9.22 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.9.23 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

32.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

32.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on termination and redundancy may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on termination and redundancy may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.9.27 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.9.28 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.9.29 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.9.31 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

32.9.32 Exceptions to the provisions on termination and redundancy may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

32.10.1 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to termination and redundancy. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

32.10.2 Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

32.10.3 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.10.4 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to termination and redundancy. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.10.5 Where an external regulator requests information concerning termination and redundancy, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

32.10.6 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

32.10.7 Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.10.8 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to termination and redundancy. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

32.10.9 Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

32.10.10 An internal audit of termination and redundancy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Compliance data relating to termination and redundancy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

32.10.11 Compliance data relating to termination and redundancy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.10.12 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to termination and redundancy. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An internal audit of termination and redundancy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

32.10.13 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance data relating to termination and redundancy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

32.10.14 An internal audit of termination and redundancy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where an external regulator requests information concerning termination and redundancy, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

32.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

32.10.17 Where an external regulator requests information concerning termination and redundancy, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.10.18 Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.10.19 Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

32.10.20 Compliance data relating to termination and redundancy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.10.21 Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.10.23 An internal audit of termination and redundancy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.10.24 An internal audit of termination and redundancy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.10.25 Compliance data relating to termination and redundancy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

32.10.26 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

32.10.27 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Compliance data relating to termination and redundancy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

32.10.28 Where an external regulator requests information concerning termination and redundancy, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

32.10.29 Compliance data relating to termination and redundancy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

32.10.30 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.10.31 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to termination and redundancy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

32.10.32 Compliance with the provisions on termination and redundancy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.10.33 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

32.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

32.11.1 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.11.2 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to termination and redundancy shall be treated as serious misconduct.

32.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on termination and redundancy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.11.4 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.11.5 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.11.6 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. A failure to comply with the provisions on termination and redundancy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

32.11.7 A failure to comply with the provisions on termination and redundancy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

32.11.8 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on termination and redundancy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

32.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

32.11.12 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to termination and redundancy shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.11.14 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

32.11.15 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to termination and redundancy shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.11.16 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

32.11.17 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.11.18 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.11.19 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to termination and redundancy shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

32.11.20 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

32.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

32.11.22 A failure to comply with the provisions on termination and redundancy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

32.11.23 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

32.11.24 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

32.11.25 A failure to comply with the provisions on termination and redundancy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.11.26 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

32.11.27 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.11.28 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to termination and redundancy shall be treated as serious misconduct. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

32.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

32.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

32.11.31 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to termination and redundancy shall be treated as serious misconduct.

32.11.32 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

32.11.33 A failure to comply with the provisions on termination and redundancy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

32.12 Review and Amendment

32.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.12.2 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

32.12.3 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.12.5 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

32.12.7 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

32.12.8 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

32.12.9 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

32.12.10 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

32.12.12 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

32.12.13 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

32.12.14 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.12.15 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

32.12.16 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

32.12.17 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

32.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.12.19 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.12.20 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

32.12.21 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

32.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.12.23 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on termination and redundancy through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

32.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.12.25 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on termination and redundancy through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

32.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to termination and redundancy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

32.12.29 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

32.12.30 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on termination and redundancy through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to termination and redundancy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

32.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

32.12.32 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on termination and redundancy through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect.

32.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

Chapter 33

Exit and Offboarding

33.1 Purpose and Scope

33.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on exit and offboarding. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

33.1.2 The objective of these provisions on exit and offboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

33.1.3 The objective of these provisions on exit and offboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

33.1.4 The objective of these provisions on exit and offboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company recognises that exit and offboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

33.1.5 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to exit and offboarding and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

33.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.1.7 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to exit and offboarding and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on exit and offboarding.

33.1.8 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

33.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.1.10 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.1.11 The Company recognises that exit and offboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on exit and offboarding. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

33.1.13 The Company recognises that exit and offboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The objective of these provisions on exit and offboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

33.1.14 The objective of these provisions on exit and offboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.1.15 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to exit and offboarding and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

33.1.16 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.1.17 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.1.18 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on exit and offboarding. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

33.1.19 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.1.20 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The Company recognises that exit and offboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

33.1.21 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to exit and offboarding and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.1.23 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.1.24 The Company recognises that exit and offboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The objective of these provisions on exit and offboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

33.1.25 The Company recognises that exit and offboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.1.26 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to exit and offboarding and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.1.27 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Head of

Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.1.28 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

33.1.29 The objective of these provisions on exit and offboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.1.30 The objective of these provisions on exit and offboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.1.31 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to exit and offboarding and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.1.32 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.1.33 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

33.2 Definitions and Interpretation

33.2.1 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

33.2.2 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.2.3 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

33.2.4 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to exit and offboarding. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

33.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to exit and offboarding. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.2.6 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to exit and offboarding. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.2.7 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

33.2.8 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

33.2.9 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to exit and offboarding.

33.2.10 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

33.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to exit and offboarding.

33.2.12 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.2.13 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to exit and offboarding. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

33.2.14 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "exit and offboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

33.2.15 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

33.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

33.2.17 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "exit and offboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

33.2.18 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "exit and offboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

33.2.19 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

33.2.20 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.2.21 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.2.22 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.2.23 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.2.24 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.2.25 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.2.26 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "exit and offboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

33.2.27 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "exit and offboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to exit and offboarding.

33.2.29 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "exit and offboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

33.2.30 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

33.2.31 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

33.2.32 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.2.33 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

33.3 Eligibility and Applicability

33.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on exit and offboarding. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for exit and offboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.3.3 Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.3.4 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on exit and offboarding. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

33.3.5 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

33.3.6 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for exit and offboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

33.3.7 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on exit and offboarding. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

33.3.9 Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.3.10 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

33.3.11 Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.3.12 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

33.3.13 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for exit and offboarding restricted until the matter is concluded.

33.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.3.15 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for exit and offboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.3.16 Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

33.3.17 Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.3.18 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

33.3.19 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.3.20 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.3.21 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for exit and offboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.3.22 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.3.23 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on exit and offboarding.

33.3.24 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for exit and offboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.3.25 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.3.26 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

33.3.27 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.3.28 Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

33.3.29 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for exit and offboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

33.3.30 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

33.3.31 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

33.3.32 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for exit and offboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. Eligibility for exit and offboarding shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

33.4 Responsibilities of Employees

33.4.1 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on exit and offboarding and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

33.4.2 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on exit and offboarding and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

33.4.3 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

33.4.4 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of exit and offboarding as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to exit and offboarding and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.4.7 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with exit and offboarding. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

33.4.8 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with exit and offboarding. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.4.9 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to exit and offboarding and shall not withhold material facts. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on exit and offboarding and shall comply with them at all times.

33.4.10 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.4.11 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on exit and offboarding and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

33.4.12 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.4.13 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with exit and offboarding. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.4.14 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on exit and offboarding and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.4.15 The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.4.16 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to exit and offboarding and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of exit and offboarding as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

33.4.18 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to exit and offboarding and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.4.19 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on exit and offboarding and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.4.20 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.4.21 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.4.22 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.4.23 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.4.24 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.4.25 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

33.4.26 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on exit and offboarding and shall comply with them at all times.

33.4.27 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.4.28 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

33.4.29 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on exit and offboarding and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.4.30 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.4.31 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on exit and offboarding and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with exit and offboarding.

33.4.33 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

33.5.1 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.5.2 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on exit and offboarding and applies them consistently. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

33.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on exit and offboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.5.4 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on exit and offboarding. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on exit and offboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

33.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to exit and offboarding within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.5.7 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to exit and offboarding within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

33.5.8 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on exit and offboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.5.9 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.5.10 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on exit and offboarding. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

33.5.11 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on exit and offboarding and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.5.12 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to exit and offboarding to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.5.13 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to exit and offboarding to the HR Director without undue delay.

33.5.14 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on exit and offboarding. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on exit and offboarding and applies them consistently.

33.5.15 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on exit and offboarding. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on exit and offboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

33.5.17 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to exit and offboarding to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.5.18 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on exit and offboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

33.5.20 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to exit and offboarding within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

33.5.21 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on exit and offboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.5.22 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to exit and offboarding to the Policy Committee without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

33.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on exit and offboarding. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on exit and offboarding. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.5.25 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on exit and offboarding and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.5.26 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

33.5.27 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to exit and offboarding within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.5.28 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on exit and offboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on exit and offboarding and applies them consistently.

33.5.29 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to exit and offboarding to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

33.5.30 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.5.31 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on exit and offboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on exit and offboarding and applies them consistently.

33.5.32 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to exit and offboarding within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

33.5.33 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

33.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

33.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with exit and offboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall respond to every written query on exit and offboarding within 7 working days of receipt.

33.6.2 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with exit and offboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

33.6.3 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with exit and offboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

33.6.5 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to exit and offboarding. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

33.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for exit and offboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

33.6.7 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to exit and offboarding and on the applicable legal requirements.

33.6.8 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for exit and offboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

33.6.9 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for exit and offboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with exit and offboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.6.12 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

33.6.13 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for exit and offboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for exit and offboarding and shall make them available to all employees.

33.6.15 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to exit and offboarding. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on exit and offboarding within 2 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.6.17 HR shall respond to every written query on exit and offboarding within 3 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

33.6.18 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with exit and offboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.6.20 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for exit and offboarding and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to exit and offboarding.

33.6.21 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to exit and offboarding. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

33.6.22 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with exit and offboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.6.23 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.6.24 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to exit and offboarding and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.6.25 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on exit and offboarding within 7 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.6.27 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to exit and offboarding. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.6.28 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with exit and offboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

33.6.29 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for exit and offboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall respond to every written query on exit and offboarding within 10 working days of receipt.

33.6.30 HR shall respond to every written query on exit and offboarding within 30 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.6.31 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to exit and offboarding and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

33.6.32 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for exit and offboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

33.6.33 HR shall respond to every written query on exit and offboarding within 30 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for exit and offboarding and shall make them available to all employees.

33.7 Procedure and Process Steps

33.7.1 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 7 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

33.7.2 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

33.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.7.5 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

33.7.6 The employee shall initiate the process relating to exit and offboarding by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.7.7 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

33.7.8 The employee shall initiate the process relating to exit and offboarding by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

33.7.9 The employee shall initiate the process relating to exit and offboarding by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.7.10 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The employee shall initiate the process relating to exit and offboarding by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department.

33.7.11 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The employee shall initiate the process relating to exit and offboarding by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager.

33.7.12 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 15 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.7.13 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

33.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.7.15 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

33.7.16 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

33.7.17 The employee shall initiate the process relating to exit and offboarding by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

33.7.18 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

33.7.19 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.7.20 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

33.7.22 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to exit and offboarding by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it.

33.7.24 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.7.25 The employee shall initiate the process relating to exit and offboarding by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

33.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

33.7.27 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

33.7.28 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

33.7.30 The employee shall initiate the process relating to exit and offboarding by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager.

33.7.31 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.7.32 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

33.7.33 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

33.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

33.8.1 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

33.8.2 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Records relating to exit and offboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

33.8.3 Records relating to exit and offboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

33.8.4 All documents relating to exit and offboarding shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.8.5 Records relating to exit and offboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

33.8.6 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to exit and offboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to exit and offboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

33.8.8 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.8.9 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.8.11 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.8.12 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to exit and offboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

33.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.8.14 Records relating to exit and offboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.8.15 All documents relating to exit and offboarding shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

33.8.16 All documents relating to exit and offboarding shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.8.17 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Records relating to exit and offboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

33.8.18 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

33.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to exit and offboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

33.8.20 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.8.21 All documents relating to exit and offboarding shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

33.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.8.23 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

33.8.24 All documents relating to exit and offboarding shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.8.25 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.8.26 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

33.8.27 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

33.8.28 All documents relating to exit and offboarding shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.8.29 Records relating to exit and offboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

33.8.30 Records relating to exit and offboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.8.31 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to exit and offboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.8.32 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.8.33 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to exit and offboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

33.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

33.9.1 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.9.2 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on exit and offboarding may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

33.9.3 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

33.9.4 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

33.9.5 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.9.6 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.9.7 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.9.8 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice.

33.9.9 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.9.10 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

33.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

33.9.12 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.9.13 Exceptions to the provisions on exit and offboarding may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.9.14 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

33.9.15 Exceptions to the provisions on exit and offboarding may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.9.16 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.9.17 Exceptions to the provisions on exit and offboarding may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

33.9.18 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Exceptions to the provisions on exit and offboarding may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

33.9.19 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

33.9.20 Exceptions to the provisions on exit and offboarding may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

33.9.21 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.9.22 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

33.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

33.9.24 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.9.25 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

33.9.26 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

33.9.27 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.9.28 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

33.9.29 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

33.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

33.9.31 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

33.9.32 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.9.33 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

33.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

33.10.1 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where an external regulator requests information concerning exit and offboarding, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

33.10.2 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An internal audit of exit and offboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

33.10.3 An internal audit of exit and offboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where an external regulator requests information concerning exit and offboarding, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

33.10.4 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to exit and offboarding. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.10.5 Where an external regulator requests information concerning exit and offboarding, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.10.6 An internal audit of exit and offboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

33.10.7 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

33.10.8 Compliance with the provisions on exit and offboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance data relating to exit and offboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

33.10.9 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.10.10 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to exit and offboarding. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.10.11 An internal audit of exit and offboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Compliance data relating to exit and offboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

33.10.12 Compliance with the provisions on exit and offboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.10.13 An internal audit of exit and offboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Where an external regulator requests information concerning exit and offboarding, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

33.10.14 Compliance with the provisions on exit and offboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.10.15 An internal audit of exit and offboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

33.10.16 An internal audit of exit and offboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.10.17 Compliance with the provisions on exit and offboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.10.18 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

33.10.19 An internal audit of exit and offboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

33.10.20 Compliance data relating to exit and offboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to exit and offboarding. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.10.22 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where an external regulator requests information concerning exit and offboarding, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

33.10.23 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.10.24 Where an external regulator requests information concerning exit and offboarding, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.10.25 Where an external regulator requests information concerning exit and offboarding, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

33.10.26 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.10.27 Compliance data relating to exit and offboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.10.28 An internal audit of exit and offboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

33.10.29 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where an external regulator requests information concerning exit and offboarding, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

33.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on exit and offboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.10.31 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where an external regulator requests information concerning exit and offboarding, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

33.10.32 Compliance data relating to exit and offboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to exit and offboarding.

33.10.33 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to exit and offboarding. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

33.11.1 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

33.11.2 A failure to comply with the provisions on exit and offboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

33.11.3 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to exit and offboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct.

33.11.4 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.11.5 A failure to comply with the provisions on exit and offboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to exit and offboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.11.7 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

33.11.8 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

33.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A failure to comply with the provisions on exit and offboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

33.11.10 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to exit and offboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct.

33.11.11 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.11.12 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.11.14 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.11.15 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to exit and offboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.11.16 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

33.11.17 A failure to comply with the provisions on exit and offboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.11.18 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

33.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.11.20 A failure to comply with the provisions on exit and offboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.11.21 A failure to comply with the provisions on exit and offboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

33.11.22 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to exit and offboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

33.11.23 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. A failure to comply with the provisions on exit and offboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

33.11.24 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to exit and offboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.11.25 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.11.26 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. A failure to comply with the provisions on exit and offboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

33.11.28 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

33.11.30 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.11.31 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to exit and offboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

33.11.32 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to exit and offboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.11.33 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

33.12 Review and Amendment

33.12.1 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on exit and offboarding through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

33.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to exit and offboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

33.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

33.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

33.12.5 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on exit and offboarding through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.12.7 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.12.8 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

33.12.9 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

33.12.10 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

33.12.11 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

33.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.12.13 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

33.12.14 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

33.12.15 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

33.12.16 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

33.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

33.12.18 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

33.12.19 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

33.12.20 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

33.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.12.23 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

33.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

33.12.25 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

33.12.26 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

33.12.27 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

33.12.28 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

33.12.29 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

33.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on exit and offboarding through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

33.12.31 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

33.12.32 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

33.12.33 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

Chapter 34

Retirement and Post-Employment Obligations

34.1 Purpose and Scope

34.1.1 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.1.2 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to retirement and post-employment obligations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

34.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to retirement and post-employment obligations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.1.4 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to retirement and post-employment obligations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

34.1.5 The objective of these provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.1.6 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to retirement and post-employment obligations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

34.1.7 The objective of these provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.1.8 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to retirement and post-employment obligations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

34.1.10 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

34.1.11 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.1.12 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The objective of these provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

34.1.13 The Company recognises that retirement and post-employment obligations has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.1.14 The Company recognises that retirement and post-employment obligations has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.1.15 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to retirement and post-employment obligations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.1.16 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

34.1.17 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.1.18 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.1.19 The objective of these provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.1.20 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.1.21 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.1.22 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.1.23 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.1.24 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to retirement and post-employment obligations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Company recognises that retirement and post-employment obligations has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

34.1.25 The objective of these provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.1.26 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.1.27 The Company recognises that retirement and post-employment obligations has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.1.28 The objective of these provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.1.29 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.1.30 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on retirement and post-employment obligations. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.1.31 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.1.32 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

34.1.33 The objective of these provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

34.2 Definitions and Interpretation

34.2.1 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

34.2.2 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.2.3 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

34.2.4 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.2.5 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.2.6 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.2.7 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.2.8 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.2.9 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.2.10 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

34.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.2.12 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.2.13 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "retirement and post-employment obligations" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

34.2.14 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to retirement and post-employment obligations. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

34.2.15 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.2.16 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "retirement and post-employment obligations" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.2.17 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.2.18 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.2.19 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.2.20 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.2.21 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to retirement and post-employment obligations. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.2.22 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "retirement and post-employment obligations" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.2.23 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.2.24 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person

responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

34.2.25 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.2.26 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.2.27 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.2.28 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

34.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "retirement and post-employment obligations" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.2.31 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to retirement and post-employment obligations. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.2.32 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.3 Eligibility and Applicability

34.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

34.3.2 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.3.3 Eligibility for retirement and post-employment obligations shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.3.5 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for retirement and post-employment obligations restricted until the matter is concluded.

34.3.6 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for retirement and post-employment obligations restricted until the matter is concluded.

34.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.3.8 Eligibility for retirement and post-employment obligations shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

34.3.9 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for retirement and post-employment obligations restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

34.3.10 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

34.3.11 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

34.3.12 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.3.13 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

34.3.14 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.3.15 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for retirement and post-employment obligations restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.3.16 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.3.17 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be

final.

34.3.19 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

34.3.20 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for retirement and post-employment obligations restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.3.21 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for retirement and post-employment obligations restricted until the matter is concluded.

34.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.3.23 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

34.3.25 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

34.3.26 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.3.27 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.3.28 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

34.3.29 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.3.30 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.3.31 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.3.32 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.3.33 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.4 Responsibilities of Employees

34.4.1 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.4.4 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.4.5 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.4.7 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.4.8 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of retirement and post-employment obligations as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and shall not withhold material facts.

34.4.9 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall comply with them at all times.

34.4.10 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and shall not withhold material facts.

34.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of retirement and post-employment obligations as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

34.4.12 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.4.13 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and shall not withhold material facts.

34.4.14 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.4.15 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.4.16 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall comply with them at all times.

34.4.17 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.4.18 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.4.19 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.4.20 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of retirement and post-employment obligations as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

34.4.21 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall comply with them at all times. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.4.22 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

34.4.23 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

34.4.24 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.4.25 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of retirement and post-employment obligations as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

34.4.27 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.4.28 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

34.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of retirement and post-employment obligations as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.4.30 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.4.31 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.4.32 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

34.4.33 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

34.5.1 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

34.5.2 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.5.3 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

34.5.4 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to retirement and post-employment obligations to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.5.5 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.5.6 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to retirement and post-employment obligations to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and applies them consistently.

34.5.7 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.5.8 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.5.9 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to retirement and post-employment obligations to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

34.5.12 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to retirement and post-employment obligations to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to retirement and post-employment obligations to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

34.5.15 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.5.16 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

34.5.17 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to retirement and post-employment obligations to the HR Director without undue delay.

34.5.18 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on retirement and post-employment obligations. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

34.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.5.20 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on retirement and post-employment obligations. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.5.21 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.5.22 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.5.23 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.5.24 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where a decision of a Line Manager

may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

34.5.25 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on retirement and post-employment obligations. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.5.26 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.5.27 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

34.5.28 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.5.29 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

34.5.30 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

34.5.31 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on retirement and post-employment obligations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.5.32 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

34.5.33 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

34.6.1 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees.

34.6.2 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees.

34.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

34.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.6.5 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

34.6.6 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and on the applicable legal requirements. HR shall respond to every written query on retirement and post-employment obligations within 10 working days of receipt.

34.6.9 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.6.10 HR shall respond to every written query on retirement and post-employment obligations within 10 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

34.6.11 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

34.6.12 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.6.13 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.6.15 HR shall respond to every written query on retirement and post-employment obligations within 30 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

34.6.16 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

34.6.17 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.6.18 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

34.6.19 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.6.20 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.6.21 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.6.22 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and on the applicable legal requirements.

34.6.23 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

34.6.24 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.6.25 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to retirement and post-employment obligations. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.6.26 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.6.27 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.6.28 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and on the applicable legal requirements.

34.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.6.30 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to retirement and post-employment obligations and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

34.6.31 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for retirement and post-employment obligations and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with retirement and post-employment obligations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.6.33 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

34.7 Procedure and Process Steps

34.7.1 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.7.6 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.7.7 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The employee shall initiate the process relating to retirement and post-employment obligations by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner.

34.7.8 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 3 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.7.9 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.7.10 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The employee shall initiate the process relating to retirement and post-employment obligations by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner.

34.7.11 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.7.12 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

34.7.13 The employee shall initiate the process relating to retirement and post-employment obligations by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.7.15 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.7.16 The employee shall initiate the process relating to retirement and post-employment obligations by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The employee shall initiate the process relating to retirement and post-employment obligations by submitting a written request to the Line Manager.

