Northwind Global Services Ltd.

HUMAN RESOURCES POLICY MANUAL

Version 1.0

Effective from 01 April 2023

Applicable to all employees of the Company

Classification: Internal / Confidential

This is a sample document with fictitious content, prepared for illustration and testing. It is not legal advice and does not reflect the policy of any real organisation.

Document Control

Version	Effective date	Status	Description of change
1.0	01 April 2023	Current	First consolidated release of the HR Policy Manual.

Document owner	Head of Human Resources
Approved by	Policy Committee and Managing Director
Review cycle	Every 12 months
Contact	hr.policy@northwind.example

Contents

Chapter 1 Introduction and Governance
Chapter 2 Equal Opportunity and Diversity
Chapter 3 Recruitment and Selection
Chapter 4 Employment Contracts and Onboarding
Chapter 5 Probation and Confirmation
Chapter 6 Working Hours and Attendance
Chapter 7 Overtime and Shift Work
Chapter 8 Annual Leave
Chapter 9 Sick Leave and Medical Absence
Chapter 10 Parental Leave
Chapter 11 Public Holidays and Special Leave
Chapter 12 Compensation and Pay Administration
Chapter 13 Benefits and Allowances
Chapter 14 Travel and Expense Reimbursement
Chapter 15 Performance Management
Chapter 16 Learning and Development
Chapter 17 Career Progression and Promotions
Chapter 18 Code of Conduct
Chapter 19 Conflict of Interest
Chapter 20 Anti-Harassment and Anti-Bullying
Chapter 21 Grievance Handling Chapter 22 Disciplinary Procedures
Chapter 23 Whistleblowing
Chapter 24 Health and Safety
Chapter 25 Information Security and Acceptable Use
Chapter 26 Data Protection and Employee Privacy
Chapter 27 Social Media and Communications
Chapter 28 Company Assets and Equipment
Chapter 29 Transfers and Relocation
Chapter 30 Secondments and Deputation
Chapter 31 Resignation and Notice
Chapter 32 Termination and Redundancy
Chapter 33 Exit and Offboarding
Chapter 34 Retirement and Post-Employment Obligations
Chapter 35 Contractors and Temporary Staff
Chapter 36 Employee Recognition and Rewards
Chapter 37 Employee Wellbeing

Chapter 38 Conduct at Company Events
Chapter 39 Remote Work (Exceptional Cases)
Chapter 40 Biometric Attendance System
Chapter 41 Company Housing Scheme
Chapter 42 Employee Referral Programme
Chapter 43 Employee Representation and Consultation
Chapter 44 Workplace Investigations
Chapter 45 Business Continuity and Emergency Response
Chapter 46 Drug and Alcohol Policy
Chapter 47 Dress Code and Personal Presentation

Use the PDF bookmarks panel to jump to any chapter or section.

Chapter 1

Introduction and Governance

1.1 Purpose and Scope

1.1.1 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to introduction and governance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

1.1.2 The Company recognises that introduction and governance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to introduction and governance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

1.1.3 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on introduction and governance. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.1.4 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.1.5 The Company recognises that introduction and governance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.1.6 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to introduction and governance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

1.1.7 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

1.1.8 The objective of these provisions on introduction and governance is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.1.9 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

1.1.10 The objective of these provisions on introduction and governance is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

1.1.11 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to introduction and governance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.1.12 The Company recognises that introduction and governance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

1.1.13 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

1.1.14 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The objective of these provisions on introduction and governance is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

1.1.15 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on introduction and governance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

1.1.16 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to introduction and governance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.1.17 The objective of these provisions on introduction and governance is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.1.19 The Company recognises that introduction and governance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.1.20 The Company recognises that introduction and governance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

1.1.21 The Company recognises that introduction and governance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. The objective of these provisions on introduction and governance is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

1.1.22 The objective of these provisions on introduction and governance is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

1.1.23 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to introduction and governance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.1.24 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to introduction and governance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

1.1.25 The Company recognises that introduction and governance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.1.26 The Company recognises that introduction and governance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

1.1.27 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.1.28 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.1.29 The Company recognises that introduction and governance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

1.1.30 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

1.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.1.32 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on introduction and governance. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on introduction and governance. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.2 Definitions and Interpretation

1.2.1 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "introduction and governance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to introduction and governance.

1.2.2 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "introduction and governance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.2.4 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

1.2.5 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "introduction and governance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

1.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

1.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

1.2.8 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

1.2.9 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.2.10 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

1.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.2.12 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

1.2.13 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to introduction and governance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.2.14 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to introduction and governance. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.2.15 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "introduction and governance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

1.2.16 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to introduction and governance. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "introduction and governance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

1.2.17 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

1.2.18 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

1.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

1.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

1.2.21 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.2.22 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

1.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to introduction and governance. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

1.2.24 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to introduction and governance.

1.2.25 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.2.26 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to introduction and governance.

1.2.27 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to introduction and governance. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.2.28 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.2.29 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

1.2.30 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.2.31 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to introduction and governance.

1.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.3 Eligibility and Applicability

1.3.1 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

1.3.2 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.3.4 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.3.5 Eligibility for introduction and governance shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for introduction and governance restricted until the matter is concluded.

1.3.6 Eligibility for introduction and governance shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

1.3.7 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility for introduction and governance shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

1.3.8 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

1.3.9 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.3.10 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

1.3.11 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.3.13 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Eligibility for introduction and governance shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

1.3.14 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.3.15 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.3.16 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.3.17 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

1.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on introduction and governance. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

1.3.19 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for introduction and governance restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.3.20 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.3.21 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.3.22 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on introduction and governance.

1.3.23 Eligibility for introduction and governance shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.3.24 Eligibility for introduction and governance shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

1.3.25 Eligibility for introduction and governance shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.3.26 Eligibility for introduction and governance shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

1.3.27 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

1.3.28 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.3.29 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

1.3.30 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.3.31 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.3.32 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.3.33 Eligibility for introduction and governance shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.4 Responsibilities of Employees

1.4.1 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of introduction and governance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

1.4.2 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

1.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to introduction and governance and shall not withhold material facts.

1.4.4 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.4.5 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

1.4.6 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on introduction and governance and shall comply with them at all times.

1.4.7 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

1.4.8 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

1.4.9 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

1.4.10 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.4.12 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.4.13 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of introduction and governance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.4.15 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on introduction and governance and shall comply with them at all times.

1.4.16 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to introduction and governance and shall not withhold material facts. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

1.4.17 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of introduction and governance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

1.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of introduction and governance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

1.4.20 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

1.4.21 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.4.22 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of introduction and governance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

1.4.23 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to introduction and governance and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.4.24 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to introduction and governance and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on introduction and governance and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance.

1.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.4.27 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.4.28 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to introduction and governance and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

1.4.29 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on introduction and governance and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of introduction and governance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

1.4.30 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on introduction and governance and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with introduction and governance. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

1.4.32 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.4.33 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to introduction and governance and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

1.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

1.5.1 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to introduction and governance within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

1.5.2 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on introduction and governance and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.5.3 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

1.5.4 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on introduction and governance and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.5.5 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on introduction and governance and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

1.5.6 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to introduction and governance to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.5.7 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.5.8 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.5.9 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on introduction and governance and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

1.5.10 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.5.11 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to introduction and governance within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.5.12 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to introduction and governance within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

1.5.13 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on introduction and governance and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

1.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on introduction and governance and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

1.5.15 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to introduction and governance within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

1.5.16 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

1.5.17 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

1.5.18 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to introduction and governance within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

1.5.19 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on introduction and governance. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.5.20 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on introduction and governance. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to introduction and governance to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

1.5.21 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to introduction and governance within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on introduction and governance and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

1.5.22 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on introduction and governance and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

1.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on introduction and governance.