34.7.18 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.7.19 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

34.7.20 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

34.7.21 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

34.7.22 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.7.23 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

34.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to retirement and post-employment obligations by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.7.25 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.7.27 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.7.28 The employee shall initiate the process relating to retirement and post-employment obligations by submitting a written request to the Line Manager. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

34.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

34.7.30 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

34.7.31 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.7.32 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

34.7.33 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

34.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

34.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.8.2 Records relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.8.3 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.8.4 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

34.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

34.8.6 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.8.8 Records relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.8.9 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

34.8.10 All documents relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.8.11 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

34.8.12 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

34.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

34.8.14 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

34.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.8.17 Records relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

34.8.18 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.8.19 Records relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

34.8.20 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

34.8.21 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.8.22 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.8.23 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. All documents relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

34.8.25 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

34.8.26 All documents relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

34.8.27 Records relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.8.28 All documents relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.8.29 Records relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

34.8.30 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.8.31 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

34.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to retirement and post-employment obligations that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

34.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

34.9.1 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

34.9.2 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

34.9.3 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

34.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

34.9.6 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.9.7 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.9.8 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.9.9 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

34.9.10 Exceptions to the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.9.11 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.9.12 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.9.13 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

34.9.14 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.9.15 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.9.16 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

34.9.17 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.9.18 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

34.9.19 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

34.9.20 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.9.21 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

34.9.22 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.9.23 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.9.25 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Exceptions to the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

34.9.26 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.9.27 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.9.28 Exceptions to the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.9.30 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.9.31 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

34.9.32 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.9.33 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

34.10.1 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.10.2 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.10.3 Compliance data relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

34.10.4 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.10.5 An internal audit of retirement and post-employment obligations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.10.6 Compliance data relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.10.7 Compliance data relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.10.10 An internal audit of retirement and post-employment obligations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

34.10.11 Compliance with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.10.12 An internal audit of retirement and post-employment obligations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.10.13 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

34.10.14 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.10.15 Compliance with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where an external regulator requests information concerning retirement and post-employment obligations, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

34.10.16 Where an external regulator requests information concerning retirement and post-employment obligations, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.10.17 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.10.18 An internal audit of retirement and post-employment obligations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Compliance with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

34.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.10.20 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.10.21 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where an external regulator requests information concerning retirement and post-employment obligations, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

34.10.22 Where an external regulator requests information concerning retirement and post-employment obligations, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.10.24 Where an external regulator requests information concerning retirement and post-employment obligations, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations.

34.10.25 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning retirement and post-employment obligations, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.10.27 An internal audit of retirement and post-employment obligations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

34.10.28 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. Where an external regulator requests information concerning retirement and post-employment obligations, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

34.10.29 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.10.30 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.10.31 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.10.32 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to retirement and post-employment obligations. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An internal audit of retirement and post-employment obligations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

34.10.33 Compliance data relating to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

34.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.11.2 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.11.4 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

34.11.5 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

34.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.11.7 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

34.11.8 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

34.11.9 A failure to comply with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.11.11 A failure to comply with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.11.12 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.11.13 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. As an illustration, a request relating to retirement and post-employment obligations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

34.11.14 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

34.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

34.11.16 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

34.11.17 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be treated as serious misconduct.

34.11.18 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.11.19 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

34.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

34.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.11.22 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.11.23 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

34.11.24 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.11.25 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.11.26 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

34.11.27 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be treated as serious misconduct. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

34.11.28 A failure to comply with the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

34.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

34.11.30 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

34.11.31 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.11.32 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to retirement and post-employment obligations shall be treated as serious misconduct.

34.11.33 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

34.12 Review and Amendment

34.12.1 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.12.2 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

34.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

34.12.5 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

34.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.12.7 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

34.12.8 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.12.9 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.12.10 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

34.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.12.12 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

34.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

34.12.14 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

34.12.15 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

34.12.16 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

34.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

34.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

34.12.19 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

34.12.20 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

34.12.21 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

34.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

34.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

34.12.24 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.12.25 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

34.12.26 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

34.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

34.12.28 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

34.12.29 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

34.12.30 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

34.12.31 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

34.12.32 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to retirement and post-employment obligations, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

34.12.33 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on retirement and post-employment obligations through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

Chapter 35

Contractors and Temporary Staff

35.1 Purpose and Scope

35.1.1 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to contractors and temporary staff and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

35.1.2 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to contractors and temporary staff and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.1.4 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

35.1.5 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to contractors and temporary staff and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The objective of these provisions on contractors and temporary staff is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

35.1.6 The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

35.1.7 The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.1.8 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

35.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.1.10 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

35.1.11 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

35.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on contractors and temporary staff. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.1.13 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on contractors and temporary staff. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

35.1.14 The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

35.1.15 The objective of these provisions on contractors and temporary staff is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.1.16 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on contractors and temporary staff. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.1.17 The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.1.18 The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.1.19 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on contractors and temporary staff. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.1.20 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to contractors and temporary staff and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.1.21 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.1.23 The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.1.24 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

35.1.25 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to contractors and temporary staff and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.1.26 The objective of these provisions on contractors and temporary staff is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.1.27 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.1.28 The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.1.29 The objective of these provisions on contractors and temporary staff is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

35.1.30 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to contractors and temporary staff and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

35.1.31 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

35.1.32 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to contractors and temporary staff and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on contractors and temporary staff.

35.1.33 The Company recognises that contractors and temporary staff has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on contractors and temporary staff.

35.2 Definitions and Interpretation

35.2.1 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.2.2 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to contractors and temporary staff.

35.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.2.4 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to contractors and temporary staff.

35.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to contractors and temporary staff. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

35.2.6 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to contractors and temporary staff. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

35.2.7 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

35.2.8 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.2.9 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.2.10 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "contractors and temporary staff" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.2.11 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

35.2.13 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to contractors and temporary staff. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

35.2.14 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

35.2.15 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to contractors and temporary staff. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

35.2.16 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

35.2.17 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "contractors and temporary staff" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.2.18 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.2.19 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

35.2.20 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

35.2.21 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to contractors and temporary staff. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.2.22 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "contractors and temporary staff" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.2.23 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.2.24 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to contractors and temporary staff. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.2.25 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

35.2.26 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.2.27 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.2.28 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "contractors and temporary staff" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.2.30 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.2.32 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

35.3 Eligibility and Applicability

35.3.1 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.3.3 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on contractors and temporary staff. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

35.3.4 Eligibility for contractors and temporary staff shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.3.5 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.3.6 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on contractors and temporary staff. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for contractors and temporary staff restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.3.8 Eligibility for contractors and temporary staff shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on contractors and temporary staff.

35.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.3.10 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.3.11 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on contractors and temporary staff. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.3.12 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

35.3.13 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for contractors and temporary staff restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

35.3.15 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.3.16 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.3.17 Eligibility for contractors and temporary staff shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for contractors and temporary staff restricted until the matter is concluded.

35.3.18 Eligibility for contractors and temporary staff shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.3.19 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on contractors and temporary staff.

35.3.20 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

35.3.21 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on contractors and temporary staff.

35.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on contractors and temporary staff. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.3.24 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

35.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

35.3.26 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for contractors and temporary staff restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.3.27 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on contractors and temporary staff.

35.3.28 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Eligibility for contractors and temporary staff shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

35.3.29 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.3.30 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Eligibility for contractors and temporary staff shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

35.3.31 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on contractors and temporary staff. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

35.3.33 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.4 Responsibilities of Employees

35.4.1 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of contractors and temporary staff as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.4.4 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to contractors and temporary staff and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

35.4.5 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

35.4.6 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff and shall comply with them at all times.

35.4.7 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of contractors and temporary staff as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.4.8 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.4.9 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

35.4.10 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to contractors and temporary staff and shall not withhold material facts.

35.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

35.4.12 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to contractors and temporary staff and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.4.14 The staff member shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.4.15 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to contractors and temporary staff and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.4.16 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

35.4.17 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of contractors and temporary staff as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.4.20 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.4.21 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with contractors and temporary staff. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.4.22 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

35.4.23 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to contractors and temporary staff and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.4.24 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

35.4.25 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.4.26 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of contractors and temporary staff as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

35.4.27 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with contractors and temporary staff. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.4.28 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.4.29 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

35.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to contractors and temporary staff and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff and shall comply with them at all times.

35.4.31 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.4.32 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

35.4.33 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

35.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

35.5.1 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to contractors and temporary staff to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.5.2 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on contractors and temporary staff and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on contractors and temporary staff and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

35.5.3 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to contractors and temporary staff to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

35.5.4 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to contractors and temporary staff within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on contractors and temporary staff and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to contractors and temporary staff to the HR Director without undue delay.

35.5.6 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on contractors and temporary staff. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.5.7 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to contractors and temporary staff to the HR Director without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

35.5.8 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to contractors and temporary staff to the HR Director without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

35.5.9 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to contractors and temporary staff within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

35.5.10 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on contractors and temporary staff and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.5.12 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on contractors and temporary staff and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

35.5.13 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.5.14 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on contractors and temporary staff.

35.5.15 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to contractors and temporary staff to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

35.5.16 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to contractors and temporary staff within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.5.17 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on contractors and temporary staff and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to contractors and temporary staff within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to contractors and temporary staff to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

35.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to contractors and temporary staff within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to contractors and temporary staff to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

35.5.22 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on contractors and temporary staff. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to contractors and temporary staff to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

35.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on contractors and temporary staff. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.5.25 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to contractors and temporary staff within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.5.26 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on contractors and temporary staff. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

35.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on contractors and temporary staff. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on contractors and temporary staff. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to contractors and temporary staff within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

35.5.29 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

35.5.30 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to contractors and temporary staff within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.5.31 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on contractors and temporary staff and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.5.32 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.5.33 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on contractors and temporary staff and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

35.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

35.6.1 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

35.6.2 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

35.6.3 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with contractors and temporary staff in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.6.4 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to contractors and temporary staff. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

35.6.5 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

35.6.6 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.6.7 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to contractors and temporary staff. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

35.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to contractors and temporary staff and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.6.9 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to contractors and temporary staff. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall respond to every written query on contractors and temporary staff within 15 working days of receipt.

35.6.10 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

35.6.11 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for contractors and temporary staff and shall make them available to all employees. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to contractors and temporary staff.

35.6.12 HR shall respond to every written query on contractors and temporary staff within 7 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.6.13 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall respond to every written query on contractors and temporary staff within 7 working days of receipt.

35.6.14 HR shall respond to every written query on contractors and temporary staff within 21 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.6.15 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with contractors and temporary staff in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on contractors and temporary staff within 2 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

35.6.17 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to contractors and temporary staff and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.6.18 HR shall respond to every written query on contractors and temporary staff within 21 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.6.20 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to contractors and temporary staff. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

35.6.21 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to contractors and temporary staff and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for contractors and temporary staff and shall make them available to all employees.

35.6.23 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to contractors and temporary staff. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

35.6.24 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to contractors and temporary staff.

35.6.25 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to contractors and temporary staff. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.6.26 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with contractors and temporary staff in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

35.6.27 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to contractors and temporary staff and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

35.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.6.29 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

35.6.30 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to contractors and temporary staff and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.6.31 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

35.6.32 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to contractors and temporary staff. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

35.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

35.7 Procedure and Process Steps

35.7.1 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.7.3 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The employee shall initiate the process relating to contractors and temporary staff by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team.

35.7.5 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

35.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.7.8 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.7.9 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 10 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

35.7.10 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

35.7.11 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

35.7.12 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.7.14 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

35.7.15 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.7.16 The employee shall initiate the process relating to contractors and temporary staff by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.7.17 The employee shall initiate the process relating to contractors and temporary staff by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 21 working days of receiving it.

35.7.18 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.7.19 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.7.20 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

35.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The employee shall initiate the process relating to contractors and temporary staff by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team.

35.7.22 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to contractors and temporary staff by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.7.24 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.7.25 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.7.26 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

35.7.27 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

35.7.28 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.7.30 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.7.31 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.7.32 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.7.33 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

35.8.1 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

35.8.2 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to contractors and temporary staff that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

35.8.3 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.8.4 All documents relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.8.6 Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

35.8.7 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

35.8.8 Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

35.8.9 All documents relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.8.10 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. All documents relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

35.8.11 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to contractors and temporary staff that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.8.12 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

35.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

35.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

35.8.15 Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. All documents relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

35.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

35.8.17 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.8.18 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

35.8.19 Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.8.20 Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to contractors and temporary staff that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

35.8.21 Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

35.8.22 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

35.8.23 Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

35.8.24 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.8.25 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to contractors and temporary staff that is held about them, subject to applicable law. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

35.8.26 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to contractors and temporary staff that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.8.27 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.8.28 All documents relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

35.8.29 Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

35.8.30 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years.

35.8.31 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.8.32 All documents relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

35.8.33 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

35.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

35.9.1 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

35.9.2 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

35.9.3 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

35.9.4 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

35.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

35.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

35.9.7 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

35.9.8 Exceptions to the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

35.9.9 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.9.10 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

35.9.11 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

35.9.12 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

35.9.13 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

35.9.14 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

35.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.9.16 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

35.9.17 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.9.18 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

35.9.19 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.9.20 Exceptions to the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

35.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.9.22 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.9.23 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

35.9.24 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.9.26 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.9.27 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.9.28 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.9.31 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.9.32 Exceptions to the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.9.33 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

35.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

35.10.1 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to contractors and temporary staff. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.10.2 Compliance data relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.10.3 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An internal audit of contractors and temporary staff shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

35.10.4 Where an external regulator requests information concerning contractors and temporary staff, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.10.5 An internal audit of contractors and temporary staff shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Compliance data relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

35.10.6 Where an external regulator requests information concerning contractors and temporary staff, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.10.7 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

35.10.8 Compliance data relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

35.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to contractors and temporary staff. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.10.10 Compliance data relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.10.12 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to contractors and temporary staff. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.10.13 Compliance with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.10.14 Where an external regulator requests information concerning contractors and temporary staff, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.10.15 Compliance with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

35.10.16 Where an external regulator requests information concerning contractors and temporary staff, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

35.10.18 An internal audit of contractors and temporary staff shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where an external regulator requests information concerning contractors and temporary staff, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

35.10.19 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.10.20 Compliance with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to contractors and temporary staff. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

35.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.10.23 An internal audit of contractors and temporary staff shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.10.24 Compliance data relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.10.25 Compliance with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance data relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

35.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning contractors and temporary staff, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to contractors and temporary staff. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.10.28 Compliance data relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.10.29 Compliance with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.10.30 Where an external regulator requests information concerning contractors and temporary staff, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

35.10.31 Compliance data relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An internal audit of contractors and temporary staff shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

35.10.32 Compliance data relating to contractors and temporary staff shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

35.10.33 Compliance with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

35.11.1 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

35.11.4 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to contractors and temporary staff shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

35.11.5 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to contractors and temporary staff shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

35.11.6 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.11.7 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.11.8 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

35.11.9 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

35.11.11 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to contractors and temporary staff shall be treated as serious misconduct.

35.11.12 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

35.11.13 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

35.11.14 A failure to comply with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.11.16 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.11.17 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to contractors and temporary staff shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.11.18 A failure to comply with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.11.19 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to contractors and temporary staff shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.11.20 A failure to comply with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.11.21 A failure to comply with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.11.22 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

35.11.23 A failure to comply with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.11.24 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

35.11.25 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to contractors and temporary staff shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.11.26 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to contractors and temporary staff shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

35.11.27 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

35.11.28 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

35.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.11.30 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.11.31 A failure to comply with the provisions on contractors and temporary staff may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.11.32 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

35.11.33 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

35.12 Review and Amendment

35.12.1 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on contractors and temporary staff through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to contractors and temporary staff made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

35.12.2 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

35.12.3 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.12.4 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on contractors and temporary staff through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

35.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

35.12.6 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

35.12.7 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

35.12.8 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.12.9 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

35.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.12.11 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

35.12.12 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

35.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

35.12.14 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

35.12.15 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.12.16 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

35.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

35.12.18 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

35.12.19 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

35.12.20 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

35.12.21 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

35.12.23 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on contractors and temporary staff through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.12.24 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

35.12.26 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

35.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on contractors and temporary staff through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

35.12.28 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

35.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to contractors and temporary staff, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

35.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

35.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

35.12.32 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

35.12.33 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

Chapter 36

Employee Recognition and Rewards

36.1 Purpose and Scope

36.1.1 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

36.1.2 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.1.3 The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

36.1.4 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

36.1.5 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

36.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards.

36.1.7 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.1.8 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee recognition and rewards and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards.

36.1.9 The Company recognises that employee recognition and rewards has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.1.10 The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

36.1.11 The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.1.12 The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.1.13 The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.1.15 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.1.16 The Company recognises that employee recognition and rewards has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.1.17 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards.

36.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

36.1.19 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee recognition and rewards and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.1.20 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

36.1.21 The Company recognises that employee recognition and rewards has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.1.22 The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.1.23 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company recognises that employee recognition and rewards has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

36.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company recognises that employee recognition and rewards has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

36.1.25 The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

36.1.26 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.1.27 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company recognises that employee recognition and rewards has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

36.1.28 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Company recognises that employee recognition and rewards has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

36.1.29 The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards.

36.1.30 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee recognition and rewards. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

36.1.32 The objective of these provisions on employee recognition and rewards is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.1.33 The Company recognises that employee recognition and rewards has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

36.2 Definitions and Interpretation

36.2.1 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee recognition and rewards. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

36.2.2 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee recognition and rewards. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

36.2.3 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.2.4 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

36.2.5 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee recognition and rewards" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

36.2.7 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee recognition and rewards. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.2.8 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

36.2.9 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.2.10 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.2.11 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee recognition and rewards. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.2.12 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee recognition and rewards" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

36.2.13 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

36.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

36.2.15 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee recognition and rewards.

36.2.16 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.2.17 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.2.18 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee recognition and rewards.

36.2.20 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

36.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

36.2.22 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.2.23 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.2.24 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.2.25 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

36.2.26 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.2.27 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

36.2.28 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee recognition and rewards.

36.2.29 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee recognition and rewards" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.2.32 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

36.2.33 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter

shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

36.3 Eligibility and Applicability

36.3.1 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

36.3.2 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

36.3.3 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

36.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

36.3.5 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

36.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee recognition and rewards. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

36.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee recognition and rewards. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

36.3.9 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.3.10 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Eligibility for employee recognition and rewards shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

36.3.11 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee recognition and rewards. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

36.3.12 Eligibility for employee recognition and rewards shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

36.3.13 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

36.3.14 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee recognition and rewards. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee recognition and rewards restricted until the matter is concluded.

36.3.15 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee recognition and rewards. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.3.16 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee recognition and rewards restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

36.3.17 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee recognition and rewards. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility for employee recognition and rewards shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

36.3.18 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee recognition and rewards restricted until the matter is concluded. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

36.3.19 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.3.20 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee recognition and rewards restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

36.3.21 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee recognition and rewards restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

36.3.22 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee recognition and rewards restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee recognition and rewards. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

36.3.24 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee recognition and rewards restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

36.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

36.3.26 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

36.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

36.3.28 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee recognition and rewards. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.3.30 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Eligibility for employee recognition and rewards shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

36.3.31 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.3.32 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.3.33 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee recognition and rewards. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.4 Responsibilities of Employees

36.4.1 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee recognition and rewards and shall not withhold material facts.

36.4.2 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Head of Department at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.4.3 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee recognition and rewards.

36.4.4 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee recognition and rewards. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.4.5 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee recognition and rewards.

36.4.6 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.4.7 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.4.8 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee recognition and rewards as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee recognition and rewards.

36.4.9 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee recognition and rewards as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

36.4.12 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.4.13 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The staff member shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

36.4.14 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.4.15 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee recognition and rewards.

36.4.16 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.4.17 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee recognition and rewards. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and shall comply with them at all times.

36.4.18 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

36.4.19 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

36.4.20 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.4.21 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee recognition and rewards. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.4.22 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

36.4.23 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

36.4.24 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

36.4.25 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

36.4.26 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee recognition and rewards and shall not withhold material facts.

36.4.27 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and shall comply with them at all times. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

36.4.28 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee recognition and rewards as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and shall comply with them at all times.

36.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee recognition and rewards and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.4.31 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

36.4.32 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.4.33 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

36.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

36.5.1 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee recognition and rewards to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.5.2 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.5.3 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.5.4 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and applies them consistently. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

36.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee recognition and rewards and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

36.5.6 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

36.5.7 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.5.8 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee recognition and rewards and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

36.5.9 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

36.5.10 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

36.5.11 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee recognition and rewards and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee recognition and rewards.

36.5.12 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee recognition and rewards to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.5.13 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

36.5.15 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee recognition and rewards. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee recognition and rewards within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

36.5.16 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee recognition and rewards. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

36.5.17 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

36.5.18 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

36.5.19 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee recognition and rewards. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.5.20 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

36.5.21 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and applies them consistently.

36.5.22 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee recognition and rewards to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.5.23 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

36.5.24 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee recognition and rewards within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

36.5.25 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee recognition and rewards and applies them consistently.

36.5.26 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee recognition and rewards. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

36.5.27 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee recognition and rewards and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

36.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee recognition and rewards to the HR Director without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.5.29 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee recognition and rewards to the Policy Committee without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.5.30 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee recognition and rewards within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.5.31 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee recognition and rewards and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

36.5.32 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee recognition and rewards. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

36.5.33 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee recognition and rewards. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

36.6.1 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee recognition and rewards.

36.6.2 HR shall respond to every written query on employee recognition and rewards within 21 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.6.3 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee recognition and rewards and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

36.6.4 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee recognition and rewards and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.6.5 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.6.6 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee recognition and rewards and on the applicable legal requirements. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR

Business Partner.

36.6.7 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee recognition and rewards in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

36.6.8 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee recognition and rewards and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

36.6.9 HR shall respond to every written query on employee recognition and rewards within 21 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

36.6.10 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee recognition and rewards and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee recognition and rewards.

36.6.11 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee recognition and rewards and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

36.6.12 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall respond to every written query on employee recognition and rewards within 10 working days of receipt.

36.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee recognition and rewards and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.6.14 HR shall respond to every written query on employee recognition and rewards within 21 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.6.15 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee recognition and rewards and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.6.16 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee recognition and rewards and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.6.17 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee recognition and rewards and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.6.18 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee recognition and rewards in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.6.19 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee recognition and rewards. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on employee recognition and rewards within 10 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

36.6.22 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.6.23 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee recognition and rewards and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall respond to every written query on employee recognition and rewards within 10 working days of receipt.

36.6.24 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee recognition and rewards and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.6.25 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee recognition and rewards in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

36.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on employee recognition and rewards within 5 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.6.27 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee recognition and rewards and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.6.28 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee recognition and rewards and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee recognition and rewards in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

36.6.29 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee recognition and rewards. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee recognition and rewards in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

36.6.31 HR shall respond to every written query on employee recognition and rewards within 5 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.6.32 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

36.6.33 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee recognition and rewards. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee recognition and rewards in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

36.7 Procedure and Process Steps

36.7.1 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.7.2 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee recognition and rewards by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

36.7.3 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee recognition and rewards by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner.