1.5.25 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

1.5.26 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to introduction and governance to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on introduction and governance. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on introduction and governance and applies them consistently.

1.5.28 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on introduction and governance and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.5.29 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on introduction and governance and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

1.5.30 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to introduction and governance to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

1.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.5.32 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on introduction and governance and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

1.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to introduction and governance within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

1.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with introduction and governance in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.6.2 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for introduction and governance and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to introduction and governance.

1.6.3 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with introduction and governance in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.6.4 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to introduction and governance. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

1.6.5 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to introduction and governance. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.6.6 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to introduction and governance. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.6.7 HR shall respond to every written query on introduction and governance within 5 working days of receipt.

1.6.8 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

1.6.9 HR shall respond to every written query on introduction and governance within 21 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

1.6.10 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with introduction and governance in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for introduction and governance and shall make them available to all employees.

1.6.12 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to introduction and governance and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

1.6.13 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to introduction and governance.

1.6.14 HR shall respond to every written query on introduction and governance within 5 working days of receipt. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.6.15 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

1.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on introduction and governance within 5 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

1.6.17 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to introduction and governance. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall respond to every written query on introduction and governance within 14 working days of receipt.

1.6.19 HR shall respond to every written query on introduction and governance within 7 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for introduction and governance and shall make them available to all employees.

1.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

1.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on introduction and governance within 15 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

1.6.22 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

1.6.23 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

1.6.24 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with introduction and governance in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.6.25 HR shall respond to every written query on introduction and governance within 10 working days of receipt. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

1.6.26 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.6.27 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for introduction and governance and shall make them available to all employees.

1.6.28 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to introduction and governance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.6.29 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to introduction and governance.

1.6.30 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to introduction and governance and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.6.31 HR shall respond to every written query on introduction and governance within 3 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

1.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with introduction and governance in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

1.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.7 Procedure and Process Steps

1.7.1 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.7.2 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.7.3 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

1.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

1.7.5 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.7.6 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.7.7 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.7.8 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it.

1.7.9 The employee shall initiate the process relating to introduction and governance by submitting a written request to the Line Manager. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

1.7.10 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

1.7.11 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 2 working days of receiving it.

1.7.12 The employee shall initiate the process relating to introduction and governance by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.7.13 The employee shall initiate the process relating to introduction and governance by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.7.14 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 7 working days of receiving it.

1.7.15 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.7.16 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

1.7.17 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.7.18 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.7.19 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.7.20 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

1.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

1.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.7.23 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

1.7.24 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 30 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 10 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.7.26 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.7.27 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

1.7.28 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.7.29 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.7.30 The employee shall initiate the process relating to introduction and governance by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

1.7.31 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

1.7.32 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

1.7.33 The employee shall initiate the process relating to introduction and governance by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

1.8.1 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.8.2 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.8.3 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.8.4 Records relating to introduction and governance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.8.5 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.8.6 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

1.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to introduction and governance that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Records relating to introduction and governance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

1.8.8 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.8.10 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

1.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Records relating to introduction and governance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

1.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.8.14 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to introduction and governance that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records relating to introduction and governance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years.

1.8.15 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

1.8.16 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

1.8.17 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

1.8.18 All documents relating to introduction and governance shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.8.20 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to introduction and governance that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.8.21 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records relating to introduction and governance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

1.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

1.8.23 Records relating to introduction and governance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

1.8.24 All documents relating to introduction and governance shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.8.25 Records relating to introduction and governance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

1.8.26 Records relating to introduction and governance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.8.27 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

1.8.28 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.8.29 All documents relating to introduction and governance shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.8.30 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to introduction and governance that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

1.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

1.8.32 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

1.8.33 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to introduction and governance that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

1.9.1 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.9.2 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

1.9.3 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.9.4 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.9.5 Exceptions to the provisions on introduction and governance may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

1.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

1.9.8 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

1.9.9 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

1.9.11 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

1.9.12 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

1.9.13 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

1.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

1.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

1.9.16 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.9.17 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