36.7.5 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee recognition and rewards by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team.

36.7.6 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

36.7.7 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.7.8 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 7 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

36.7.9 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.7.10 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.7.11 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.7.12 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.7.13 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.7.14 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

36.7.15 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

36.7.16 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.7.17 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee recognition and rewards by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.7.18 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 2 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee recognition and rewards by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager.

36.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee recognition and rewards by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

36.7.20 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.7.21 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee recognition and rewards by submitting the prescribed form to the Line Manager. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

36.7.22 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.7.23 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

36.7.24 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

36.7.25 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.7.26 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 30 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.7.27 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.7.28 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

36.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

36.7.30 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.7.31 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

36.7.32 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

36.7.33 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

36.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

36.8.1 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

36.8.2 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

36.8.3 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee recognition and rewards that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

36.8.4 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee recognition and rewards that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

36.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.8.6 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

36.8.7 Records relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.8.8 All documents relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.8.9 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.8.10 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee recognition and rewards that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.8.12 All documents relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

36.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

36.8.14 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee recognition and rewards that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. All documents relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

36.8.15 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. All documents relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

36.8.16 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

36.8.17 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.8.18 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

36.8.19 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Records relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years.

36.8.20 Records relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. All documents relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

36.8.21 Records relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.8.22 Records relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

36.8.23 All documents relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

36.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee recognition and rewards that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.8.25 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.8.26 All documents relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

36.8.27 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee recognition and rewards that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

36.8.28 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

36.8.29 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

36.8.30 Records relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.8.31 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee recognition and rewards that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.8.32 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

36.8.33 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee recognition and rewards that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

36.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

36.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

36.9.2 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Head of

Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

36.9.3 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

36.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

36.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

36.9.7 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

36.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice.

36.9.9 Exceptions to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

36.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.9.12 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.9.13 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

36.9.14 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

36.9.15 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.9.16 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

36.9.17 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.9.18 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.9.19 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

36.9.20 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

36.9.21 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.9.22 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Exceptions to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

36.9.23 Exceptions to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.9.24 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

36.9.25 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.9.26 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

36.9.27 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.9.28 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.9.29 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.9.30 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.9.31 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

36.9.33 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

36.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

36.10.1 Compliance data relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.10.2 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee recognition and rewards. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.10.3 Compliance data relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.10.4 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.10.5 Compliance with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.10.6 An internal audit of employee recognition and rewards shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.10.7 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee recognition and rewards.

36.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.10.9 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee recognition and rewards, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

36.10.10 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.10.11 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee recognition and rewards, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

36.10.12 Compliance with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee recognition and rewards, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

36.10.13 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

36.10.14 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee recognition and rewards, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

36.10.15 An internal audit of employee recognition and rewards shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.10.16 An internal audit of employee recognition and rewards shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.10.17 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee recognition and rewards. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

36.10.18 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee recognition and rewards, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

36.10.19 An internal audit of employee recognition and rewards shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Compliance data relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

36.10.20 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee recognition and rewards. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Compliance with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

36.10.21 An internal audit of employee recognition and rewards shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee recognition and rewards.

36.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.10.23 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee recognition and rewards.

36.10.24 Compliance data relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.10.25 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

36.10.27 Compliance data relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

36.10.28 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.10.29 Compliance data relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An internal audit of employee recognition and rewards shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

36.10.30 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee recognition and rewards, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

36.10.31 Compliance with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

36.10.32 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee recognition and rewards, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

36.10.33 Compliance data relating to employee recognition and rewards shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

36.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

36.11.1 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

36.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.11.4 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

36.11.5 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

36.11.6 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.11.7 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

36.11.8 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.11.9 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee recognition and rewards shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

36.11.10 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

36.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

36.11.12 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.11.14 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

36.11.16 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

36.11.17 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.11.18 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

36.11.19 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A failure to comply with the provisions on employee recognition and rewards may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

36.11.20 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.11.21 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

36.11.22 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

36.11.23 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

36.11.24 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.11.25 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

36.11.26 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.11.27 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

36.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

36.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.11.30 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.11.31 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee recognition and rewards shall be treated as serious misconduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.11.32 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.11.33 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.12 Review and Amendment

36.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

36.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

36.12.3 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.12.4 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

36.12.5 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.12.6 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.12.7 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

36.12.8 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

36.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.12.10 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

36.12.11 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

36.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.12.14 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

36.12.15 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

36.12.16 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee recognition and rewards, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

36.12.17 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.12.19 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.12.20 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

36.12.21 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

36.12.22 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

36.12.23 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

36.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

36.12.25 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

36.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

36.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee recognition and rewards through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

36.12.28 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.12.29 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

36.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee recognition and rewards made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

36.12.31 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

36.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

36.12.33 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

Chapter 37

Employee Wellbeing

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Wellbeing days	no dedicated wellbeing days

37.1 Purpose and Scope

37.1.1 The objective of these provisions on employee wellbeing is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.1.2 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee wellbeing. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

37.1.3 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

37.1.4 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Company recognises that employee wellbeing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

37.1.5 The objective of these provisions on employee wellbeing is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

37.1.7 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.1.8 The Company recognises that employee wellbeing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.1.9 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee wellbeing.

37.1.10 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.1.11 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company recognises that employee wellbeing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

37.1.12 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

37.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.1.15 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.1.16 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.1.17 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.1.19 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee wellbeing.

37.1.20 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee wellbeing. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

37.1.21 The Company recognises that employee wellbeing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

37.1.22 The Company recognises that employee wellbeing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

37.1.23 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee wellbeing. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

37.1.25 The Company recognises that employee wellbeing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee wellbeing.

37.1.26 The Company recognises that employee wellbeing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

37.1.27 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.1.28 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.1.29 The Company recognises that employee wellbeing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

37.1.30 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

37.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.1.32 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee wellbeing and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.1.33 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee wellbeing and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

37.2 Definitions and Interpretation

37.2.1 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.2.2 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

37.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.2.5 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.2.6 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee wellbeing" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

37.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee wellbeing.

37.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee wellbeing. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee wellbeing" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

37.2.10 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee wellbeing. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.2.11 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.2.12 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee wellbeing" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

37.2.13 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

37.2.15 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.2.16 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.2.17 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.2.18 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.2.19 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.2.20 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

37.2.22 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.2.23 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.2.24 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.2.25 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.2.26 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee wellbeing. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

37.2.27 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee wellbeing. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

37.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.2.29 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

37.2.30 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

37.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

37.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.2.33 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.3 Eligibility and Applicability

37.3.1 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.3.2 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

37.3.3 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.3.4 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

37.3.5 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.3.6 Eligibility for employee wellbeing shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.3.7 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.3.8 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.3.9 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee wellbeing. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

37.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee wellbeing. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

37.3.11 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.3.13 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.3.14 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.3.15 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

37.3.16 Eligibility for employee wellbeing shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

37.3.17 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

37.3.18 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.3.19 Eligibility for employee wellbeing shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee wellbeing.

37.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

37.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee wellbeing.

37.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee wellbeing. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.3.24 Eligibility for employee wellbeing shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.3.25 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee wellbeing restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Eligibility for employee wellbeing shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

37.3.26 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee wellbeing restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Eligibility for employee wellbeing shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

37.3.28 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

37.3.29 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.3.30 Eligibility for employee wellbeing shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

37.3.31 Eligibility for employee wellbeing shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.3.32 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee wellbeing restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.4 Responsibilities of Employees

37.4.1 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.4.2 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee wellbeing and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

37.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.4.4 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.4.5 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.4.6 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee wellbeing. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.4.7 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee wellbeing and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting

Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee wellbeing as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

37.4.8 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.4.9 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

37.4.10 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.4.11 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee wellbeing. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee wellbeing as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

37.4.12 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.4.13 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee wellbeing.

37.4.14 The staff member shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

37.4.15 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee wellbeing. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

37.4.16 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee wellbeing. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

37.4.17 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.4.18 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee wellbeing and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee wellbeing and shall not withhold material facts.

37.4.19 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

37.4.20 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee wellbeing and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee wellbeing as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

37.4.21 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee wellbeing and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.4.22 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

37.4.23 The staff member shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee wellbeing and shall not withhold material facts.

37.4.24 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee wellbeing and shall comply with them at all times.

37.4.25 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

37.4.26 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee wellbeing as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

37.4.27 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

37.4.28 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.4.29 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee wellbeing and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.4.30 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.4.31 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee wellbeing and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.4.32 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee wellbeing as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.4.33 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

37.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

37.5.1 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

37.5.2 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee wellbeing. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

37.5.3 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee wellbeing within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.5.4 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee wellbeing and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee wellbeing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee wellbeing within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.5.7 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee wellbeing. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.5.8 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.5.9 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee wellbeing. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.5.10 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee wellbeing.

37.5.12 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee wellbeing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.5.13 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee wellbeing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee wellbeing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee wellbeing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.5.17 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee wellbeing and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.5.18 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee wellbeing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee wellbeing within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

37.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.5.20 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee wellbeing and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.5.21 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

37.5.22 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee wellbeing to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee wellbeing. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee wellbeing to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

37.5.25 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee wellbeing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee wellbeing and applies them consistently.

37.5.26 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee wellbeing and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.5.27 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee wellbeing within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.5.28 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

37.5.29 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee wellbeing and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.5.30 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee wellbeing and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

37.5.31 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee wellbeing within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

37.5.32 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee wellbeing. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.5.33 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee wellbeing and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

37.6.1 HR shall respond to every written query on employee wellbeing within 2 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.6.2 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.6.3 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee wellbeing and on the applicable legal requirements.

37.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.6.5 HR shall respond to every written query on employee wellbeing within 5 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

37.6.7 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees.

37.6.8 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee wellbeing in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee wellbeing and on the applicable legal requirements.

37.6.9 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee wellbeing. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.6.10 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.6.11 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

37.6.12 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee wellbeing and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.6.13 HR shall respond to every written query on employee wellbeing within 7 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.6.15 HR shall respond to every written query on employee wellbeing within 3 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee wellbeing and on the applicable legal requirements.

37.6.16 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee wellbeing in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

37.6.17 HR shall respond to every written query on employee wellbeing within 10 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee wellbeing and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

37.6.19 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall respond to every written query on employee wellbeing within 30 working days of receipt.

37.6.20 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee wellbeing and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

37.6.21 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.6.22 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee wellbeing.

37.6.23 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.6.24 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.6.25 HR shall respond to every written query on employee wellbeing within 21 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.6.26 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee wellbeing in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

37.6.27 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.6.28 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee wellbeing in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.6.29 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee wellbeing. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee wellbeing in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

37.6.31 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.6.32 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee wellbeing and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

37.7 Procedure and Process Steps

37.7.1 Wellbeing days. The Company provides no dedicated wellbeing days for all confirmed employees.

37.7.2 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.7.3 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee wellbeing by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.7.4 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee wellbeing by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

37.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.7.7 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee wellbeing by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

37.7.8 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.7.9 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.7.10 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.7.11 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

37.7.12 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee wellbeing by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.7.13 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.7.15 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.7.16 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.7.18 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee wellbeing by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee wellbeing by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

37.7.20 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.7.22 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 15 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

37.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee wellbeing by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.7.24 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.7.25 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

37.7.27 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.7.28 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

37.7.30 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 3 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.7.31 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.7.32 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.7.33 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.7.34 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee wellbeing by submitting a written request to the Line Manager. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

37.8.1 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Records relating to employee wellbeing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

37.8.2 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.8.3 Records relating to employee wellbeing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.8.4 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

37.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.8.6 Records relating to employee wellbeing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

37.8.8 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.8.9 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.8.10 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee wellbeing that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

37.8.11 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

37.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.8.13 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

37.8.14 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee wellbeing that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.8.15 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.8.16 All documents relating to employee wellbeing shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.8.17 Records relating to employee wellbeing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.8.18 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee wellbeing that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

37.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

37.8.20 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee wellbeing that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

37.8.21 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

37.8.22 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.8.23 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

37.8.24 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.8.25 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.8.26 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee wellbeing that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

37.8.27 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

37.8.28 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

37.8.29 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.8.30 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

37.8.31 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.8.32 Records relating to employee wellbeing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

37.8.33 Records relating to employee wellbeing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

37.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

37.9.1 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

37.9.2 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.9.3 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

37.9.4 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.9.6 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

37.9.9 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.9.10 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

37.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on employee wellbeing may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

37.9.12 Exceptions to the provisions on employee wellbeing may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.9.13 Exceptions to the provisions on employee wellbeing may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

37.9.14 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.9.15 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.9.16 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.9.17 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.9.18 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.9.19 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.9.21 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.9.22 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

37.9.23 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.9.24 Exceptions to the provisions on employee wellbeing may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

37.9.25 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

37.9.26 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice.

37.9.27 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.9.28 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

37.9.29 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.9.30 Exceptions to the provisions on employee wellbeing may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

37.9.31 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

37.9.33 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

37.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

37.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on employee wellbeing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

37.10.2 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

37.10.3 Compliance data relating to employee wellbeing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.10.4 An internal audit of employee wellbeing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Compliance data relating to employee wellbeing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

37.10.5 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee wellbeing. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

37.10.6 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.10.7 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee wellbeing. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.10.8 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee wellbeing. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

37.10.10 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

37.10.11 Compliance with the provisions on employee wellbeing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.10.12 Compliance data relating to employee wellbeing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.10.13 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

37.10.14 An internal audit of employee wellbeing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

37.10.15 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.10.16 Compliance with the provisions on employee wellbeing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.10.17 An internal audit of employee wellbeing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Compliance data relating to employee wellbeing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

37.10.18 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.10.19 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee wellbeing. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

37.10.20 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

37.10.21 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.10.22 An internal audit of employee wellbeing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.10.23 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.10.24 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Compliance data relating to employee wellbeing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

37.10.25 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee wellbeing.

37.10.26 Compliance data relating to employee wellbeing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An internal audit of employee wellbeing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

37.10.27 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

37.10.28 Compliance with the provisions on employee wellbeing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.10.29 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.10.30 An internal audit of employee wellbeing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.10.31 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.10.32 An internal audit of employee wellbeing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.10.33 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee wellbeing, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

37.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

37.11.1 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee wellbeing shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.11.2 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee wellbeing shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.11.3 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee wellbeing shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A failure to comply with the provisions on employee wellbeing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

37.11.4 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.11.5 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.11.6 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee wellbeing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.11.7 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. A failure to comply with the provisions on employee wellbeing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

37.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.11.9 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee wellbeing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee wellbeing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

37.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.11.12 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.11.13 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

37.11.14 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

37.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

37.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

37.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. A failure to comply with the provisions on employee wellbeing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

37.11.18 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.11.19 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.11.20 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.11.22 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee wellbeing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

37.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

37.11.24 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.11.25 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.11.26 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee wellbeing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

37.11.27 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.11.28 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

37.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.11.30 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.11.31 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

37.11.32 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.11.33 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

37.12 Review and Amendment

37.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.12.2 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.12.3 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.12.5 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.12.6 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.12.7 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

37.12.8 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.12.9 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

37.12.11 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.12.12 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

37.12.13 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.12.14 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

37.12.15 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

37.12.16 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

37.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

37.12.18 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee wellbeing through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

37.12.19 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

37.12.20 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

37.12.21 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

37.12.22 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee wellbeing through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

37.12.23 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

37.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

37.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

37.12.26 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee wellbeing through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.12.27 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

37.12.28 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

37.12.29 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

37.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

37.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

37.12.32 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

37.12.33 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee wellbeing, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

Chapter 38

Conduct at Company Events

38.1 Purpose and Scope

38.1.1 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conduct at company events and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The objective of these provisions on conduct at company events is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

38.1.2 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

38.1.4 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conduct at company events and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.1.5 The Company recognises that conduct at company events has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.1.6 The objective of these provisions on conduct at company events is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conduct at company events and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

38.1.7 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conduct at company events. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

38.1.8 The objective of these provisions on conduct at company events is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

38.1.9 The objective of these provisions on conduct at company events is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

38.1.10 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

38.1.11 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company recognises that conduct at company events has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

38.1.12 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

38.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.1.14 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

38.1.15 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conduct at company events and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

38.1.16 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conduct at company events and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

38.1.17 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conduct at company events and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.1.18 The objective of these provisions on conduct at company events is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The Company recognises that conduct at company events has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

38.1.19 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.1.20 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conduct at company events.

38.1.21 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conduct at company events. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

38.1.22 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.1.23 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The objective of these provisions on conduct at company events is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

38.1.24 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.1.25 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conduct at company events. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.1.26 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.1.27 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.1.28 The Company recognises that conduct at company events has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.1.29 The objective of these provisions on conduct at company events is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.1.30 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conduct at company events. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.1.31 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.1.32 The objective of these provisions on conduct at company events is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.1.33 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conduct at company events and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

38.2 Definitions and Interpretation

38.2.1 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

38.2.2 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

38.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.2.4 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.2.5 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.2.6 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

38.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

38.2.8 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

38.2.9 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

38.2.10 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "conduct at company events" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

38.2.11 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

38.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.2.13 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

38.2.14 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.2.15 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "conduct at company events" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.2.16 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

38.2.17 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.2.18 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

38.2.19 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

38.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "conduct at company events" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

38.2.21 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "conduct at company events" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

38.2.22 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to conduct at company events. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.2.23 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

38.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "conduct at company events" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

38.2.25 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

38.2.26 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.2.27 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to conduct at company events. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

38.2.28 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

38.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.2.30 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.2.31 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to conduct at company events. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

38.2.32 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

38.2.33 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.3 Eligibility and Applicability

38.3.1 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conduct at company events restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.3.2 Eligibility for conduct at company events shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.3.3 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conduct at company events.

38.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Eligibility for conduct at company events shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

38.3.5 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

38.3.6 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.3.7 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.3.8 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

38.3.9 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conduct at company events restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.3.10 Eligibility for conduct at company events shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.3.11 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

38.3.12 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

38.3.13 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.3.14 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.3.15 Eligibility for conduct at company events shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.3.16 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Eligibility for conduct at company events shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

38.3.17 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conduct at company events restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

38.3.18 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conduct at company events restricted until the matter is concluded.

38.3.19 Eligibility for conduct at company events shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

38.3.20 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.3.21 Eligibility for conduct at company events shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.3.22 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conduct at company events.

38.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conduct at company events. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conduct at company events restricted until the matter is concluded.

38.3.24 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conduct at company events restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.3.25 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conduct at company events. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

38.3.26 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.3.27 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.3.28 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

38.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conduct at company events.

38.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conduct at company events restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

38.3.31 Eligibility for conduct at company events shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.3.32 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conduct at company events restricted until the matter is concluded.

38.3.33 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.4 Responsibilities of Employees

38.4.1 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

38.4.2 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conduct at company events and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.4.4 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.4.5 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conduct at company events and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The employee shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

38.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conduct at company events and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.4.7 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.4.8 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.4.9 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.4.10 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conduct at company events. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The staff member shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

38.4.11 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conduct at company events as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.4.12 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conduct at company events as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.4.13 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conduct at company events. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conduct at company events and shall not withhold material facts.

38.4.14 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

38.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.4.16 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conduct at company events. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

38.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conduct at company events as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

38.4.18 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conduct at company events as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conduct at company events as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.4.20 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conduct at company events.

38.4.21 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conduct at company events and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.4.22 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conduct at company events and shall comply with them at all times. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.4.23 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conduct at company events and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conduct at company events.

38.4.24 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conduct at company events as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

38.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conduct at company events and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.4.26 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

38.4.27 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.4.28 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conduct at company events and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conduct at company events as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conduct at company events.

38.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conduct at company events and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.4.31 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conduct at company events.

38.4.32 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conduct at company events and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.4.33 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conduct at company events and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conduct at company events as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

38.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

38.5.1 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

38.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.5.3 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to conduct at company events within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

38.5.4 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

38.5.5 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conduct at company events and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

38.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to conduct at company events within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

38.5.7 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.5.8 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conduct at company events and applies them consistently. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.5.9 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conduct at company events and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conduct at company events to the HR Director without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to conduct at company events within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

38.5.11 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conduct at company events and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.5.12 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conduct at company events and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

38.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.5.14 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on conduct at company events. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conduct at company events and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

38.5.15 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on conduct at company events. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conduct at company events and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conduct at company events and applies them consistently.

38.5.17 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.5.18 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conduct at company events and applies them consistently.

38.5.19 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conduct at company events and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

38.5.20 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on conduct at company events. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

38.5.21 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.5.22 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conduct at company events and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conduct at company events and applies them consistently.

38.5.23 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conduct at company events and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to conduct at company events within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

38.5.24 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conduct at company events and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

38.5.25 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on conduct at company events. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.5.26 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.5.27 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to conduct at company events within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on conduct at company events. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.5.29 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conduct at company events and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

38.5.30 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.5.31 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.5.32 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

38.5.33 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conduct at company events to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

38.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

38.6.1 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for conduct at company events and shall make them available to all employees. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

38.6.2 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conduct at company events in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

38.6.3 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to conduct at company events. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.6.4 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 2 working days of receipt. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.6.5 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to conduct at company events.

38.6.6 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conduct at company events in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

38.6.7 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

38.6.8 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

38.6.9 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 14 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.6.10 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 7 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conduct at company events in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

38.6.12 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 7 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conduct at company events and on the applicable legal requirements.

38.6.14 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 5 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.6.15 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 5 working days of receipt. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to conduct at company events.

38.6.16 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conduct at company events in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

38.6.17 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conduct at company events and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.6.19 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 10 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.6.20 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for conduct at company events and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.6.21 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conduct at company events in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.6.22 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 10 working days of receipt. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

38.6.23 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.6.24 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 3 working days of receipt.

38.6.25 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conduct at company events and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

38.6.26 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

38.6.27 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conduct at company events in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.6.28 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 3 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

38.6.29 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 5 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conduct at company events in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.6.31 HR shall respond to every written query on conduct at company events within 10 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.6.32 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.6.33 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for conduct at company events and shall make them available to all employees. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conduct at company events in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

38.7 Procedure and Process Steps

38.7.1 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

38.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

38.7.3 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

38.7.4 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.7.5 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

38.7.6 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

38.7.8 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

38.7.9 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

38.7.10 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 30 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.7.11 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it.