1.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.9.19 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.9.20 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on introduction and governance may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

1.9.22 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

1.9.23 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.9.25 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.9.26 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.9.27 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

1.9.28 Exceptions to the provisions on introduction and governance may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.9.29 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

1.9.30 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

1.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on introduction and governance may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.9.32 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

1.9.33 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

1.10.1 Where an external regulator requests information concerning introduction and governance, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.10.2 Compliance with the provisions on introduction and governance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.10.3 An internal audit of introduction and governance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.10.4 Compliance with the provisions on introduction and governance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

1.10.5 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to introduction and governance. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

1.10.7 Compliance data relating to introduction and governance shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.10.8 An internal audit of introduction and governance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

1.10.9 An internal audit of introduction and governance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.10.10 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

1.10.11 Compliance with the provisions on introduction and governance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.10.12 An internal audit of introduction and governance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.10.13 An internal audit of introduction and governance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

1.10.14 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to introduction and governance. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

1.10.15 Compliance with the provisions on introduction and governance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to introduction and governance.

1.10.16 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

1.10.17 Compliance with the provisions on introduction and governance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

1.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to introduction and governance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

1.10.19 Compliance data relating to introduction and governance shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.10.20 Compliance data relating to introduction and governance shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.10.21 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to introduction and governance.

1.10.22 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

1.10.23 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.10.24 An internal audit of introduction and governance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.10.25 Where an external regulator requests information concerning introduction and governance, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.10.27 Where an external regulator requests information concerning introduction and governance, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

1.10.28 Compliance with the provisions on introduction and governance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.10.29 Where an external regulator requests information concerning introduction and governance, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.10.30 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.10.31 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to introduction and governance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.10.32 Compliance data relating to introduction and governance shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

1.10.33 Where an external regulator requests information concerning introduction and governance, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

1.11.1 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

1.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

1.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on introduction and governance may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.11.4 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.11.5 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to introduction and governance shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

1.11.7 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to introduction and governance shall be treated as serious misconduct.

1.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

1.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

1.11.10 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

1.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.11.12 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

1.11.13 A failure to comply with the provisions on introduction and governance may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

1.11.14 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on introduction and governance may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.11.16 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.11.17 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

1.11.18 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

1.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on introduction and governance may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to introduction and governance shall be treated as serious misconduct.

1.11.20 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to introduction and governance shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

1.11.21 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

1.11.22 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to introduction and governance shall be treated as serious misconduct.

1.11.23 A failure to comply with the provisions on introduction and governance may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

1.11.24 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

1.11.25 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to introduction and governance shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

1.11.26 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to introduction and governance shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.11.27 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

1.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

1.11.29 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to introduction and governance shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

1.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

1.11.31 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.11.32 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

1.11.33 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to introduction and governance shall be treated as serious misconduct.

1.12 Review and Amendment

1.12.1 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

1.12.2 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

1.12.3 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.12.4 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

1.12.5 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

1.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to introduction and governance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

1.12.7 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

1.12.8 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.12.9 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

1.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.12.11 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

1.12.12 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

1.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

1.12.14 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

1.12.15 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.12.16 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

1.12.17 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on introduction and governance through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

1.12.18 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

1.12.19 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

1.12.20 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

1.12.21 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

1.12.22 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

1.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

1.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

1.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

1.12.27 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to introduction and governance, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

1.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

1.12.29 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.12.30 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on introduction and governance through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

1.12.31 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

1.12.32 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on introduction and governance through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

1.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

Chapter 2

Equal Opportunity and Diversity

2.1 Purpose and Scope

2.1.1 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.1.2 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to equal opportunity and diversity and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to equal opportunity and diversity and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.1.4 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to equal opportunity and diversity and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.1.5 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to equal opportunity and diversity and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

2.1.6 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

2.1.7 The Company recognises that equal opportunity and diversity has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.1.8 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to equal opportunity and diversity and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. The Company recognises that equal opportunity and diversity has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

2.1.9 The Company recognises that equal opportunity and diversity has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

2.1.10 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.1.11 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on equal opportunity and diversity. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on equal opportunity and diversity. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.1.14 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on equal opportunity and diversity. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

2.1.15 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to equal opportunity and diversity and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

2.1.16 The Company recognises that equal opportunity and diversity has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.1.17 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to equal opportunity and diversity and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

2.1.18 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.1.19 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.1.20 The Company recognises that equal opportunity and diversity has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.1.21 The objective of these provisions on equal opportunity and diversity is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.1.22 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

2.1.23 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company recognises that equal opportunity and diversity has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

2.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on equal opportunity and diversity. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.1.25 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.1.26 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to equal opportunity and diversity and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.1.27 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on equal opportunity and diversity. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

2.1.28 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

2.1.29 The Company recognises that equal opportunity and diversity has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.1.30 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

2.1.31 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.1.32 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on equal opportunity and diversity. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

2.2 Definitions and Interpretation

2.2.1 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "equal opportunity and diversity" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

2.2.2 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

2.2.3 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "equal opportunity and diversity" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.2.4 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to equal opportunity and diversity.

2.2.5 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.2.6 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to equal opportunity and diversity. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

2.2.8 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.2.9 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.2.10 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.2.11 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.2.12 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to equal opportunity and diversity. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

2.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.2.14 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "equal opportunity and diversity" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.2.15 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

2.2.16 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "equal opportunity and diversity" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

2.2.17 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to equal opportunity and diversity. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.2.18 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

2.2.19 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.2.20 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to equal opportunity and diversity. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

2.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.2.22 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

2.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to equal opportunity and diversity. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.2.24 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

2.2.25 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.2.26 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.2.27 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.2.28 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.2.29 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.2.30 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

2.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

2.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

2.2.33 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.3 Eligibility and Applicability

2.3.1 Eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity.

2.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

2.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity.

2.3.4 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded.

2.3.7 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

2.3.8 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

2.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

2.3.12 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

2.3.13 Eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

2.3.14 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.3.15 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.3.16 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.3.17 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

2.3.18 Eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.3.19 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.3.20 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

2.3.21 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

2.3.22 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.3.23 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.3.24 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.3.25 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

2.3.26 Eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded.

2.3.27 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.3.28 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

2.3.29 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

2.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

2.3.31 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for equal opportunity and diversity restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.4 Responsibilities of Employees

2.4.1 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

2.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.4.4 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.4.5 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.4.7 The staff member shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

2.4.8 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.4.9 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of equal opportunity and diversity as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

2.4.11 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.4.12 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

2.4.13 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with equal opportunity and diversity.

2.4.14 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.4.15 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and shall comply with them at all times.

2.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

2.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of equal opportunity and diversity as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.4.18 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with equal opportunity and diversity. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.4.19 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with equal opportunity and diversity.

2.4.20 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with equal opportunity and diversity. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of equal opportunity and diversity as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

2.4.21 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and shall comply with them at all times. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.4.22 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of equal opportunity and diversity as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.4.23 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with equal opportunity and diversity. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.4.24 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

2.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity and shall not withhold material facts.

2.4.26 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.4.27 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity and shall not withhold material facts. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.4.28 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.4.29 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with equal opportunity and diversity. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

2.4.30 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of equal opportunity and diversity as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.4.31 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of equal opportunity and diversity as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and shall comply with them at all times.

2.4.32 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity and shall not withhold material facts.

2.4.33 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with equal opportunity and diversity. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of equal opportunity and diversity as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

2.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

2.5.1 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

2.5.2 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to equal opportunity and diversity to the HR Director without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and applies them consistently.

2.5.3 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

2.5.4 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to equal opportunity and diversity to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.5.5 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to equal opportunity and diversity to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to equal opportunity and diversity within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

2.5.6 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on equal opportunity and diversity and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.5.7 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to equal opportunity and diversity to the HR Director without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

2.5.8 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.5.9 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

2.5.10 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on equal opportunity and diversity and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.5.11 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

2.5.12 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to equal opportunity and diversity within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and applies them consistently.