38.7.12 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.7.14 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager.

38.7.15 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.7.16 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 14 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

38.7.17 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

38.7.18 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.7.20 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

38.7.21 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

38.7.22 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 14 working days of receiving it.

38.7.23 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

38.7.24 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.7.25 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

38.7.27 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 15 working days of receiving it.

38.7.28 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

38.7.29 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.7.30 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting a written request to the Line Manager. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

38.7.32 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.7.33 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conduct at company events by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

38.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

38.8.1 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.8.2 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

38.8.3 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.8.4 Records relating to conduct at company events shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

38.8.5 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.8.6 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

38.8.7 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conduct at company events that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

38.8.8 All documents relating to conduct at company events shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

38.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.8.10 Records relating to conduct at company events shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.8.11 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

38.8.12 All documents relating to conduct at company events shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.8.13 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

38.8.14 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conduct at company events that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.8.15 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conduct at company events that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Records relating to conduct at company events shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years.

38.8.17 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.8.18 Records relating to conduct at company events shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.8.19 Records relating to conduct at company events shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

38.8.20 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.8.21 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

38.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.8.23 All documents relating to conduct at company events shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.8.24 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

38.8.25 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conduct at company events that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

38.8.26 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conduct at company events that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

38.8.27 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.8.28 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.8.29 Records relating to conduct at company events shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.8.30 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.8.31 All documents relating to conduct at company events shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

38.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.8.33 All documents relating to conduct at company events shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

38.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on conduct at company events may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

38.9.2 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

38.9.3 Exceptions to the provisions on conduct at company events may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.9.5 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

38.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.9.8 Exceptions to the provisions on conduct at company events may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.9.9 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

38.9.10 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.9.11 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice.

38.9.12 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.9.13 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

38.9.15 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

38.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice.

38.9.17 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.9.18 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

38.9.19 Exceptions to the provisions on conduct at company events may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

38.9.20 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

38.9.21 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

38.9.22 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.9.23 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

38.9.24 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.9.25 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

38.9.26 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.9.27 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

38.9.28 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

38.9.29 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

38.9.30 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.9.31 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

38.9.32 Exceptions to the provisions on conduct at company events may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

38.9.33 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

38.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on conduct at company events shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

38.10.2 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

38.10.3 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance with the provisions on conduct at company events shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

38.10.4 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

38.10.5 Where an external regulator requests information concerning conduct at company events, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.10.6 Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

38.10.7 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conduct at company events. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.10.8 Compliance with the provisions on conduct at company events shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

38.10.9 Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.10.10 Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.10.11 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conduct at company events. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.10.12 Compliance with the provisions on conduct at company events shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

38.10.13 Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.10.14 Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An internal audit of conduct at company events shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

38.10.16 Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

38.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conduct at company events. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.10.20 An internal audit of conduct at company events shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

38.10.21 Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.10.22 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conduct at company events. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

38.10.23 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

38.10.24 Where an external regulator requests information concerning conduct at company events, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

38.10.25 Where an external regulator requests information concerning conduct at company events, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.10.26 An internal audit of conduct at company events shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.10.27 Compliance with the provisions on conduct at company events shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.10.28 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

38.10.29 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Compliance with the provisions on conduct at company events shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

38.10.30 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.10.31 Compliance data relating to conduct at company events shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.10.32 Compliance with the provisions on conduct at company events shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

38.10.33 Where an external regulator requests information concerning conduct at company events, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

38.11.1 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

38.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

38.11.3 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

38.11.4 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.11.5 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

38.11.6 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

38.11.7 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to conduct at company events shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

38.11.8 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to conduct at company events shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.11.9 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

38.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on conduct at company events may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

38.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.11.12 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

38.11.13 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to conduct at company events shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

38.11.14 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to conduct at company events shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.11.15 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

38.11.16 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

38.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.11.18 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.11.19 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.11.20 A failure to comply with the provisions on conduct at company events may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

38.11.21 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.11.22 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to conduct at company events shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.11.24 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

38.11.25 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

38.11.26 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

38.11.27 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.11.28 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.11.29 A failure to comply with the provisions on conduct at company events may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

38.11.30 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.11.31 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.11.32 A failure to comply with the provisions on conduct at company events may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.11.33 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

38.12 Review and Amendment

38.12.1 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conduct at company events through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

38.12.3 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.12.4 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

38.12.5 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conduct at company events through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

38.12.6 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.12.7 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.12.8 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

38.12.9 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

38.12.10 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

38.12.11 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conduct at company events through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.12.13 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.12.14 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

38.12.15 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conduct at company events through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conduct at company events, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

38.12.16 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conduct at company events through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

38.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

38.12.18 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conduct at company events through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

38.12.19 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

38.12.20 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

38.12.21 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

38.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

38.12.23 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

38.12.24 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

38.12.25 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

38.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

38.12.27 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

38.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

38.12.29 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

38.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

38.12.31 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

38.12.32 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to conduct at company events made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

38.12.33 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

Chapter 39

Remote Work (Exceptional Cases)

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Remote work allowance	up to 2 days per month, with prior written approval

39.1 Purpose and Scope

39.1.1 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

39.1.2 The Company recognises that remote work (exceptional cases) has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.1.3 The objective of these provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

39.1.4 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

39.1.5 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to remote work (exceptional cases) and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on remote work (exceptional cases).

39.1.6 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.1.7 The Company recognises that remote work (exceptional cases) has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to remote work (exceptional cases) and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

39.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on remote work (exceptional cases). This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company recognises that remote work (exceptional cases) has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

39.1.9 The Company recognises that remote work (exceptional cases) has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.1.10 The Company recognises that remote work (exceptional cases) has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.1.11 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.1.12 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to remote work (exceptional cases) and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

39.1.14 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to remote work (exceptional cases) and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.1.15 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

39.1.16 The Company recognises that remote work (exceptional cases) has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

39.1.17 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to remote work (exceptional cases) and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

39.1.18 The Company recognises that remote work (exceptional cases) has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

39.1.19 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on remote work (exceptional cases). The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The objective of these provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

39.1.20 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

39.1.21 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to remote work (exceptional cases) and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.1.23 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need

and the order in which the requests were received.

39.1.24 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to remote work (exceptional cases) and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.1.25 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

39.1.26 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on remote work (exceptional cases). This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.1.27 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to remote work (exceptional cases) and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

39.1.28 The objective of these provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

39.1.29 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to remote work (exceptional cases) and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

39.1.30 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

39.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

39.1.32 The Company recognises that remote work (exceptional cases) has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

39.1.33 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.2 Definitions and Interpretation

39.2.1 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.2.2 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

39.2.3 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.2.4 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

39.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to remote work (exceptional cases). The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.2.6 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to remote work (exceptional cases). No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

39.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.2.8 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

39.2.9 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.2.10 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

39.2.11 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

39.2.12 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to remote work (exceptional cases). No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.2.13 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.2.15 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

39.2.16 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

39.2.17 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.2.18 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

39.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.2.20 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

39.2.21 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.2.22 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.2.23 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "remote work (exceptional cases)" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "remote work (exceptional cases)" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

39.2.25 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "remote work (exceptional cases)" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

39.2.26 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.2.27 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.2.28 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

39.2.29 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.2.30 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.2.32 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "remote work (exceptional cases)" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.2.33 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

39.3 Eligibility and Applicability

39.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

39.3.2 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases).

39.3.3 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) restricted until the matter is concluded.

39.3.4 Eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

39.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

39.3.6 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.3.7 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

39.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases). Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

39.3.9 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.3.10 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

39.3.11 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

39.3.12 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.3.13 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.3.14 Eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

39.3.15 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.3.16 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases).

39.3.17 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases). Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.3.18 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

39.3.19 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.3.20 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) restricted until the matter is concluded.

39.3.21 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) restricted until the matter is concluded.

39.3.22 Eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) restricted until the matter is concluded.

39.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases).

39.3.24 Eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

39.3.25 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) restricted until the matter is concluded. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.3.26 Eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.3.27 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.3.28 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases). The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.3.29 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) restricted until the matter is concluded.

39.3.30 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.3.31 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.3.32 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

39.3.33 Eligibility for remote work (exceptional cases) shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

39.4 Responsibilities of Employees

39.4.1 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.4.2 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times.

39.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

39.4.4 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.4.5 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

39.4.6 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

39.4.7 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

39.4.8 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.4.9 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with remote work (exceptional cases). The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

39.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of remote work (exceptional cases) as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

39.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.4.12 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.4.13 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times.

39.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of remote work (exceptional cases) as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.4.15 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.4.16 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.4.17 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

39.4.18 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

39.4.19 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.4.20 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

39.4.21 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with remote work (exceptional cases).

39.4.22 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.4.23 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.4.24 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times.

39.4.25 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with remote work (exceptional cases).

39.4.26 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.4.27 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

39.4.28 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of remote work (exceptional cases) as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

39.4.29 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.4.30 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with remote work (exceptional cases). The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with remote work (exceptional cases). As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall comply with them at all times.

39.4.32 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.4.33 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of remote work (exceptional cases) as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

39.5.1 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

39.5.2 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.5.3 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to remote work (exceptional cases) to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

39.5.4 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

39.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.5.6 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

39.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

39.5.8 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.5.9 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.5.10 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to remote work (exceptional cases) to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

39.5.11 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

39.5.12 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and applies them consistently.

39.5.13 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

39.5.15 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on remote work (exceptional cases). No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

39.5.16 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to remote work (exceptional cases) to the Policy Committee without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.5.17 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.5.18 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

39.5.19 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on remote work (exceptional cases). This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.5.21 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

39.5.22 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

39.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on remote work (exceptional cases). No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.5.25 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

39.5.26 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

39.5.27 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on remote work (exceptional cases) and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.5.28 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

39.5.29 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to remote work (exceptional cases) to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

39.5.30 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

39.5.31 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to remote work (exceptional cases) to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.5.32 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on remote work (exceptional cases). No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

39.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

39.6.1 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with remote work (exceptional cases) in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

39.6.2 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with remote work (exceptional cases) in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.6.3 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

39.6.4 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.6.5 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

39.6.6 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.6.7 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for remote work (exceptional cases) and shall make them available to all employees.

39.6.8 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases).

39.6.9 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.6.10 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases). The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.6.11 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases). Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and on the applicable legal requirements.

39.6.12 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and on the applicable legal requirements.

39.6.13 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases). As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.6.14 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with remote work (exceptional cases) in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

39.6.15 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with remote work (exceptional cases) in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

39.6.16 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases). The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases). For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.6.19 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for remote work (exceptional cases) and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

39.6.21 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.6.23 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

39.6.24 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.6.25 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and on the applicable legal requirements.

39.6.26 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases).

39.6.27 HR shall respond to every written query on remote work (exceptional cases) within 5 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for remote work (exceptional cases) and shall make them available to all employees.

39.6.28 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to remote work (exceptional cases) and on the applicable legal requirements. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

39.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with remote work (exceptional cases) in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

39.6.31 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

39.6.32 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for remote work (exceptional cases) and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.6.33 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to remote work (exceptional cases). Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.7 Procedure and Process Steps

39.7.1 Remote work allowance. Eligible employees may work remotely for up to 2 days per month, with prior written approval.

39.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

39.7.3 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 30 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

39.7.4 The employee shall initiate the process relating to remote work (exceptional cases) by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

39.7.5 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.7.6 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

39.7.7 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

39.7.8 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

39.7.9 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

39.7.10 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

39.7.11 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.7.12 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

39.7.13 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.7.14 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

39.7.15 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.7.16 The employee shall initiate the process relating to remote work (exceptional cases) by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

39.7.17 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 14 working days of receiving it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

39.7.18 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.7.19 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

39.7.20 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.7.21 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.7.22 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to remote work (exceptional cases) by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to remote work (exceptional cases) by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it.

39.7.26 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 21 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.7.27 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

39.7.28 The employee shall initiate the process relating to remote work (exceptional cases) by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

39.7.29 The employee shall initiate the process relating to remote work (exceptional cases) by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager.

39.7.30 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to remote work (exceptional cases) by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

39.7.32 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

39.7.33 The employee shall initiate the process relating to remote work (exceptional cases) by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.7.34 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

39.8.1 Records relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

39.8.2 All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.8.3 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

39.8.4 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.8.5 All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.8.6 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

39.8.7 Records relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

39.8.8 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.8.9 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

39.8.10 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Records relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

39.8.11 Records relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.8.12 All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to remote work (exceptional cases) that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

39.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to remote work (exceptional cases) that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

39.8.15 All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

39.8.16 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

39.8.17 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

39.8.18 All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

39.8.19 All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.8.20 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

39.8.21 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to remote work (exceptional cases) that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.8.22 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.8.23 All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

39.8.24 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.8.25 All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

39.8.26 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

39.8.27 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

39.8.28 Records relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.8.29 Records relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to remote work (exceptional cases) that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

39.8.30 Records relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to remote work (exceptional cases) that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

39.8.31 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Records relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

39.8.32 All documents relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.8.33 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

39.9.1 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.9.2 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.9.3 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

39.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

39.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

39.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

39.9.7 Exceptions to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

39.9.9 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.9.10 Exceptions to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice.

39.9.12 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.9.13 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

39.9.14 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Exceptions to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

39.9.17 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

39.9.18 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

39.9.19 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

39.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Exceptions to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

39.9.21 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.9.22 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

39.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.9.24 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

39.9.25 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.9.26 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.9.27 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.9.28 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

39.9.29 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.9.30 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

39.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.9.32 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.9.33 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

39.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

39.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An internal audit of remote work (exceptional cases) shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

39.10.2 Compliance with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.10.3 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

39.10.4 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to remote work (exceptional cases).

39.10.5 Compliance data relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

39.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to remote work (exceptional cases). This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.10.7 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.10.8 An internal audit of remote work (exceptional cases) shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.10.9 Where an external regulator requests information concerning remote work (exceptional cases), the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.10.10 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.10.11 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to remote work (exceptional cases). This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

39.10.12 Compliance data relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.10.13 Compliance data relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.10.14 Compliance with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

39.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.10.16 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to remote work (exceptional cases). Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

39.10.17 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to remote work (exceptional cases). The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

39.10.18 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

39.10.19 An internal audit of remote work (exceptional cases) shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.10.20 Compliance data relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.10.21 Compliance with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.10.22 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.10.23 Where an external regulator requests information concerning remote work (exceptional cases), the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

39.10.24 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.10.25 Where an external regulator requests information concerning remote work (exceptional cases), the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.10.27 An internal audit of remote work (exceptional cases) shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Compliance with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

39.10.28 An internal audit of remote work (exceptional cases) shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.10.29 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Compliance with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

39.10.30 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

39.10.31 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to remote work (exceptional cases). This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

39.10.32 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.10.33 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Compliance data relating to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

39.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

39.11.1 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.11.2 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.11.3 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

39.11.4 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

39.11.5 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

39.11.6 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

39.11.7 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

39.11.8 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.11.9 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct.

39.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

39.11.12 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

39.11.13 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

39.11.14 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct.

39.11.15 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct.

39.11.16 A failure to comply with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.11.17 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.11.18 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

39.11.19 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.11.20 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.11.21 A failure to comply with the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

39.11.22 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.11.23 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

39.11.24 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

39.11.25 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.11.26 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

39.11.27 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

39.11.28 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

39.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.11.31 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.11.32 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to remote work (exceptional cases) shall be treated as serious misconduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

39.11.33 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.12 Review and Amendment

39.12.1 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect.

39.12.2 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

39.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

39.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

39.12.5 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

39.12.6 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

39.12.7 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

39.12.8 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.12.9 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

39.12.10 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

39.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.12.12 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.12.14 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.12.15 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

39.12.16 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

39.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.12.18 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

39.12.19 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

39.12.20 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

39.12.21 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

39.12.22 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

39.12.23 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on remote work (exceptional cases) through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

39.12.24 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

39.12.25 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

39.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

39.12.27 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

39.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

39.12.29 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

39.12.30 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to remote work (exceptional cases), the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

39.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. As an illustration, a request relating to remote work (exceptional cases) made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

39.12.33 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

Chapter 40

Biometric Attendance System

40.1 Purpose and Scope

40.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on biometric attendance system. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The objective of these provisions on biometric attendance system is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

40.1.2 The Company recognises that biometric attendance system has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

40.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.1.4 The objective of these provisions on biometric attendance system is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.1.5 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to biometric attendance system and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

40.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

40.1.7 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.1.8 The Company recognises that biometric attendance system has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.1.9 The Company recognises that biometric attendance system has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.1.10 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.1.11 The Company recognises that biometric attendance system has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to biometric attendance system and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

40.1.12 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

40.1.13 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on biometric attendance system. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

40.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.1.15 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.1.16 The Company recognises that biometric attendance system has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.1.17 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.1.18 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on biometric attendance system. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.1.19 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

40.1.20 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.1.21 The Company recognises that biometric attendance system has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.1.23 The objective of these provisions on biometric attendance system is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.1.24 The Company recognises that biometric attendance system has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to biometric attendance system and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

40.1.25 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.1.26 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on biometric attendance system.

40.1.27 The objective of these provisions on biometric attendance system is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.1.28 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.1.29 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.1.30 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on biometric attendance system. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.1.31 The Company recognises that biometric attendance system has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.1.32 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on biometric attendance system. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The objective of these provisions on biometric attendance system is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

40.1.33 The objective of these provisions on biometric attendance system is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.2 Definitions and Interpretation

40.2.1 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.2.2 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.2.3 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

40.2.4 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "biometric attendance system" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.2.5 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to biometric attendance system.

40.2.6 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

40.2.8 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.2.9 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

40.2.10 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.2.12 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.2.13 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "biometric attendance system" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.2.14 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to biometric attendance system.

40.2.15 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "biometric attendance system" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

40.2.17 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to biometric attendance system.

40.2.18 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.2.19 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

40.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "biometric attendance system" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

40.2.21 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.2.22 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.2.23 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

40.2.24 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to biometric attendance system. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

40.2.25 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "biometric attendance system" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

40.2.26 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "biometric attendance system" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.2.27 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

40.2.28 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to biometric attendance system.

40.2.29 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to biometric attendance system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

40.2.30 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.2.31 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

40.2.32 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "biometric attendance system" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

40.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "biometric attendance system" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

40.3 Eligibility and Applicability

40.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

40.3.2 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on biometric attendance system. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.3.3 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

40.3.4 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on biometric attendance system. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.3.6 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.3.7 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.3.8 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

40.3.9 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on biometric attendance system. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.3.11 Eligibility for biometric attendance system shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.3.12 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for biometric attendance system restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on biometric attendance system.

40.3.13 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on biometric attendance system. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.3.15 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.3.16 Eligibility for biometric attendance system shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

40.3.17 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

40.3.18 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

40.3.19 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for biometric attendance system restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility for biometric attendance system shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

40.3.20 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on biometric attendance system.

40.3.21 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

40.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

40.3.23 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

40.3.24 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on biometric attendance system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.3.25 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for biometric attendance system restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.3.26 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for biometric attendance system restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.3.27 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.3.28 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

40.3.29 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for biometric attendance system restricted until the matter is concluded. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

40.3.30 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for biometric attendance system restricted until the matter is concluded.

40.3.31 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on biometric attendance system. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.3.32 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.3.33 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on biometric attendance system. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

40.4 Responsibilities of Employees

40.4.1 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

40.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on biometric attendance system and shall comply with them at all times. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

40.4.4 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.4.5 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to biometric attendance system and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

40.4.6 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.4.7 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.4.8 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with biometric attendance system. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

40.4.9 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to biometric attendance system and shall not withhold material facts.

40.4.10 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on biometric attendance system and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.4.11 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.4.12 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of biometric attendance system as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

40.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to biometric attendance system and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on biometric attendance system and shall comply with them at all times.

40.4.14 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.4.15 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of biometric attendance system as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of biometric attendance system as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.4.18 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with biometric attendance system. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.4.19 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on biometric attendance system and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

40.4.20 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on biometric attendance system and shall comply with them at all times. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

40.4.21 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.4.22 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to biometric attendance system and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.4.23 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to biometric attendance system and shall not withhold material facts.

40.4.24 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.4.25 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.4.26 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on biometric attendance system and shall comply with them at all times.

40.4.27 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of biometric attendance system as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

40.4.28 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with biometric attendance system. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.4.29 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on biometric attendance system and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.4.30 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of biometric attendance system as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

40.4.31 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to biometric attendance system and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

40.4.32 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of biometric attendance system as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

40.4.33 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of biometric attendance system as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

40.5.1 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to biometric attendance system to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system.

40.5.2 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on biometric attendance system and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on biometric attendance system and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

40.5.3 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.5.4 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on biometric attendance system and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to biometric attendance system within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.5.7 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to biometric attendance system to the Policy Committee without undue delay. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system.

40.5.8 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to biometric attendance system to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.5.9 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on biometric attendance system and applies them consistently. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system.

40.5.10 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to biometric attendance system within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to biometric attendance system to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

40.5.11 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to biometric attendance system to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

40.5.12 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to biometric attendance system to the HR Director without undue delay.

40.5.13 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to biometric attendance system within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.5.15 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

40.5.16 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to biometric attendance system within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.5.17 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.5.18 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.5.19 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system.

40.5.20 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on biometric attendance system and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

40.5.21 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

40.5.22 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

40.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to biometric attendance system within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

40.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to biometric attendance system to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

40.5.25 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on biometric attendance system and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

40.5.26 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on biometric attendance system and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

40.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on biometric attendance system. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.5.30 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

40.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.5.32 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on biometric attendance system and applies them consistently.

40.5.33 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

40.6.1 HR shall respond to every written query on biometric attendance system within 14 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.6.2 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.6.4 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

40.6.5 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with biometric attendance system in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

40.6.6 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall respond to every written query on biometric attendance system within 5 working days of receipt.

40.6.7 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to biometric attendance system.

40.6.8 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.6.9 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements.

40.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for biometric attendance system and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to biometric attendance system.

40.6.11 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for biometric attendance system and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall respond to every written query on biometric attendance system within 5 working days of receipt.

40.6.12 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to biometric attendance system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.6.14 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

40.6.15 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for biometric attendance system and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

40.6.16 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to biometric attendance system. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. HR shall respond to every written query on biometric attendance system within 15 working days of receipt.

40.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to biometric attendance system. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

40.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to biometric attendance system. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

40.6.19 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.6.20 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with biometric attendance system in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.6.21 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with biometric attendance system in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

40.6.22 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

40.6.23 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to biometric attendance system. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements.

40.6.24 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for biometric attendance system and shall make them available to all employees.

40.6.25 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for biometric attendance system and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements.

40.6.26 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.6.27 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for biometric attendance system and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.6.28 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.6.29 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

40.6.30 HR shall respond to every written query on biometric attendance system within 10 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

40.6.31 HR shall respond to every written query on biometric attendance system within 5 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to biometric attendance system and on the applicable legal requirements.

40.6.32 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for biometric attendance system and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.6.33 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with biometric attendance system in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.7 Procedure and Process Steps

40.7.1 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.7.3 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

40.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

40.7.5 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.7.6 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 10 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.7.7 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.7.8 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.7.9 The employee shall initiate the process relating to biometric attendance system by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

40.7.10 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.7.11 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.7.12 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.7.13 The employee shall initiate the process relating to biometric attendance system by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.7.14 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

40.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 30 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.7.16 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

40.7.17 The employee shall initiate the process relating to biometric attendance system by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

40.7.18 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

40.7.19 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

40.7.20 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

40.7.21 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

40.7.23 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.7.24 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 15 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.7.25 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.7.26 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 7 working days of receiving it.

40.7.27 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

40.7.28 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it.

40.7.29 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.7.30 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 14 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.7.31 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

40.7.32 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.7.33 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

40.8.1 All documents relating to biometric attendance system shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

40.8.2 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.8.3 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

40.8.4 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

40.8.5 Records relating to biometric attendance system shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

40.8.6 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.8.8 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

40.8.9 Records relating to biometric attendance system shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.8.10 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

40.8.11 Records relating to biometric attendance system shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.8.12 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

40.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.8.14 All documents relating to biometric attendance system shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

40.8.15 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.8.16 All documents relating to biometric attendance system shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

40.8.17 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.8.18 All documents relating to biometric attendance system shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

40.8.19 Records relating to biometric attendance system shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

40.8.20 Records relating to biometric attendance system shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

40.8.21 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

40.8.22 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.8.23 Records relating to biometric attendance system shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

40.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Records relating to biometric attendance system shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

40.8.25 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

40.8.26 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.8.27 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.8.28 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.8.29 All documents relating to biometric attendance system shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

40.8.30 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to biometric attendance system that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.8.32 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.8.33 Records relating to biometric attendance system shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

40.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

40.9.1 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.9.2 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

40.9.3 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.9.4 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice.

40.9.6 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

40.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Exceptions to the provisions on biometric attendance system may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

40.9.8 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

40.9.9 Exceptions to the provisions on biometric attendance system may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

40.9.11 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.9.12 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.9.13 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

40.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

40.9.15 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

40.9.16 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.9.17 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.9.18 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.9.19 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.9.20 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.9.21 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

40.9.22 Exceptions to the provisions on biometric attendance system may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

40.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

40.9.25 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

40.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on biometric attendance system may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

40.9.27 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.9.28 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

40.9.29 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice.

40.9.30 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

40.9.31 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

40.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

40.9.33 Exceptions to the provisions on biometric attendance system may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

40.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

40.10.1 Compliance data relating to biometric attendance system shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.10.2 Compliance data relating to biometric attendance system shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

40.10.3 Compliance with the provisions on biometric attendance system shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

40.10.4 Compliance data relating to biometric attendance system shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

40.10.5 Where an external regulator requests information concerning biometric attendance system, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.10.6 Where an external regulator requests information concerning biometric attendance system, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system.

40.10.7 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Compliance with the provisions on biometric attendance system shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

40.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.10.9 An internal audit of biometric attendance system shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

40.10.10 Compliance with the provisions on biometric attendance system shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.10.11 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.10.12 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.10.13 Where an external regulator requests information concerning biometric attendance system, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

40.10.14 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system.

40.10.15 Compliance data relating to biometric attendance system shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

40.10.16 An internal audit of biometric attendance system shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.10.17 Compliance data relating to biometric attendance system shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.10.18 Compliance with the provisions on biometric attendance system shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.10.19 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

40.10.20 Compliance data relating to biometric attendance system shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on biometric attendance system shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

40.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.10.24 An internal audit of biometric attendance system shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Compliance data relating to biometric attendance system shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

40.10.25 Compliance with the provisions on biometric attendance system shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Compliance data relating to biometric attendance system shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

40.10.26 Compliance with the provisions on biometric attendance system shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.10.28 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.10.29 An internal audit of biometric attendance system shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where an external regulator requests information concerning biometric attendance system, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

40.10.30 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Compliance with the provisions on biometric attendance system shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

40.10.31 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An internal audit of biometric attendance system shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

40.10.32 An internal audit of biometric attendance system shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to biometric attendance system.

40.10.33 Where an external regulator requests information concerning biometric attendance system, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Compliance data relating to biometric attendance system shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

40.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

40.11.1 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A failure to comply with the provisions on biometric attendance system may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

40.11.2 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

40.11.3 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

40.11.4 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.11.5 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

40.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to biometric attendance system shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.11.7 A failure to comply with the provisions on biometric attendance system may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

40.11.8 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

40.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A failure to comply with the provisions on biometric attendance system may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

40.11.10 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to biometric attendance system shall be treated as serious misconduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

40.11.11 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to biometric attendance system shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.11.12 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to biometric attendance system shall be treated as serious misconduct.

40.11.14 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.11.15 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

40.11.16 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to biometric attendance system shall be treated as serious misconduct. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

40.11.18 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on biometric attendance system may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.11.20 A failure to comply with the provisions on biometric attendance system may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

40.11.21 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.11.22 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

40.11.23 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

40.11.24 A failure to comply with the provisions on biometric attendance system may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

40.11.25 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

40.11.26 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

40.11.28 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to biometric attendance system shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.11.29 A failure to comply with the provisions on biometric attendance system may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

40.11.30 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.11.31 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to biometric attendance system shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.11.32 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

40.11.33 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to biometric attendance system shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

40.12 Review and Amendment

40.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.12.2 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.12.3 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to biometric attendance system made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

40.12.5 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.12.6 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

40.12.7 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

40.12.8 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

40.12.9 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

40.12.10 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

40.12.11 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

40.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

40.12.13 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.12.14 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

40.12.15 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

40.12.16 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

40.12.17 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

40.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

40.12.19 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

40.12.20 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

40.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

40.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

40.12.23 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

40.12.24 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

40.12.26 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

40.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

40.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

40.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

40.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

40.12.31 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

40.12.32 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

40.12.33 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on biometric attendance system through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to biometric attendance system, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

Chapter 41

Company Housing Scheme

41.1 Purpose and Scope

41.1.1 The objective of these provisions on company housing scheme is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.1.2 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company housing scheme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

41.1.3 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

41.1.4 The Company recognises that company housing scheme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

41.1.5 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

41.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

41.1.7 The Company recognises that company housing scheme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on company housing scheme. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

41.1.9 The objective of these provisions on company housing scheme is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

41.1.10 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company housing scheme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.1.11 The Company recognises that company housing scheme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.1.12 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company recognises that company housing scheme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

41.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.1.15 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The objective of these provisions on company housing scheme is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

41.1.16 The Company recognises that company housing scheme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.1.17 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.1.19 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company recognises that company housing scheme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

41.1.20 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.1.21 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on company housing scheme.

41.1.22 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

41.1.23 The Company recognises that company housing scheme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.1.24 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.1.25 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

41.1.26 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company housing scheme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

41.1.27 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.1.28 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company housing scheme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

41.1.29 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.1.30 The objective of these provisions on company housing scheme is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.1.32 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

41.1.33 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

41.2 Definitions and Interpretation

41.2.1 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.2.2 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.2.3 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company housing scheme. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.2.4 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.2.5 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company housing scheme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

41.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.2.8 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

41.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company housing scheme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.2.10 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company housing scheme.

41.2.11 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company housing scheme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.2.12 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company housing scheme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

41.2.13 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company housing scheme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.2.14 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company housing scheme. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.2.15 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

41.2.16 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company housing scheme. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

41.2.17 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company housing scheme. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

41.2.18 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company housing scheme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

41.2.19 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.2.20 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

41.2.21 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.2.22 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy

Committee.

41.2.23 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company housing scheme.

41.2.24 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.2.25 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company housing scheme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

41.2.26 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.2.27 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

41.2.28 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company housing scheme. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company housing scheme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

41.2.31 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

41.2.32 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.2.33 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

41.3 Eligibility and Applicability

41.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

41.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.3.3 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

41.3.4 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company housing scheme restricted until the matter is concluded. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Eligibility for company housing scheme shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

41.3.5 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company housing scheme restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.3.6 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.3.7 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

41.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company housing scheme. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.3.9 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company housing scheme. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

41.3.10 Eligibility for company housing scheme shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.3.11 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

41.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.3.13 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.3.14 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company housing scheme. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.3.15 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.3.16 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company housing scheme restricted until the matter is concluded. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

41.3.17 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.3.18 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company housing scheme.

41.3.19 Eligibility for company housing scheme shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.3.20 Eligibility for company housing scheme shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company housing scheme restricted until the matter is concluded.

41.3.21 Eligibility for company housing scheme shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

41.3.22 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company housing scheme. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.3.23 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company housing scheme restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.3.24 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.3.25 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.3.26 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

41.3.27 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company housing scheme. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.3.28 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

41.3.29 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

41.3.30 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

41.3.31 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.3.32 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

41.3.33 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.4 Responsibilities of Employees

41.4.1 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts.

41.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.4.3 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

41.4.4 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company housing scheme and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company housing scheme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.4.7 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company housing scheme and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

41.4.8 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company housing scheme and shall comply with them at all times.

41.4.9 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.4.10 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. The staff member shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

41.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

41.4.12 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company housing scheme. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company housing scheme and shall comply with them at all times.

41.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company housing scheme.

41.4.14 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.4.15 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company housing scheme. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

41.4.16 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company housing scheme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.4.17 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

41.4.18 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company housing scheme.

41.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company housing scheme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.4.20 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

41.4.22 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company housing scheme. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.4.23 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company housing scheme. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.4.24 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company housing scheme.

41.4.25 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.4.26 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.4.27 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company housing scheme and shall comply with them at all times. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.4.28 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company housing scheme and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company housing scheme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

41.4.29 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company housing scheme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

41.4.30 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company housing scheme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.4.31 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company housing scheme and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.4.32 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company housing scheme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

41.4.33 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

41.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company housing scheme.

41.5.2 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.5.3 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company housing scheme. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.5.4 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company housing scheme. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.5.5 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company housing scheme to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

41.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company housing scheme within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.5.7 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company housing scheme within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.5.8 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company housing scheme to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company housing scheme.

41.5.9 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.5.10 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company housing scheme and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company housing scheme within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

41.5.11 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company housing scheme and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on company housing scheme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

41.5.12 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company housing scheme and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

41.5.13 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company housing scheme and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.5.14 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company housing scheme to the Policy Committee without undue delay. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

41.5.15 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company housing scheme to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

41.5.16 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company housing scheme to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.5.17 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company housing scheme and applies them consistently. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.5.18 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

41.5.19 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on company housing scheme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

41.5.20 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company housing scheme and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company housing scheme to the HR Director without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.5.22 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company housing scheme to the HR Director without undue delay.

41.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.5.24 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on company housing scheme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

41.5.25 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company housing scheme and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.5.26 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company housing scheme. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

41.5.27 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company housing scheme within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.5.28 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company housing scheme.

41.5.29 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company housing scheme. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.5.30 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company housing scheme and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.5.31 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company housing scheme within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

41.5.32 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company housing scheme and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.5.33 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company housing scheme to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

41.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

41.6.1 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

41.6.2 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company housing scheme and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

41.6.3 HR shall respond to every written query on company housing scheme within 7 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company housing scheme and on the applicable legal requirements.

41.6.5 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with company housing scheme in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

41.6.6 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company housing scheme. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

41.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with company housing scheme in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.6.8 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.6.9 HR shall respond to every written query on company housing scheme within 5 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company housing scheme and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

41.6.11 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company housing scheme. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.6.12 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company housing scheme and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

41.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.6.15 HR shall respond to every written query on company housing scheme within 7 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.6.16 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company housing scheme. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.6.17 HR shall respond to every written query on company housing scheme within 2 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.6.18 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company housing scheme.

41.6.19 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company housing scheme. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company housing scheme and on the applicable legal requirements.

41.6.20 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company housing scheme and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

41.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on company housing scheme within 5 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.6.22 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company housing scheme and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

41.6.23 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company housing scheme and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.6.24 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with company housing scheme in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company housing scheme and shall make them available to all employees.

41.6.25 HR shall respond to every written query on company housing scheme within 14 working days of receipt.

41.6.26 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

41.6.27 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company housing scheme and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.6.28 HR shall respond to every written query on company housing scheme within 5 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

41.6.29 HR shall respond to every written query on company housing scheme within 10 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.6.30 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company housing scheme and on the applicable legal requirements.

41.6.31 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company housing scheme and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company housing scheme.

41.6.32 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company housing scheme. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

41.6.33 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.7 Procedure and Process Steps

41.7.1 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

41.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

41.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

41.7.4 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

41.7.5 The employee shall initiate the process relating to company housing scheme by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

41.7.6 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

41.7.7 The employee shall initiate the process relating to company housing scheme by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

41.7.8 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.7.9 The employee shall initiate the process relating to company housing scheme by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

41.7.10 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.7.11 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.7.12 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.7.13 The employee shall initiate the process relating to company housing scheme by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.7.14 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.7.15 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.7.16 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.7.17 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

41.7.18 The employee shall initiate the process relating to company housing scheme by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.7.19 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.7.20 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it.

41.7.21 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

41.7.22 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.7.23 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.7.24 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

41.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 3 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.7.26 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

41.7.27 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

41.7.28 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

41.7.29 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

41.7.30 The employee shall initiate the process relating to company housing scheme by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.7.31 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

41.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.7.33 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

41.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

41.8.1 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.8.2 Records relating to company housing scheme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

41.8.3 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.8.4 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.8.5 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company housing scheme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

41.8.6 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company housing scheme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.8.7 All documents relating to company housing scheme shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.8.8 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

41.8.9 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

41.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

41.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.8.12 All documents relating to company housing scheme shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.8.14 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

41.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.8.16 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company housing scheme that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

41.8.17 Records relating to company housing scheme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

41.8.18 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.8.19 Records relating to company housing scheme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

41.8.20 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.8.21 All documents relating to company housing scheme shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

41.8.22 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.8.23 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.8.24 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

41.8.25 Records relating to company housing scheme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

41.8.26 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.8.27 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

41.8.28 All documents relating to company housing scheme shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.8.29 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company housing scheme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.8.30 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.8.31 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

41.8.32 Records relating to company housing scheme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company housing scheme that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

41.8.33 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

41.9.1 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.9.2 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.9.3 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

41.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice.

41.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.9.6 Exceptions to the provisions on company housing scheme may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.9.7 Exceptions to the provisions on company housing scheme may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.9.8 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

41.9.9 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

41.9.10 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

41.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on company housing scheme may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

41.9.12 Exceptions to the provisions on company housing scheme may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.9.13 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.9.14 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

41.9.15 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.9.16 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.9.17 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

41.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

41.9.19 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

41.9.21 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

41.9.22 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

41.9.23 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.9.24 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

41.9.25 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

41.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on company housing scheme may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

41.9.27 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.9.28 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

41.9.29 Exceptions to the provisions on company housing scheme may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.9.30 Exceptions to the provisions on company housing scheme may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

41.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on company housing scheme may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

41.9.32 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.9.33 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

41.10.1 Compliance data relating to company housing scheme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.10.2 Where an external regulator requests information concerning company housing scheme, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

41.10.3 Where an external regulator requests information concerning company housing scheme, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company housing scheme.

41.10.4 Where an external regulator requests information concerning company housing scheme, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

41.10.5 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

41.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company housing scheme. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.10.7 An internal audit of company housing scheme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company housing scheme.

41.10.8 Compliance with the provisions on company housing scheme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.10.9 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.10.10 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.10.11 An internal audit of company housing scheme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.10.12 An internal audit of company housing scheme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.10.13 Compliance data relating to company housing scheme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.10.14 Compliance data relating to company housing scheme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.10.15 An internal audit of company housing scheme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.10.16 An internal audit of company housing scheme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.10.17 Compliance with the provisions on company housing scheme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.10.18 An internal audit of company housing scheme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.10.19 Compliance with the provisions on company housing scheme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.10.20 An internal audit of company housing scheme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

41.10.21 Compliance data relating to company housing scheme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.10.22 Where an external regulator requests information concerning company housing scheme, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company housing scheme. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where an external regulator requests information concerning company housing scheme, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

41.10.24 An internal audit of company housing scheme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

41.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.10.26 Compliance data relating to company housing scheme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company housing scheme. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.10.28 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

41.10.29 Compliance with the provisions on company housing scheme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on company housing scheme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

41.10.31 An internal audit of company housing scheme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company housing scheme.

41.10.32 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company housing scheme. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

41.10.33 Compliance data relating to company housing scheme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

41.11.1 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.11.2 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company housing scheme shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.11.3 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.11.4 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.11.5 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

41.11.6 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

41.11.7 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

41.11.8 A failure to comply with the provisions on company housing scheme may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

41.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.11.10 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.11.12 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

41.11.13 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

41.11.14 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.11.15 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

41.11.16 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

41.11.17 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

41.11.18 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.11.19 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A failure to comply with the provisions on company housing scheme may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

41.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.11.21 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company housing scheme shall be treated as serious misconduct.

41.11.22 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.11.23 A failure to comply with the provisions on company housing scheme may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

41.11.24 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.11.25 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant,

shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

41.11.26 A failure to comply with the provisions on company housing scheme may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

41.11.27 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company housing scheme shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A failure to comply with the provisions on company housing scheme may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

41.11.28 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company housing scheme shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.11.29 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company housing scheme shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

41.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company housing scheme shall be treated as serious misconduct.

41.11.31 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.11.32 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.11.33 A failure to comply with the provisions on company housing scheme may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

41.12 Review and Amendment

41.12.1 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

41.12.2 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

41.12.3 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company housing scheme through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.12.4 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

41.12.5 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

41.12.6 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

41.12.7 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.12.8 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company housing scheme through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

41.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.12.10 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

41.12.11 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.12.12 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

41.12.14 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.12.15 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

41.12.16 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

41.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

41.12.18 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.12.19 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.12.20 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.12.21 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

41.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

41.12.23 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

41.12.24 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company housing scheme through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

41.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

41.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

41.12.27 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company housing scheme through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

41.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

41.12.29 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

41.12.30 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.12.31 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

41.12.32 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company housing scheme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

41.12.33 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company housing scheme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

Chapter 42

Employee Referral Programme

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Referral reward	a bonus of 5,000 payable after 6 months of service

42.1 Purpose and Scope

42.1.1 The Company recognises that employee referral programme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

42.1.2 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.1.3 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.1.4 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee referral programme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

42.1.5 The objective of these provisions on employee referral programme is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.1.7 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee referral programme. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company recognises that employee referral programme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

42.1.8 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee referral programme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

42.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee referral programme.

42.1.10 The Company recognises that employee referral programme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

42.1.11 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee referral programme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.1.12 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee referral programme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.1.14 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee referral programme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.1.15 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee referral programme. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

42.1.16 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

42.1.17 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.1.18 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee referral programme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

42.1.19 The objective of these provisions on employee referral programme is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.1.20 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The objective of these provisions on employee referral programme is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

42.1.21 The objective of these provisions on employee referral programme is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

42.1.22 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee referral programme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

42.1.23 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee referral programme and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

42.1.24 The Company recognises that employee referral programme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee referral programme.

42.1.25 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee referral programme. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The Company recognises that employee referral programme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

42.1.26 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

42.1.27 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

42.1.28 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee referral programme. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

42.1.29 The Company recognises that employee referral programme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.1.30 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.1.31 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.1.32 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee referral programme. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

42.1.33 The Company recognises that employee referral programme has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee referral programme.

42.2 Definitions and Interpretation

42.2.1 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

42.2.2 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

42.2.3 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.2.4 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee referral programme. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.2.6 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.2.7 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

42.2.8 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.2.9 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.2.10 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.2.11 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.2.12 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

42.2.13 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.2.14 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.2.15 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

42.2.16 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

42.2.17 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee referral programme. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

42.2.18 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

42.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

42.2.20 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.2.22 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.2.23 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

42.2.25 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

42.2.26 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

42.2.27 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

42.2.28 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

42.2.29 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.2.30 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

42.2.31 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

42.2.32 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee referral programme" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

42.2.33 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.3 Eligibility and Applicability

42.3.1 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.3.2 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

42.3.3 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

42.3.4 Eligibility for employee referral programme shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

42.3.5 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee referral programme. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.3.6 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

42.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee referral programme. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

42.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee referral programme. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

42.3.9 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.3.10 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee referral programme restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

42.3.12 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

42.3.13 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee referral programme restricted until the matter is concluded.

42.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.3.15 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.3.16 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee referral programme. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.3.17 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee referral programme.

42.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee referral programme.

42.3.19 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.3.20 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

42.3.21 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

42.3.22 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.3.23 Eligibility for employee referral programme shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

42.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

42.3.25 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.3.26 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee referral programme restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.3.27 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee referral programme. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

42.3.28 Eligibility for employee referral programme shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

42.3.29 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee referral programme restricted until the matter is concluded.

42.3.30 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.3.31 Eligibility for employee referral programme shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.3.32 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee referral programme restricted until the matter is concluded. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.4 Responsibilities of Employees

42.4.1 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.4.2 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

42.4.3 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.4.4 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.4.5 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee referral programme and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.4.6 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.4.7 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.4.8 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.4.9 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee referral programme. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee referral programme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.4.12 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee referral programme. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.4.13 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.4.14 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

42.4.15 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee referral programme. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

42.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee referral programme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee referral programme and shall comply with them at all times.

42.4.18 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee referral programme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.4.20 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.4.21 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

42.4.22 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee referral programme.

42.4.23 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee referral programme and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

42.4.24 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee referral programme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.4.25 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employee referral programme as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.4.26 The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.4.27 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

42.4.28 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

42.4.29 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee referral programme and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.4.31 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.4.32 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee referral programme. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.4.33 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

42.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

42.5.1 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

42.5.2 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

42.5.3 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee referral programme to the HR Director without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.5.4 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee referral programme. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.5.5 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee referral programme and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

42.5.6 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee referral programme to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

42.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee referral programme and applies them consistently.

42.5.8 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.5.9 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee referral programme to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.5.10 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.5.11 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.5.12 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

42.5.13 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.5.14 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee referral programme to the HR Director without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.5.16 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.5.17 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.5.18 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee referral programme. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.5.19 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee referral programme to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.5.20 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.5.21 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee referral programme. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.5.22 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.5.23 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee referral programme within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

42.5.24 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.5.25 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee referral programme. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee referral programme within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

42.5.26 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee referral programme within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.5.27 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee referral programme and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

42.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee referral programme to the Policy Committee without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.5.30 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee referral programme within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.5.31 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

42.5.32 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee referral programme to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

42.5.33 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee referral programme to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

42.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee referral programme in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

42.6.2 HR shall respond to every written query on employee referral programme within 14 working days of receipt. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.6.3 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.6.4 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee referral programme in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.6.5 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall respond to every written query on employee referral programme within 30 working days of receipt.

42.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee referral programme and shall make them available to all employees.

42.6.7 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee referral programme.

42.6.8 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.6.9 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee referral programme in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

42.6.10 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.6.11 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee referral programme. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

42.6.12 HR shall respond to every written query on employee referral programme within 2 working days of receipt.

42.6.13 HR shall respond to every written query on employee referral programme within 3 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.6.15 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee referral programme in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on employee referral programme within 7 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

42.6.17 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee referral programme and on the applicable legal requirements.

42.6.19 HR shall respond to every written query on employee referral programme within 10 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

42.6.20 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee referral programme and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.6.21 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee referral programme and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.6.22 HR shall respond to every written query on employee referral programme within 10 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.6.23 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee referral programme and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.6.24 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee referral programme and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.6.25 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee referral programme in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on employee referral programme within 21 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee referral programme.

42.6.27 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee referral programme in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

42.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

42.6.29 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee referral programme and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.6.30 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee referral programme and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.6.31 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee referral programme. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.6.32 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee referral programme.

42.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee referral programme and on the applicable legal requirements.

42.7 Procedure and Process Steps

42.7.1 Referral reward. An employee who successfully refers a candidate shall receive a bonus of 5,000 payable after 6 months of service.

42.7.2 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.7.5 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.7.6 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 30 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.7.8 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.7.9 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

42.7.10 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.7.11 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.7.12 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 14 working days of receiving it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.7.13 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 10 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

42.7.14 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.7.16 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.7.18 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.7.19 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.7.20 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

42.7.22 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee referral programme by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

42.7.24 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 10 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.7.26 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

42.7.27 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.7.28 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee referral programme by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

42.7.29 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

42.7.30 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee referral programme by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.7.32 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.7.33 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.7.34 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

42.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee referral programme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.8.2 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee referral programme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.8.3 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee referral programme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.8.4 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

42.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.8.6 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.8.7 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

42.8.8 Records relating to employee referral programme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

42.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.8.10 Records relating to employee referral programme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.8.11 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee referral programme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

42.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.8.13 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.8.17 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee referral programme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.8.18 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

42.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee referral programme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.8.20 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Records relating to employee referral programme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

42.8.21 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.8.22 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.8.23 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.8.24 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Records relating to employee referral programme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

42.8.25 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

42.8.26 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

42.8.27 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee referral programme that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

42.8.28 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.8.29 Records relating to employee referral programme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

42.8.30 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee referral programme that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.8.31 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.8.33 Records relating to employee referral programme shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years.

42.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

42.9.1 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice.

42.9.2 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

42.9.3 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

42.9.4 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.9.7 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions to the provisions on employee referral programme may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

42.9.9 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.9.10 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice.

42.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on employee referral programme may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice.

42.9.12 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.9.13 Exceptions to the provisions on employee referral programme may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

42.9.14 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.9.15 Exceptions to the provisions on employee referral programme may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

42.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

42.9.17 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

42.9.18 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.9.20 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on employee referral programme may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

42.9.21 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

42.9.22 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice.

42.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

42.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on employee referral programme may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

42.9.26 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

42.9.27 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

42.9.28 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice.

42.9.29 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

42.9.30 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

42.9.31 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

42.9.32 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

42.9.33 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

42.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

42.10.1 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.10.2 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

42.10.3 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee referral programme. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.10.4 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.10.5 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee referral programme. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee referral programme. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.10.7 Compliance data relating to employee referral programme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.10.8 Compliance data relating to employee referral programme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.10.9 Compliance with the provisions on employee referral programme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.10.10 Compliance data relating to employee referral programme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.10.11 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee referral programme. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.10.12 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

42.10.13 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.10.14 Compliance data relating to employee referral programme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

42.10.15 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee referral programme. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee referral programme, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

42.10.16 Compliance with the provisions on employee referral programme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.10.18 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

42.10.19 Compliance data relating to employee referral programme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee referral programme, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

42.10.20 Compliance with the provisions on employee referral programme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.10.21 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

42.10.22 Compliance data relating to employee referral programme shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An internal audit of employee referral programme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

42.10.23 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

42.10.24 An internal audit of employee referral programme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.10.25 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

42.10.26 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee referral programme. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.10.27 Compliance with the provisions on employee referral programme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

42.10.28 An internal audit of employee referral programme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

42.10.29 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.10.30 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.10.31 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee referral programme, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.10.32 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An internal audit of employee referral programme shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

42.10.33 Compliance with the provisions on employee referral programme shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

42.11.1 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.11.2 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

42.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

42.11.4 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

42.11.5 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

42.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee referral programme shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

42.11.7 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

42.11.8 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.11.9 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

42.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

42.11.11 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

42.11.12 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

42.11.13 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

42.11.14 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee referral programme shall be treated as serious misconduct.

42.11.15 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

42.11.16 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee referral programme shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.11.17 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee referral programme shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.11.18 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

42.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.11.21 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee referral programme shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

42.11.22 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

42.11.23 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

42.11.24 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

42.11.25 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.11.26 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee referral programme may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

42.11.27 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

42.11.28 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line

Manager. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

42.11.29 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

42.11.30 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.11.31 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.11.32 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee referral programme may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.11.33 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.12 Review and Amendment

42.12.1 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.12.3 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee referral programme through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

42.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

42.12.5 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.12.6 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

42.12.7 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

42.12.8 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee referral programme through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.12.9 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

42.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

42.12.11 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.12.12 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

42.12.13 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

42.12.14 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

42.12.15 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee referral programme through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

42.12.16 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

42.12.17 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee referral programme through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.12.18 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.12.19 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee referral programme made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

42.12.20 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.12.21 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

42.12.22 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

42.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

42.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee referral programme through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect.

42.12.25 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

42.12.26 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

42.12.27 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

42.12.28 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.12.29 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

42.12.30 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee referral programme through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

42.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee referral programme, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

42.12.32 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

42.12.33 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee referral programme through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

Chapter 43

Employee Representation and Consultation

43.1 Purpose and Scope

43.1.1 The Company recognises that employee representation and consultation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.1.2 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee representation and consultation. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.1.3 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee representation and consultation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.1.4 The objective of these provisions on employee representation and consultation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.1.5 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee representation and consultation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.1.6 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee representation and consultation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.1.7 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee representation and consultation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Company recognises that employee representation and consultation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

43.1.8 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee representation and consultation.

43.1.9 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee representation and consultation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company recognises that employee representation and consultation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

43.1.10 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee representation and consultation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.1.11 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.1.12 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.1.13 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee representation and consultation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

43.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.1.15 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

43.1.16 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.1.17 The objective of these provisions on employee representation and consultation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

43.1.18 The Company recognises that employee representation and consultation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.1.19 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.1.20 The objective of these provisions on employee representation and consultation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.1.21 The objective of these provisions on employee representation and consultation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.1.23 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

43.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employee representation and consultation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.1.25 The Company recognises that employee representation and consultation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.1.26 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee representation and consultation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

43.1.27 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employee representation and consultation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

43.1.28 The objective of these provisions on employee representation and consultation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.1.29 The Company recognises that employee representation and consultation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.1.30 The objective of these provisions on employee representation and consultation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

43.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company recognises that employee representation and consultation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

43.1.32 The objective of these provisions on employee representation and consultation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.1.33 The Company recognises that employee representation and consultation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.2 Definitions and Interpretation

43.2.1 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.2.2 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

43.2.3 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee representation and consultation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

43.2.4 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

43.2.5 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

43.2.6 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

43.2.7 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee representation and consultation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

43.2.8 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee representation and consultation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

43.2.10 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee representation and consultation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.2.11 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee representation and consultation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.2.12 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

43.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.2.14 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.2.15 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

43.2.16 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee representation and consultation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.2.17 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.2.18 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

43.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.2.20 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee representation and consultation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

43.2.21 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.2.22 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employee representation and consultation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

43.2.23 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

43.2.24 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.2.25 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

43.2.26 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.2.27 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee representation and consultation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.2.28 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.2.29 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.2.30 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.2.31 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.2.32 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

43.2.33 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employee representation and consultation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.3 Eligibility and Applicability

43.3.1 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

43.3.2 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.3.4 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

43.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee representation and consultation restricted until the matter is concluded.

43.3.6 Eligibility for employee representation and consultation shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.3.7 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee representation and consultation.

43.3.9 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.3.10 Eligibility for employee representation and consultation shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

43.3.11 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

43.3.12 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

43.3.13 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee representation and consultation restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.3.14 Eligibility for employee representation and consultation shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.3.15 Eligibility for employee representation and consultation shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.3.16 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.3.17 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

43.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.3.19 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.3.21 Eligibility for employee representation and consultation shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.3.22 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee representation and consultation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.3.24 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee representation and consultation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee representation and consultation.

43.3.26 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee representation and consultation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

43.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee representation and consultation.

43.3.28 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Eligibility for employee representation and consultation shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

43.3.29 Eligibility for employee representation and consultation shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.3.30 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

43.3.31 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employee representation and consultation restricted until the matter is concluded.

43.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employee representation and consultation. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.3.33 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.4 Responsibilities of Employees

43.4.1 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee representation and consultation and shall comply with them at all times.

43.4.2 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.4.4 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee representation and consultation and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.4.5 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.4.6 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.4.7 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee representation and consultation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

43.4.8 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee representation and consultation.

43.4.9 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee representation and consultation and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

43.4.10 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee representation and consultation and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.4.11 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee representation and consultation and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.4.12 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee representation and consultation and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee representation and consultation.

43.4.13 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.4.14 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee representation and consultation.

43.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee representation and consultation and shall comply with them at all times.

43.4.17 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee representation and consultation and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

43.4.18 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee representation and consultation and shall comply with them at all times.

43.4.19 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee representation and consultation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

43.4.20 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee representation and consultation and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

43.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.4.22 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.4.23 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee representation and consultation and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.4.24 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee representation and consultation and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.4.25 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.4.26 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee representation and consultation and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.4.27 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee representation and consultation and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.4.28 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employee representation and consultation and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.4.29 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employee representation and consultation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.4.30 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee representation and consultation and shall comply with them at all times.

43.4.31 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

43.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employee representation and consultation and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

43.4.33 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

43.5.1 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee representation and consultation and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

43.5.3 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee representation and consultation. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.5.4 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee representation and consultation to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

43.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee representation and consultation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee representation and consultation within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

43.5.7 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.5.8 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee representation and consultation and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee representation and consultation to the HR Director without undue delay.

43.5.9 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee representation and consultation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.5.10 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee representation and consultation within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

43.5.11 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee representation and consultation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.5.12 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee representation and consultation and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee representation and consultation.

43.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

43.5.14 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee representation and consultation within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee representation and consultation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee representation and consultation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.5.17 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee representation and consultation and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.5.18 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee representation and consultation to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.5.19 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee representation and consultation within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.5.20 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee representation and consultation to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

43.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee representation and consultation to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.5.22 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee representation and consultation and applies them consistently.

43.5.23 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employee representation and consultation.

43.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee representation and consultation to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

43.5.25 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee representation and consultation to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

43.5.26 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employee representation and consultation to the HR Director without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

43.5.27 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee representation and consultation within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.5.28 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employee representation and consultation and applies them consistently. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.5.29 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employee representation and consultation within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

43.5.30 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee representation and consultation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

43.5.31 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employee representation and consultation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.5.32 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.5.33 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

43.6.1 HR shall respond to every written query on employee representation and consultation within 30 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.6.2 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee representation and consultation and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.6.3 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee representation and consultation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.6.4 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee representation and consultation and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

43.6.5 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee representation and consultation and on the applicable legal requirements. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee representation and consultation and on the applicable legal requirements.

43.6.7 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

43.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee representation and consultation and on the applicable legal requirements.

43.6.9 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee representation and consultation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

43.6.10 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee representation and consultation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.6.12 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.6.13 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.6.14 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee representation and consultation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

43.6.15 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee representation and consultation and on the applicable legal requirements.

43.6.16 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee representation and consultation. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.6.17 HR shall respond to every written query on employee representation and consultation within 30 working days of receipt. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

43.6.18 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee representation and consultation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.6.20 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.6.21 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee representation and consultation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee representation and consultation and on the applicable legal requirements.

43.6.22 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee representation and consultation and shall make them available to all employees.

43.6.23 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.6.24 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employee representation and consultation and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.6.25 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee representation and consultation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee representation and consultation.

43.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on employee representation and consultation within 7 working days of receipt.

43.6.27 HR shall respond to every written query on employee representation and consultation within 10 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

43.6.28 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.6.30 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.6.31 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employee representation and consultation and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

43.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employee representation and consultation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

43.6.33 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employee representation and consultation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. HR shall respond to every written query on employee representation and consultation within 15 working days of receipt.

43.7 Procedure and Process Steps

43.7.1 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 7 working days of receiving it.

43.7.2 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee representation and consultation by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

43.7.4 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.7.5 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 2 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

43.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

43.7.7 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee representation and consultation by submitting a written request to the Line Manager. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.7.8 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.7.9 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.7.10 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

43.7.11 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee representation and consultation by submitting a written request to the Line Manager. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.7.12 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.7.14 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

43.7.16 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.7.17 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.7.18 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee representation and consultation by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.7.20 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.7.22 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 14 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

43.7.23 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee representation and consultation by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager.

43.7.24 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

43.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 7 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

43.7.26 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

43.7.27 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.7.28 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 10 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.7.29 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line

Manager.

43.7.30 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

43.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employee representation and consultation by submitting the prescribed form to the Line Manager. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.7.32 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.7.33 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

43.8.1 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. All documents relating to employee representation and consultation shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

43.8.2 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.8.3 All documents relating to employee representation and consultation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.8.4 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

43.8.5 All documents relating to employee representation and consultation shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.8.6 Records relating to employee representation and consultation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee representation and consultation that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

43.8.8 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Records relating to employee representation and consultation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years.

43.8.9 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

43.8.10 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

43.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

43.8.13 Records relating to employee representation and consultation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years.

43.8.14 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.8.15 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee representation and consultation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.8.16 All documents relating to employee representation and consultation shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.8.17 All documents relating to employee representation and consultation shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.8.18 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee representation and consultation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.8.20 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee representation and consultation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Records relating to employee representation and consultation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

43.8.21 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

43.8.22 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.8.23 Records relating to employee representation and consultation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

43.8.24 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

43.8.25 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.8.26 Records relating to employee representation and consultation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

43.8.27 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.8.28 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. All documents relating to employee representation and consultation shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

43.8.29 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

43.8.30 All documents relating to employee representation and consultation shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.8.31 Records relating to employee representation and consultation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employee representation and consultation that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

43.8.32 Records relating to employee representation and consultation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

43.9.1 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.9.2 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

43.9.3 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Exceptions to the provisions on employee representation and consultation may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

43.9.4 Exceptions to the provisions on employee representation and consultation may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.9.6 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.9.7 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

43.9.8 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.9.9 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

43.9.10 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

43.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on employee representation and consultation may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.9.12 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice.

43.9.13 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Exceptions to the provisions on employee representation and consultation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

43.9.14 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.9.16 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.9.17 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

43.9.18 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.9.19 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.9.20 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on employee representation and consultation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

43.9.22 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.9.23 Exceptions to the provisions on employee representation and consultation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.9.24 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

43.9.25 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

43.9.26 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

43.9.27 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

43.9.28 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

43.9.29 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions to the provisions on employee representation and consultation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

43.9.30 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.9.31 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

43.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.9.33 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

43.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

43.10.2 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.10.3 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee representation and consultation, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee representation and consultation.

43.10.4 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee representation and consultation, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

43.10.5 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

43.10.6 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

43.10.7 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.10.8 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

43.10.9 Compliance data relating to employee representation and consultation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

43.10.10 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee representation and consultation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.10.11 Compliance data relating to employee representation and consultation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.10.12 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Compliance data relating to employee representation and consultation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

43.10.13 Compliance data relating to employee representation and consultation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.10.14 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee representation and consultation, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.10.15 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee representation and consultation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

43.10.17 Compliance data relating to employee representation and consultation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee representation and consultation.

43.10.18 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

43.10.19 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee representation and consultation, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.10.20 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee representation and consultation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

43.10.21 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee representation and consultation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

43.10.22 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Compliance data relating to employee representation and consultation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

43.10.23 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employee representation and consultation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

43.10.24 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee representation and consultation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.10.25 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

43.10.26 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

43.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employee representation and consultation. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Compliance data relating to employee representation and consultation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

43.10.28 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.10.29 An internal audit of employee representation and consultation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on employee representation and consultation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.10.31 Compliance data relating to employee representation and consultation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.10.32 Compliance data relating to employee representation and consultation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An internal audit of employee representation and consultation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

43.10.33 An internal audit of employee representation and consultation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

43.11.1 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

43.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee representation and consultation shall be treated as serious misconduct.

43.11.4 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

43.11.5 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.11.6 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

43.11.7 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

43.11.8 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.11.10 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

43.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

43.11.12 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

43.11.14 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee representation and consultation shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee representation and consultation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee representation and consultation shall be treated as serious misconduct.

43.11.16 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee representation and consultation shall be treated as serious misconduct. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.11.18 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee representation and consultation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.11.20 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee representation and consultation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

43.11.21 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.11.22 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.11.23 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.11.24 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

43.11.25 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee representation and consultation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

43.11.26 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee representation and consultation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

43.11.27 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

43.11.28 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

43.11.29 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee representation and consultation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

43.11.30 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

43.11.31 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employee representation and consultation shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.11.32 A failure to comply with the provisions on employee representation and consultation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

43.11.33 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

43.12 Review and Amendment

43.12.1 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

43.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employee representation and consultation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

43.12.3 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

43.12.6 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

43.12.7 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

43.12.8 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.12.10 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

43.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

43.12.12 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.12.13 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

43.12.14 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.12.15 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee representation and consultation through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.12.16 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

43.12.17 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.12.18 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

43.12.19 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee representation and consultation through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

43.12.20 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employee representation and consultation through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

43.12.21 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

43.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

43.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

43.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

43.12.27 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employee representation and consultation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

43.12.28 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

43.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

43.12.30 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

43.12.31 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

43.12.32 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

43.12.33 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

Chapter 44

Workplace Investigations

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Investigation timeline	60 days

44.1 Purpose and Scope

44.1.1 The Company recognises that workplace investigations has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.1.2 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.1.3 The Company recognises that workplace investigations has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

44.1.4 The objective of these provisions on workplace investigations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.1.5 The Company recognises that workplace investigations has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.1.6 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The objective of these provisions on workplace investigations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

44.1.7 The Company recognises that workplace investigations has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The objective of these provisions on workplace investigations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

44.1.8 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

44.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

44.1.10 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.1.11 The objective of these provisions on workplace investigations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on workplace investigations. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

44.1.13 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

44.1.14 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

44.1.15 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.1.16 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.1.17 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

44.1.18 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.1.19 The objective of these provisions on workplace investigations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

44.1.20 The objective of these provisions on workplace investigations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.1.21 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.1.22 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.1.23 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

44.1.24 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.1.25 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.1.26 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.1.27 The objective of these provisions on workplace investigations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

44.1.28 The objective of these provisions on workplace investigations is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on workplace investigations.

44.1.29 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.1.30 The Company recognises that workplace investigations has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.1.31 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to workplace investigations and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.1.32 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

44.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on workplace investigations. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.2 Definitions and Interpretation

44.2.1 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.2.2 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

44.2.4 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

44.2.5 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

44.2.7 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

44.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to workplace investigations. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

44.2.9 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to workplace investigations.

44.2.10 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

44.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.2.12 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

44.2.13 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

44.2.14 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.2.15 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.2.17 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.2.18 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.2.19 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

44.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "workplace investigations" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.2.21 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to workplace investigations. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.2.22 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

44.2.23 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "workplace investigations" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

44.2.24 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to workplace investigations.

44.2.25 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

44.2.26 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.2.27 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.2.28 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

44.2.29 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to workplace investigations. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

44.2.30 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.2.31 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "workplace investigations" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

44.2.32 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

44.2.33 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to workplace investigations. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.3 Eligibility and Applicability

44.3.1 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for workplace investigations restricted until the matter is concluded.

44.3.2 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on workplace investigations. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.3.3 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on workplace investigations.

44.3.4 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

44.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

44.3.6 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.3.7 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

44.3.8 Eligibility for workplace investigations shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on workplace investigations.

44.3.9 Eligibility for workplace investigations shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on workplace investigations.

44.3.10 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for workplace investigations restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Eligibility for workplace investigations shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

44.3.11 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

44.3.12 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for workplace investigations restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

44.3.13 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for workplace investigations restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.3.14 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

44.3.15 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for workplace investigations restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.3.16 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.3.17 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on workplace investigations. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.3.19 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for workplace investigations restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

44.3.20 Eligibility for workplace investigations shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

44.3.21 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for workplace investigations restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Eligibility for workplace investigations shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

44.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.3.23 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

44.3.24 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.3.25 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.3.26 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.3.27 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

44.3.28 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.3.29 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for workplace investigations restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

44.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for workplace investigations restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.3.31 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

44.3.32 Eligibility for workplace investigations shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on workplace investigations.

44.3.33 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.4 Responsibilities of Employees

44.4.1 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

44.4.2 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on workplace investigations and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

44.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on workplace investigations and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.4.4 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Head of Department at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

44.4.5 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to workplace investigations and shall not withhold material facts.

44.4.6 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with workplace investigations. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

44.4.7 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to workplace investigations and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

44.4.8 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to workplace investigations and shall not withhold material facts.

44.4.9 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.4.10 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with workplace investigations. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.4.11 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

44.4.12 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with workplace investigations. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

44.4.13 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with workplace investigations. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

44.4.14 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.4.16 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

44.4.17 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

44.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.4.19 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.4.20 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

44.4.22 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to workplace investigations and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.4.23 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on workplace investigations and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.4.24 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

44.4.25 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

44.4.26 The employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

44.4.27 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.4.28 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on workplace investigations and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.4.29 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with workplace investigations. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

44.4.30 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

44.4.31 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of workplace investigations as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.4.32 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of workplace investigations as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.4.33 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of workplace investigations as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

44.5.1 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.5.3 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on workplace investigations. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

44.5.4 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on workplace investigations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

44.5.5 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.5.6 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on workplace investigations and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on workplace investigations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

44.5.8 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on workplace investigations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the HR Director without undue delay.

44.5.9 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on workplace investigations and applies them consistently. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

44.5.11 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on workplace investigations and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on workplace investigations.

44.5.12 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the Policy Committee without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.5.13 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.5.14 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on workplace investigations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on workplace investigations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

44.5.16 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to workplace investigations within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.5.17 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on workplace investigations.

44.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to workplace investigations within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

44.5.19 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on workplace investigations and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.5.20 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on workplace investigations and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.5.21 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on workplace investigations. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.5.22 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

44.5.23 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on workplace investigations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

44.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the Policy Committee without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

44.5.25 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

44.5.26 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

44.5.27 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to workplace investigations within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

44.5.28 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on workplace investigations and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

44.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on workplace investigations and applies them consistently.

44.5.30 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.5.31 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to workplace investigations within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

44.5.32 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to workplace investigations to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

44.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to workplace investigations within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

44.6.1 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

44.6.2 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with workplace investigations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

44.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.6.4 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for workplace investigations and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements.

44.6.5 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to workplace investigations. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for workplace investigations and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.6.7 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to workplace investigations.

44.6.8 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with workplace investigations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

44.6.9 HR shall respond to every written query on workplace investigations within 10 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.6.10 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.6.11 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

44.6.12 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for workplace investigations and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.6.15 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to workplace investigations. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

44.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on workplace investigations within 14 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to workplace investigations.

44.6.17 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for workplace investigations and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

44.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to workplace investigations. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for workplace investigations and shall make them available to all employees.

44.6.19 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with workplace investigations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

44.6.20 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to workplace investigations. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.6.21 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.6.22 HR shall respond to every written query on workplace investigations within 7 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.6.23 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall respond to every written query on workplace investigations within 2 working days of receipt.

44.6.24 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with workplace investigations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.6.25 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on workplace investigations within 5 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.6.27 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. HR shall respond to every written query on workplace investigations within 21 working days of receipt.

44.6.28 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for workplace investigations and shall make them available to all employees.

44.6.29 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with workplace investigations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

44.6.31 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with workplace investigations in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

44.6.32 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to workplace investigations and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.6.33 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for workplace investigations and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.7 Procedure and Process Steps

44.7.1 Investigation timeline. Every workplace investigation shall ordinarily be completed within 60 days of its commencement.

44.7.2 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

44.7.3 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

44.7.4 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 30 working days of receiving it.

44.7.6 The employee shall initiate the process relating to workplace investigations by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 21 working days of receiving it.

44.7.7 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

44.7.8 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.7.9 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.7.10 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.7.11 The employee shall initiate the process relating to workplace investigations by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

44.7.12 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 21 working days of receiving it. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

44.7.13 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 30 working days of receiving it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it.

44.7.15 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

44.7.16 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.7.17 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.7.18 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

44.7.19 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

44.7.20 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

44.7.21 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.7.22 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

44.7.23 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

44.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to workplace investigations by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

44.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 3 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

44.7.26 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

44.7.27 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.7.28 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.7.29 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 30 working days of receiving it. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

44.7.30 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 14 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to workplace investigations by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

44.7.32 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.7.33 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

44.7.34 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 15 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

44.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

44.8.1 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.8.2 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

44.8.3 All documents relating to workplace investigations shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

44.8.4 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

44.8.5 All documents relating to workplace investigations shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.8.6 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to workplace investigations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Records relating to workplace investigations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years.

44.8.8 Records relating to workplace investigations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.8.9 Records relating to workplace investigations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

44.8.10 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to workplace investigations that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.8.12 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to workplace investigations that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

44.8.13 All documents relating to workplace investigations shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

44.8.14 All documents relating to workplace investigations shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.8.15 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.8.17 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.8.18 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. All documents relating to workplace investigations shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

44.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

44.8.20 Records relating to workplace investigations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.8.21 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. All documents relating to workplace investigations shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

44.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.8.23 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

44.8.24 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

44.8.25 All documents relating to workplace investigations shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.8.26 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.8.27 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.8.28 All documents relating to workplace investigations shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.8.29 Records relating to workplace investigations shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

44.8.30 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

44.8.31 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

44.8.32 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.8.33 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

44.9.1 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

44.9.2 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.9.3 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

44.9.4 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

44.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

44.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.9.7 Exceptions to the provisions on workplace investigations may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

44.9.8 Exceptions to the provisions on workplace investigations may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

44.9.9 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

44.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.9.11 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.9.12 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

44.9.13 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

44.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.9.16 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

44.9.17 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

44.9.18 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

44.9.19 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

44.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions to the provisions on workplace investigations may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

44.9.21 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.9.22 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.9.23 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

44.9.24 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

44.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on workplace investigations may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

44.9.26 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.9.27 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

44.9.28 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.9.29 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

44.9.30 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.9.31 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Exceptions to the provisions on workplace investigations may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

44.9.32 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

44.9.33 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

44.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

44.10.1 Compliance data relating to workplace investigations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.10.2 Where an external regulator requests information concerning workplace investigations, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.10.3 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.10.4 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to workplace investigations. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.10.5 An internal audit of workplace investigations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to workplace investigations. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.10.7 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.10.8 Compliance data relating to workplace investigations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

44.10.9 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.10.10 An internal audit of workplace investigations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.10.11 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

44.10.12 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

44.10.13 Compliance data relating to workplace investigations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.10.14 Compliance data relating to workplace investigations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.10.15 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.10.17 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to workplace investigations. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

44.10.18 Compliance data relating to workplace investigations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Compliance with the provisions on workplace investigations shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

44.10.19 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to workplace investigations. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

44.10.20 Where an external regulator requests information concerning workplace investigations, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

44.10.21 An internal audit of workplace investigations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.10.22 Where an external regulator requests information concerning workplace investigations, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

44.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to workplace investigations. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An internal audit of workplace investigations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

44.10.24 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

44.10.25 Compliance data relating to workplace investigations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

44.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

44.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to workplace investigations. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.10.28 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.10.29 Where an external regulator requests information concerning workplace investigations, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on workplace investigations shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.10.31 An internal audit of workplace investigations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.10.32 An internal audit of workplace investigations shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

44.10.33 Compliance data relating to workplace investigations shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

44.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

44.11.1 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

44.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to workplace investigations shall be treated as serious misconduct.

44.11.3 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to workplace investigations shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.11.4 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.11.5 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

44.11.6 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

44.11.7 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.11.8 A failure to comply with the provisions on workplace investigations may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.11.9 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.11.10 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

44.11.11 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to workplace investigations shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

44.11.12 A failure to comply with the provisions on workplace investigations may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

44.11.13 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to workplace investigations shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.11.14 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.11.15 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

44.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

44.11.17 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.11.18 A failure to comply with the provisions on workplace investigations may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

44.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on workplace investigations may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

44.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

44.11.21 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.11.22 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.11.23 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

44.11.24 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.11.25 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.11.26 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.11.27 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.11.28 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

44.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

44.11.30 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

44.11.31 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.11.32 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.11.33 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

44.12 Review and Amendment

44.12.1 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

44.12.2 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

44.12.3 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on workplace investigations through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

44.12.4 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on workplace investigations through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.12.6 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.12.7 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

44.12.8 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

44.12.9 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

44.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

44.12.11 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

44.12.12 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

44.12.13 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on workplace investigations through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

44.12.14 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

44.12.15 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to workplace investigations made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

44.12.16 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

44.12.17 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

44.12.18 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on workplace investigations through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to workplace investigations, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

44.12.19 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

44.12.20 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

44.12.21 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

44.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

44.12.23 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on workplace investigations through the

HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

44.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

44.12.25 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

44.12.26 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.12.27 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

44.12.28 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on workplace investigations through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.12.29 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on workplace investigations through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

44.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

44.12.31 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

44.12.32 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

44.12.33 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on workplace investigations through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

Chapter 45

Business Continuity and Emergency Response

45.1 Purpose and Scope

45.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on business continuity and emergency response. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

45.1.2 The objective of these provisions on business continuity and emergency response is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on business continuity and emergency response.

45.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to business continuity and emergency response and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.1.4 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

45.1.5 The objective of these provisions on business continuity and emergency response is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to business continuity and emergency response and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

45.1.6 The Company recognises that business continuity and emergency response has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.1.7 The Company recognises that business continuity and emergency response has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.1.8 The objective of these provisions on business continuity and emergency response is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.1.9 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on business continuity and emergency response. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.1.10 The Company recognises that business continuity and emergency response has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on business continuity and emergency response.

45.1.11 The Company recognises that business continuity and emergency response has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

45.1.12 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to business continuity and emergency response and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The objective of these provisions on business continuity and emergency response is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

45.1.14 The Company recognises that business continuity and emergency response has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.1.15 The objective of these provisions on business continuity and emergency response is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

45.1.16 The Company recognises that business continuity and emergency response has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.1.17 The objective of these provisions on business continuity and emergency response is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

45.1.18 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on business continuity and emergency response. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

45.1.19 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to business continuity and emergency response and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.1.20 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

45.1.21 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.1.23 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.1.24 The Company recognises that business continuity and emergency response has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.1.25 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to business continuity and emergency response and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.1.26 The Company recognises that business continuity and emergency response has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

45.1.27 The Company recognises that business continuity and emergency response has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.1.28 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on business continuity and emergency response. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.1.29 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on business continuity and emergency response. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.1.30 The objective of these provisions on business continuity and emergency response is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

45.1.32 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on business continuity and emergency response. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.1.33 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to business continuity and emergency response and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.2 Definitions and Interpretation

45.2.1 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

45.2.2 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to business continuity and emergency response. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

45.2.7 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.2.8 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "business continuity and emergency response" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.2.9 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

45.2.10 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "business continuity and emergency response" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

45.2.11 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "business continuity and emergency response" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to business continuity and emergency response.

45.2.12 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

45.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.2.14 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to business continuity and emergency response.

45.2.15 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.2.16 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.2.17 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "business continuity and emergency response" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

45.2.18 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "business continuity and emergency response" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.2.19 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.2.20 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

45.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.2.22 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "business continuity and emergency response" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to business continuity and emergency response.

45.2.23 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

45.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "business continuity and emergency response" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.2.25 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to business continuity and emergency response. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.2.26 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

45.2.27 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.2.28 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to business continuity and emergency response.

45.2.29 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

45.2.30 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to business continuity and emergency response. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.2.31 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

45.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.2.33 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

45.3 Eligibility and Applicability

45.3.1 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

45.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for business continuity and emergency response restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Eligibility for business continuity and emergency response shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

45.3.3 Eligibility for business continuity and emergency response shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

45.3.5 Eligibility for business continuity and emergency response shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Eligibility for business continuity and emergency response shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

45.3.7 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.3.8 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for business continuity and emergency response restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.3.10 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.3.11 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on business continuity and emergency response. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.3.13 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on business continuity and emergency response. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for business continuity and emergency response restricted until the matter is concluded.

45.3.14 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.3.15 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for business continuity and emergency response restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.3.16 Eligibility for business continuity and emergency response shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.3.17 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on business continuity and emergency response. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.3.18 Eligibility for business continuity and emergency response shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.3.19 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on business continuity and emergency response. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

45.3.20 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.3.21 Eligibility for business continuity and emergency response shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on business continuity and emergency response.

45.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.3.23 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

45.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on business continuity and emergency response.

45.3.25 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on business continuity and emergency response. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.3.26 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for business continuity and emergency response restricted until the matter is concluded.

45.3.27 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

45.3.28 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for business continuity and emergency response restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.3.29 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.3.30 Eligibility for business continuity and emergency response shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

45.3.31 Eligibility for business continuity and emergency response shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.3.32 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for business continuity and emergency response restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on business continuity and emergency response.

45.4 Responsibilities of Employees

45.4.1 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with business continuity and emergency response. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

45.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.4.3 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with business continuity and emergency response. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

45.4.4 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of business continuity and emergency response as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

45.4.5 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to business continuity and emergency response and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

45.4.6 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

45.4.7 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response and shall comply with them at all times. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.4.8 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.4.9 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with business continuity and emergency response. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

45.4.10 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to business continuity and emergency response and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

45.4.11 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to business continuity and emergency response and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.4.12 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.4.13 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of business continuity and emergency response as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with business continuity and emergency response.

45.4.14 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

45.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of business continuity and emergency response as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

45.4.18 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with business continuity and emergency response. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

45.4.19 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response and shall comply with them at all times. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

45.4.20 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

45.4.22 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.4.23 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.4.24 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to business continuity and emergency response and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.4.25 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to business continuity and emergency response and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with business continuity and emergency response. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.4.27 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to business continuity and emergency response and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.4.28 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

45.4.29 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

45.4.30 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with business continuity and emergency response. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.4.31 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of business continuity and emergency response as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.4.32 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

45.4.33 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with business continuity and emergency response. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

45.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

45.5.1 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.5.2 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on business continuity and emergency response. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.5.3 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to business continuity and emergency response within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to business continuity and emergency response to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

45.5.4 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on business continuity and emergency response and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

45.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on business continuity and emergency response and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.5.6 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

45.5.7 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on business continuity and emergency response and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.5.8 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on business continuity and emergency response and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.5.9 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on business continuity and emergency response.

45.5.10 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.5.11 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

45.5.12 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on business continuity and emergency response and applies them consistently.

45.5.13 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on business continuity and emergency response and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.5.14 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

45.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on business continuity and emergency response and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on business continuity and emergency response.

45.5.16 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.5.17 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to business continuity and emergency response within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

45.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to business continuity and emergency response within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.5.19 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to business continuity and emergency response within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to business continuity and emergency response within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to business continuity and emergency response to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.5.22 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to business continuity and emergency response to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

45.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.5.24 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

45.5.25 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on business continuity and emergency response.

45.5.26 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on business continuity and emergency response and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.5.27 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on business continuity and emergency response and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.5.28 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to business continuity and emergency response within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.5.29 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on business continuity and emergency response. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.5.30 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to business continuity and emergency response within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to business continuity and emergency response to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

45.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

45.5.32 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on business continuity and emergency response and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to business continuity and emergency response within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

45.5.33 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on business continuity and emergency response and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

45.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with business continuity and emergency response in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

45.6.2 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to business continuity and emergency response and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.6.3 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.6.4 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to business continuity and emergency response. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.6.5 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with business continuity and emergency response in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.6.6 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.6.7 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to business continuity and emergency response and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.6.8 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.6.9 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.6.10 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with business continuity and emergency response in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.6.11 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.6.12 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to business continuity and emergency response and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to business continuity and emergency response.

45.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.6.15 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for business continuity and emergency response and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall respond to every written query on business continuity and emergency response within 5 working days of receipt.

45.6.16 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to business continuity and emergency response and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.6.17 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with business continuity and emergency response in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

45.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to business continuity and emergency response. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

45.6.19 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to business continuity and emergency response and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

45.6.20 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for business continuity and emergency response and shall make them available to all employees.

45.6.21 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to business continuity and emergency response and on the applicable legal requirements.

45.6.22 HR shall respond to every written query on business continuity and emergency response within 30 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with business continuity and emergency response in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

45.6.23 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to business continuity and emergency response. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.6.24 HR shall respond to every written query on business continuity and emergency response within 14 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

45.6.25 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for business continuity and emergency response and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.6.26 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

45.6.27 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

45.6.28 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to business continuity and emergency response and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.6.29 HR shall respond to every written query on business continuity and emergency response within 5 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.6.30 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.6.31 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for business continuity and emergency response and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

45.6.32 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to business continuity and emergency response. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.6.33 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.7 Procedure and Process Steps

45.7.1 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 30 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

45.7.4 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

45.7.5 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.7.6 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

45.7.7 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.7.8 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.7.9 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.7.10 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

45.7.11 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it.

45.7.12 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

45.7.13 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 10 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.7.15 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

45.7.16 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

45.7.17 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.7.18 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 10 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

45.7.19 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it.

45.7.20 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The employee shall initiate the process relating to business continuity and emergency response by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner.

45.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 15 working days of receiving it.

45.7.23 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 30 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The employee shall initiate the process relating to business continuity and emergency response by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager.

45.7.24 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

45.7.25 The employee shall initiate the process relating to business continuity and emergency response by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.7.26 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.7.27 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

45.7.28 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

45.7.29 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.7.30 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

45.7.31 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.7.32 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 2 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.7.33 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

45.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

45.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to business continuity and emergency response that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.8.2 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to business continuity and emergency response that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.8.3 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

45.8.4 All documents relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

45.8.5 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to business continuity and emergency response that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.8.6 Records relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.8.7 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.8.8 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

45.8.9 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.8.10 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.8.11 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.8.12 All documents relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

45.8.13 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

45.8.14 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

45.8.15 Records relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.8.16 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.8.17 All documents relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

45.8.18 All documents relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

45.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. All documents relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

45.8.20 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

45.8.21 Records relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.8.22 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.8.23 All documents relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

45.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to business continuity and emergency response that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

45.8.25 Records relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

45.8.26 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

45.8.27 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to business continuity and emergency response that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.8.28 Records relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

45.8.29 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

45.8.30 Records relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

45.8.31 Records relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.8.32 All documents relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.8.33 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

45.9.1 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

45.9.2 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.9.3 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.9.4 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

45.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

45.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

45.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

45.9.8 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.9.9 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Exceptions to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

45.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

45.9.12 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

45.9.13 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.9.14 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

45.9.16 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.9.17 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.9.18 Exceptions to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.9.19 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.9.21 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.9.22 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

45.9.23 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

45.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

45.9.26 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

45.9.27 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Exceptions to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

45.9.28 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.9.29 Exceptions to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

45.9.31 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.9.32 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

45.10.1 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.10.2 Compliance with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

45.10.3 Compliance with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.10.4 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.10.5 An internal audit of business continuity and emergency response shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.10.6 Compliance with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

45.10.7 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.10.8 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.10.9 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.10.10 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

45.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.10.12 Compliance data relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

45.10.13 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.10.14 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response.

45.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.10.16 Compliance with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Compliance with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

45.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response.

45.10.19 Compliance with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.10.20 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Compliance data relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

45.10.21 Where an external regulator requests information concerning business continuity and emergency response, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.10.22 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Compliance with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

45.10.24 An internal audit of business continuity and emergency response shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

45.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning business continuity and emergency response, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

45.10.27 Compliance with the provisions on business continuity and emergency response shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.10.28 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.10.29 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response.

45.10.30 Compliance data relating to business continuity and emergency response shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response.

45.10.31 Where an external regulator requests information concerning business continuity and emergency response, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

45.10.32 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.10.33 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to business continuity and emergency response. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

45.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.11.2 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

45.11.4 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.11.5 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

45.11.6 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.11.7 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

45.11.9 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

45.11.10 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

45.11.11 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

45.11.12 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

45.11.13 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

45.11.14 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to business continuity and emergency response shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.11.15 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

45.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

45.11.17 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

45.11.18 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

45.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to business continuity and emergency response shall be treated as serious misconduct.

45.11.21 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

45.11.22 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.11.23 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

45.11.24 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

45.11.25 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.11.26 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

45.11.27 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

45.11.28 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to business continuity and emergency response shall be treated as serious misconduct.

45.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

45.11.31 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.11.32 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

45.11.33 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to business continuity and emergency response shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

45.12 Review and Amendment

45.12.1 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect.

45.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

45.12.3 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

45.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

45.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

45.12.7 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.12.8 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

45.12.9 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

45.12.10 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

45.12.11 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

45.12.13 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

45.12.14 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

45.12.15 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.12.16 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

45.12.17 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.12.18 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

45.12.19 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

45.12.20 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect.

45.12.21 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

45.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

45.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.12.24 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

45.12.25 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to business continuity and emergency response, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

45.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

45.12.27 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

45.12.28 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect.

45.12.29 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

45.12.30 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

45.12.31 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on business continuity and emergency response through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect.

45.12.32 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

45.12.33 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to business continuity and emergency response made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

Chapter 46

Drug and Alcohol Policy

46.1 Purpose and Scope

46.1.1 The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

46.1.2 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to drug and alcohol policy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

46.1.4 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to drug and alcohol policy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.1.5 The objective of these provisions on drug and alcohol policy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.1.7 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on drug and alcohol policy. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

46.1.9 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to drug and alcohol policy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.1.10 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.1.11 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.1.12 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.1.13 The objective of these provisions on drug and alcohol policy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.1.14 The objective of these provisions on drug and alcohol policy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

46.1.15 The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.1.16 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on drug and alcohol policy. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.1.17 The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on drug and alcohol policy.

46.1.18 The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.1.19 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

46.1.20 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

46.1.21 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.1.22 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

46.1.23 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on drug and alcohol policy.

46.1.24 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.1.25 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.1.26 The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.1.27 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on drug and alcohol policy.

46.1.28 The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

46.1.29 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

46.1.30 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

46.1.31 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to drug and alcohol policy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

46.1.32 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to drug and alcohol policy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

46.1.33 The Company recognises that drug and alcohol policy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.2 Definitions and Interpretation

46.2.1 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

46.2.2 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "drug and alcohol policy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

46.2.3 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to drug and alcohol policy. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

46.2.5 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

46.2.6 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to drug and alcohol policy.

46.2.7 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "drug and alcohol policy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

46.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to drug and alcohol policy. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "drug and alcohol policy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

46.2.10 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

46.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

46.2.13 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

46.2.14 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

46.2.15 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to drug and alcohol policy.

46.2.16 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "drug and alcohol policy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.2.17 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.2.18 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "drug and alcohol policy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

46.2.19 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.2.21 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "drug and alcohol policy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

46.2.22 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

46.2.23 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

46.2.24 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

46.2.25 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "drug and alcohol policy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.2.26 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.2.27 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

46.2.28 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

46.2.29 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

46.2.30 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "drug and alcohol policy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

46.2.31 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to drug and alcohol policy.

46.2.32 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "drug and alcohol policy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

46.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

46.3 Eligibility and Applicability

46.3.1 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for drug and alcohol policy restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

46.3.2 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.3.4 Eligibility for drug and alcohol policy shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

46.3.6 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for drug and alcohol policy restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

46.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.3.8 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.3.9 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.3.11 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy.

46.3.13 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for drug and alcohol policy restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

46.3.14 Eligibility for drug and alcohol policy shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.3.15 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

46.3.16 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Eligibility for drug and alcohol policy shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

46.3.17 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for drug and alcohol policy restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.3.19 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

46.3.20 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

46.3.21 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.3.23 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

46.3.24 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.3.25 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.3.26 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

46.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.3.28 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for drug and alcohol policy restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

46.3.29 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

46.3.30 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

46.3.31 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.3.32 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

46.3.33 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on drug and alcohol policy.

46.4 Responsibilities of Employees

46.4.1 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with drug and alcohol policy.

46.4.2 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with drug and alcohol policy. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.4.3 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of drug and alcohol policy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

46.4.4 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

46.4.5 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

46.4.6 The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

46.4.7 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

46.4.8 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to drug and alcohol policy and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

46.4.9 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

46.4.10 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.4.12 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to drug and alcohol policy and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to drug and alcohol policy and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

46.4.14 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

46.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

46.4.16 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of drug and alcohol policy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

46.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of drug and alcohol policy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

46.4.18 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to drug and alcohol policy and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

46.4.19 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy and shall comply with them at all times. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.4.20 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Head of Department at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

46.4.21 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy and shall comply with them at all times.

46.4.22 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with drug and alcohol policy.

46.4.23 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with drug and alcohol policy. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to drug and alcohol policy and shall not withhold material facts.

46.4.24 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of drug and alcohol policy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

46.4.25 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

46.4.26 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to drug and alcohol policy and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

46.4.27 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with drug and alcohol policy. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.4.28 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with drug and alcohol policy. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.4.29 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

46.4.30 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

46.4.31 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.4.32 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to drug and alcohol policy and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.4.33 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

46.5.1 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to drug and alcohol policy to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

46.5.2 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on drug and alcohol policy and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

46.5.3 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on drug and alcohol policy and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to drug and alcohol policy to the HR Director without undue delay.

46.5.4 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on drug and alcohol policy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

46.5.5 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on drug and alcohol policy. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

46.5.6 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to drug and alcohol policy to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

46.5.7 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

46.5.8 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to drug and alcohol policy within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.5.9 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.5.10 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.5.11 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on drug and alcohol policy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

46.5.12 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on drug and alcohol policy.

46.5.13 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to drug and alcohol policy to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on drug and alcohol policy.

46.5.14 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on drug and alcohol policy. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.5.15 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to drug and alcohol policy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to drug and alcohol policy to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

46.5.16 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.5.17 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on drug and alcohol policy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

46.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to drug and alcohol policy within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

46.5.19 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on drug and alcohol policy and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to drug and alcohol policy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

46.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to drug and alcohol policy to the Policy Committee without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.5.22 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on drug and alcohol policy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on drug and alcohol policy and applies them consistently.

46.5.24 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

46.5.25 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on drug and alcohol policy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

46.5.26 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.5.27 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to drug and alcohol policy to the HR Director without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to drug and alcohol policy to the HR Director without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

46.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.5.30 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on drug and alcohol policy and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.5.31 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on drug and alcohol policy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.5.32 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.5.33 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on drug and alcohol policy and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

46.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

46.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.6.2 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall respond to every written query on drug and alcohol policy within 7 working days of receipt.

46.6.3 HR shall respond to every written query on drug and alcohol policy within 14 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.6.4 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for drug and alcohol policy and shall make them available to all employees.

46.6.5 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall respond to every written query on drug and alcohol policy within 3 working days of receipt.

46.6.6 HR shall respond to every written query on drug and alcohol policy within 5 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

46.6.7 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to drug and alcohol policy. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

46.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to drug and alcohol policy and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

46.6.9 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for drug and alcohol policy and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.6.11 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.6.12 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to drug and alcohol policy and on the applicable legal requirements.

46.6.13 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

46.6.14 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for drug and alcohol policy and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.6.15 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.6.16 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for drug and alcohol policy and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.6.17 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.6.18 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for drug and alcohol policy and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

46.6.19 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

46.6.20 HR shall respond to every written query on drug and alcohol policy within 21 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.6.21 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for drug and alcohol policy and shall make them available to all employees.

46.6.22 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to drug and alcohol policy. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

46.6.23 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

46.6.24 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to drug and alcohol policy. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.6.25 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.6.26 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to drug and alcohol policy and on the applicable legal requirements.

46.6.27 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for drug and alcohol policy and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.6.28 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for drug and alcohol policy and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

46.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

46.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

46.6.31 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.6.33 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with drug and alcohol policy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

46.7 Procedure and Process Steps

46.7.1 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.7.2 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.7.3 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 7 working days of receiving it.

46.7.4 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 30 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.7.5 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The employee shall initiate the process relating to drug and alcohol policy by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team.

46.7.6 The employee shall initiate the process relating to drug and alcohol policy by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

46.7.7 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

46.7.8 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

46.7.9 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The employee shall initiate the process relating to drug and alcohol policy by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department.

46.7.10 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

46.7.11 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

46.7.12 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

46.7.13 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.7.14 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.7.15 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

46.7.16 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.7.17 The employee shall initiate the process relating to drug and alcohol policy by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.7.18 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to drug and alcohol policy by submitting the prescribed form to the Line Manager. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

46.7.20 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

46.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

46.7.22 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The employee shall initiate the process relating to drug and alcohol policy by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department.

46.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to drug and alcohol policy by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager.

46.7.24 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

46.7.25 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

46.7.27 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 21 working days of receiving it.

46.7.28 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.7.29 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

46.7.30 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.7.31 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it.

46.7.32 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

46.7.33 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it.

46.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

46.8.1 Records relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.8.2 Records relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

46.8.3 All documents relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

46.8.4 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

46.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

46.8.6 Records relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

46.8.7 All documents relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.8.8 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. All documents relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

46.8.9 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

46.8.10 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

46.8.11 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

46.8.12 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

46.8.13 Records relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

46.8.14 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. All documents relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

46.8.15 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.8.16 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.8.17 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

46.8.18 Records relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

46.8.20 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.8.21 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

46.8.22 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

46.8.23 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

46.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

46.8.25 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

46.8.26 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.8.27 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. All documents relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

46.8.28 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to drug and alcohol policy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

46.8.29 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.8.30 Records relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

46.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.8.32 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

46.8.33 Records relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

46.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

46.9.2 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.9.3 Exceptions to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.9.4 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.9.6 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.9.7 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

46.9.8 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.9.9 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

46.9.11 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Exceptions to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

46.9.12 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.9.13 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

46.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.9.15 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.9.16 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.9.17 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

46.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

46.9.19 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.9.20 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

46.9.21 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.9.22 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.9.23 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

46.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.9.26 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.9.27 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

46.9.28 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

46.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

46.9.30 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.9.31 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Exceptions to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

46.9.33 Exceptions to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

46.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

46.10.1 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.10.2 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to drug and alcohol policy. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.10.3 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.10.4 An internal audit of drug and alcohol policy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.10.5 Compliance data relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.10.6 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Compliance with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

46.10.7 Where an external regulator requests information concerning drug and alcohol policy, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

46.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

46.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to drug and alcohol policy. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.10.10 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to drug and alcohol policy. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

46.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to drug and alcohol policy.

46.10.12 Where an external regulator requests information concerning drug and alcohol policy, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Compliance data relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

46.10.13 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to drug and alcohol policy. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

46.10.14 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

46.10.15 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

46.10.16 Compliance with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

46.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

46.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to drug and alcohol policy. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.10.19 Where an external regulator requests information concerning drug and alcohol policy, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

46.10.20 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. An internal audit of drug and alcohol policy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

46.10.21 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Compliance data relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

46.10.22 Compliance data relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where an external regulator requests information concerning drug and alcohol policy, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

46.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to drug and alcohol policy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.10.24 Compliance with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.10.25 An internal audit of drug and alcohol policy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.10.26 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.10.27 Compliance data relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

46.10.28 An internal audit of drug and alcohol policy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

46.10.29 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.10.31 Compliance with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

46.10.32 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to drug and alcohol policy. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.10.33 Compliance data relating to drug and alcohol policy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

46.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

46.11.1 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

46.11.2 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

46.11.3 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

46.11.4 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

46.11.5 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

46.11.6 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.11.7 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A failure to comply with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

46.11.8 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

46.11.9 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to drug and alcohol policy shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to drug and alcohol policy shall be treated as serious misconduct.

46.11.12 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.11.13 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.11.14 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant,

shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

46.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.11.16 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to drug and alcohol policy shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

46.11.17 A failure to comply with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

46.11.18 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

46.11.19 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.11.20 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.11.21 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to drug and alcohol policy shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

46.11.22 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to drug and alcohol policy shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

46.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by

HR.

46.11.24 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

46.11.25 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.11.26 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

46.11.28 A failure to comply with the provisions on drug and alcohol policy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to drug and alcohol policy shall be treated as serious misconduct.

46.11.29 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.11.30 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

46.11.31 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.11.32 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

46.11.33 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.12 Review and Amendment

46.12.1 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.12.2 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

46.12.3 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

46.12.4 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

46.12.5 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

46.12.6 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

46.12.7 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.12.8 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.12.9 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

46.12.10 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

46.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

46.12.12 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

46.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

46.12.14 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

46.12.15 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

46.12.16 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

46.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

46.12.18 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

46.12.19 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

46.12.20 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

46.12.21 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to drug and alcohol policy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

46.12.22 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.12.23 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

46.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

46.12.25 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

46.12.26 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

46.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

46.12.28 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on drug and alcohol policy through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

46.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

46.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

46.12.31 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

46.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to drug and alcohol policy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

46.12.33 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

Chapter 47

Dress Code and Personal Presentation

47.1 Purpose and Scope

47.1.1 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

47.1.2 The Company recognises that dress code and personal presentation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

47.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to dress code and personal presentation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

47.1.4 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to dress code and personal presentation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

47.1.5 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The objective of these provisions on dress code and personal presentation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

47.1.6 The Company recognises that dress code and personal presentation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on dress code and personal presentation.

47.1.7 The Company recognises that dress code and personal presentation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.1.8 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.1.10 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company recognises that dress code and personal presentation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

47.1.11 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to dress code and personal presentation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.1.12 The objective of these provisions on dress code and personal presentation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.1.13 The Company recognises that dress code and personal presentation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.1.14 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.1.15 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

47.1.16 The objective of these provisions on dress code and personal presentation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company recognises that dress code and personal presentation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

47.1.17 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on dress code and personal presentation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

47.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.1.19 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.1.20 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to dress code and personal presentation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.1.21 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on dress code and personal presentation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

47.1.22 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.1.23 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to dress code and personal presentation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

47.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on dress code and personal presentation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.1.25 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.1.26 The Company recognises that dress code and personal presentation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.1.27 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.1.28 The objective of these provisions on dress code and personal presentation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

47.1.29 The Company recognises that dress code and personal presentation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

47.1.30 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to dress code and personal presentation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.1.31 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.1.32 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on dress code and personal presentation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on dress code and personal presentation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

47.2 Definitions and Interpretation

47.2.1 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to dress code and personal presentation. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

47.2.2 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to dress code and personal presentation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.2.3 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.2.5 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

47.2.6 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "dress code and personal presentation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

47.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to dress code and personal presentation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

47.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "dress code and personal presentation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.2.10 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to dress code and personal presentation. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.2.11 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to dress code and personal presentation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.2.13 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.2.14 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.2.15 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to dress code and personal presentation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.2.16 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.2.17 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.2.18 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

47.2.19 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

47.2.21 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.2.22 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "dress code and personal presentation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

47.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to dress code and personal presentation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.2.24 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.2.25 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "dress code and personal presentation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

47.2.26 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.2.27 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "dress code and personal presentation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.2.28 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

47.2.29 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

47.2.30 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

47.2.31 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.2.32 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to dress code and personal presentation.

47.2.33 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.3 Eligibility and Applicability

47.3.1 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

47.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.3.3 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on dress code and personal presentation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

47.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

47.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.3.7 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on dress code and personal presentation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for dress code and personal presentation restricted until the matter is concluded.

47.3.9 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.3.10 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for dress code and personal presentation restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.3.11 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.3.12 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on dress code and personal presentation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.3.13 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for dress code and personal presentation restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Eligibility for dress code and personal presentation shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

47.3.14 Eligibility for dress code and personal presentation shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.3.15 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

47.3.16 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.3.17 Eligibility for dress code and personal presentation shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

47.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on dress code and personal presentation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.3.19 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

47.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

47.3.22 Eligibility for dress code and personal presentation shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.3.23 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for dress code and personal presentation restricted until the matter is concluded.

47.3.24 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on dress code and personal presentation. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

47.3.25 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on dress code and personal presentation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.3.26 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

47.3.27 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.3.28 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on dress code and personal presentation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

47.3.29 Eligibility for dress code and personal presentation shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.3.30 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

47.3.31 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.3.32 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility for dress code and personal presentation shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

47.3.33 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.4 Responsibilities of Employees

47.4.1 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and shall comply with them at all times.

47.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of dress code and personal presentation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

47.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.4.4 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of dress code and personal presentation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

47.4.6 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

47.4.7 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.4.8 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to dress code and personal presentation and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.4.9 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

47.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of dress code and personal presentation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

47.4.11 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with dress code and personal presentation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and shall comply with them at all times.

47.4.12 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of dress code and personal presentation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

47.4.13 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and shall comply with them at all times. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.4.14 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

47.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and shall comply with them at all times.

47.4.16 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of dress code and personal presentation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.4.17 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.4.18 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

47.4.19 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

47.4.20 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

47.4.21 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to dress code and personal presentation and shall not withhold material facts.

47.4.22 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with dress code and personal presentation. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

47.4.23 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and shall comply with them at all times. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of dress code and personal presentation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

47.4.24 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.4.25 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to dress code and personal presentation and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the

HR Director.

47.4.26 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

47.4.27 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.4.28 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of dress code and personal presentation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to dress code and personal presentation and shall not withhold material facts.

47.4.30 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of dress code and personal presentation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with dress code and personal presentation.

47.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.4.33 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

47.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

47.5.1 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to dress code and personal presentation within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.5.3 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and applies them consistently.

47.5.4 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and applies them consistently. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

47.5.5 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on dress code and personal presentation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

47.5.6 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on dress code and personal presentation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.5.7 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and applies them consistently.

47.5.8 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to dress code and personal presentation to the HR Director without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.5.9 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to dress code and personal presentation within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

47.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to dress code and personal presentation to the HR Director without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.5.11 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

47.5.12 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on dress code and personal presentation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.5.13 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on dress code and personal presentation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

47.5.14 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on dress code and personal presentation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on dress code and personal presentation.

47.5.15 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

47.5.16 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.5.17 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to dress code and personal presentation within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.5.18 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to dress code and personal presentation to the HR Director without undue delay.

47.5.19 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to dress code and personal presentation to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.5.20 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on dress code and personal presentation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.5.21 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on dress code and personal presentation and applies them consistently.

47.5.22 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.5.23 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on dress code and personal presentation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to dress code and personal presentation to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

47.5.25 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

47.5.26 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.5.27 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to dress code and personal presentation to the HR Director without undue delay.

47.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on dress code and personal presentation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on dress code and personal presentation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

47.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.5.30 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to dress code and personal presentation within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on dress code and personal presentation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

47.5.31 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on dress code and personal presentation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.5.32 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.5.33 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to dress code and personal presentation to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

47.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

47.6.1 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.6.2 HR shall respond to every written query on dress code and personal presentation within 5 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.6.3 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to dress code and personal presentation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

47.6.4 HR shall respond to every written query on dress code and personal presentation within 10 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with dress code and personal presentation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

47.6.5 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for dress code and personal presentation and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.6.6 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to dress code and personal presentation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall respond to every written query on dress code and personal presentation within 30 working days of receipt.

47.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with dress code and personal presentation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.6.8 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to dress code and personal presentation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.6.9 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for dress code and personal presentation and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.6.10 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.6.11 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to dress code and personal presentation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.6.12 HR shall respond to every written query on dress code and personal presentation within 30 working days of receipt. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

47.6.13 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with dress code and personal presentation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.6.15 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to dress code and personal presentation and on the applicable legal requirements.

47.6.16 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to dress code and personal presentation. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.6.18 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for dress code and personal presentation and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

47.6.19 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to dress code and personal presentation. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

47.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

47.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on dress code and personal presentation within 7 working days of receipt.

47.6.22 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.6.23 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to dress code and personal presentation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

47.6.24 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with dress code and personal presentation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

47.6.25 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to dress code and personal presentation and on the applicable legal requirements. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

47.6.26 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. HR shall respond to every written query on dress code and personal presentation within 30 working days of receipt.

47.6.27 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for dress code and personal presentation and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.6.29 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to dress code and personal presentation and on the applicable legal requirements. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.6.30 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.6.31 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to dress code and personal presentation and on the applicable legal requirements.

47.6.32 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to dress code and personal presentation and on the applicable legal requirements.

47.6.33 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to dress code and personal presentation and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall respond to every written query on dress code and personal presentation within 7 working days of receipt.

47.7 Procedure and Process Steps

47.7.1 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

47.7.2 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 14 working days of receiving it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.7.3 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

47.7.4 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

47.7.5 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.7.6 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.7.7 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.7.8 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

47.7.9 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

47.7.10 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

47.7.11 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

47.7.12 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.7.13 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 10 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

47.7.15 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

47.7.16 The employee shall initiate the process relating to dress code and personal presentation by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.7.17 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.7.18 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it.

47.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to dress code and personal presentation by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

47.7.20 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

47.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

47.7.22 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

47.7.23 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.7.24 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line

Manager.

47.7.25 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.7.26 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 30 working days of receiving it.

47.7.27 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.7.28 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.7.29 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.7.30 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

47.7.31 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

47.7.32 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

47.7.33 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

47.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

47.8.1 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.8.2 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to dress code and personal presentation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.8.3 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.8.4 All documents relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

47.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to dress code and personal presentation that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

47.8.6 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

47.8.7 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.8.8 Records relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.8.9 All documents relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

47.8.10 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to dress code and personal presentation that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

47.8.11 All documents relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

47.8.12 Records relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

47.8.13 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.8.14 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.8.16 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

47.8.17 Records relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.8.18 All documents relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.8.19 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

47.8.20 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.8.21 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

47.8.23 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to dress code and personal presentation that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

47.8.24 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

47.8.25 Records relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.8.26 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. All documents relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

47.8.27 All documents relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.8.28 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Records relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

47.8.29 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

47.8.30 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.8.31 All documents relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.8.32 Records relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

47.8.33 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

47.9.1 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

47.9.2 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.9.3 Exceptions to the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

47.9.6 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

47.9.8 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.9.9 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.9.10 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.9.11 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.9.12 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.9.13 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.9.14 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

47.9.15 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.9.16 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

47.9.17 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Exceptions to the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

47.9.19 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

47.9.20 Exceptions to the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.9.22 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.9.26 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.9.27 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

47.9.28 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.9.29 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice.

47.9.30 Exceptions to the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

47.9.31 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

47.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

47.9.33 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

47.10.1 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.10.2 Compliance data relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

47.10.3 Compliance with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.10.4 Compliance data relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.10.5 Compliance with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People

Officer.

47.10.6 An internal audit of dress code and personal presentation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

47.10.7 Compliance with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Compliance data relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

47.10.8 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to dress code and personal presentation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to dress code and personal presentation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.10.10 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.10.11 Compliance with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.10.12 An internal audit of dress code and personal presentation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.10.13 Compliance data relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

47.10.14 An internal audit of dress code and personal presentation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

47.10.15 An internal audit of dress code and personal presentation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. An internal audit of dress code and personal presentation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

47.10.17 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

47.10.18 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.10.19 An internal audit of dress code and personal presentation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

47.10.20 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

47.10.21 Where an external regulator requests information concerning dress code and personal presentation, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

47.10.22 Where an external regulator requests information concerning dress code and personal presentation, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Compliance data relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

47.10.23 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

47.10.24 Compliance data relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

47.10.25 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

47.10.26 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

47.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to dress code and personal presentation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

47.10.28 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to dress code and personal presentation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An internal audit of dress code and personal presentation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

47.10.29 Where an external regulator requests information concerning dress code and personal presentation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.10.30 Compliance data relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Compliance with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

47.10.31 Compliance with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Compliance data relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

47.10.32 Where an external regulator requests information concerning dress code and personal presentation, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Compliance data relating to dress code and personal presentation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

47.10.33 Where an external regulator requests information concerning dress code and personal presentation, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Compliance with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

47.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

47.11.1 A failure to comply with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.11.2 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to dress code and personal presentation shall be treated as serious misconduct.

47.11.3 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to dress code and personal presentation shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

47.11.4 A failure to comply with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

47.11.5 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

47.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to dress code and personal presentation shall be treated as serious misconduct. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

47.11.7 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.11.8 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

47.11.9 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

47.11.10 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.11.11 A failure to comply with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.11.12 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to dress code and personal presentation shall be treated as serious misconduct.

47.11.14 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.11.16 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A failure to comply with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

47.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

47.11.18 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

47.11.20 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.11.21 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

47.11.22 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

47.11.23 A failure to comply with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.11.24 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

47.11.25 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to dress code and personal presentation shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

47.11.26 A failure to comply with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.11.27 A failure to comply with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

47.11.28 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

47.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.11.30 A failure to comply with the provisions on dress code and personal presentation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.11.31 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.11.32 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

47.11.33 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

47.12 Review and Amendment

47.12.1 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

47.12.2 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

47.12.3 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

47.12.4 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on dress code and personal presentation through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.12.5 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

47.12.6 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

47.12.7 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.12.8 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.12.9 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

47.12.10 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

47.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

47.12.13 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

47.12.14 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.12.15 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on dress code and personal presentation through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect.

47.12.16 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

47.12.17 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.12.18 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

47.12.19 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

47.12.20 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

47.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

47.12.22 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

47.12.24 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.12.25 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

47.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

47.12.27 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

47.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. As an illustration, a request relating to dress code and personal presentation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

47.12.29 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.12.30 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

47.12.31 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

47.12.32 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to dress code and personal presentation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

47.12.33 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.