2.5.13 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on equal opportunity and diversity. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.5.15 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.5.16 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.5.17 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on equal opportunity and diversity. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.5.18 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on equal opportunity and diversity and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.5.19 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to equal opportunity and diversity within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and applies them consistently.

2.5.20 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on equal opportunity and diversity and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

2.5.21 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to equal opportunity and diversity within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

2.5.22 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to equal opportunity and diversity within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on equal opportunity and diversity. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

2.5.24 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.5.25 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.5.26 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on equal opportunity and diversity and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on equal opportunity and diversity. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to equal opportunity and diversity to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.5.29 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to equal opportunity and diversity to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.5.30 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on equal opportunity and diversity. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to equal opportunity and diversity to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

2.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on equal opportunity and diversity.

2.5.32 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on equal opportunity and diversity and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to equal opportunity and diversity within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

2.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

2.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with equal opportunity and diversity in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.6.2 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with equal opportunity and diversity in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

2.6.3 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for equal opportunity and diversity and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.6.5 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for equal opportunity and diversity and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

2.6.7 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for equal opportunity and diversity and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

2.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to equal opportunity and diversity and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.6.9 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.6.10 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with equal opportunity and diversity in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.6.11 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.6.12 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity.

2.6.13 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with equal opportunity and diversity in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.6.14 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for equal opportunity and diversity and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall respond to every written query on equal opportunity and diversity within 15 working days of receipt.

2.6.15 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

2.6.16 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to equal opportunity and diversity and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for equal opportunity and diversity and shall make them available to all employees.

2.6.17 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for equal opportunity and diversity and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall respond to every written query on equal opportunity and diversity within 5 working days of receipt.

2.6.18 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with equal opportunity and diversity in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for equal opportunity and diversity and shall make them available to all employees.

2.6.19 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with equal opportunity and diversity in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

2.6.20 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for equal opportunity and diversity and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.6.21 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to equal opportunity and diversity and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to equal opportunity and diversity and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall respond to every written query on equal opportunity and diversity within 30 working days of receipt.

2.6.23 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to equal opportunity and diversity and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall respond to every written query on equal opportunity and diversity within 5 working days of receipt.

2.6.24 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.6.25 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with equal opportunity and diversity in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on equal opportunity and diversity within 5 working days of receipt. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

2.6.27 HR shall respond to every written query on equal opportunity and diversity within 15 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

2.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

2.6.30 HR shall respond to every written query on equal opportunity and diversity within 15 working days of receipt.

2.6.31 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for equal opportunity and diversity and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.6.32 HR shall respond to every written query on equal opportunity and diversity within 7 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with equal opportunity and diversity in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

2.6.33 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to equal opportunity and diversity. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.7 Procedure and Process Steps

2.7.1 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.7.2 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.7.3 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.7.5 The employee shall initiate the process relating to equal opportunity and diversity by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it.

2.7.6 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

2.7.7 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.7.8 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.7.9 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

2.7.10 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.7.11 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.7.12 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.7.14 The employee shall initiate the process relating to equal opportunity and diversity by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.7.15 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.7.16 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

2.7.17 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.7.18 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The employee shall initiate the process relating to equal opportunity and diversity by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager.

2.7.19 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.7.20 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

2.7.21 The employee shall initiate the process relating to equal opportunity and diversity by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

2.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.7.23 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.7.24 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The employee shall initiate the process relating to equal opportunity and diversity by submitting the prescribed form to the Line Manager.

2.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 14 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.7.26 The employee shall initiate the process relating to equal opportunity and diversity by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.7.27 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 21 working days of receiving it.

2.7.28 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

2.7.29 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.7.30 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.7.31 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.7.32 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 21 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.7.33 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

2.8.1 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.8.2 Records relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

2.8.3 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.8.4 All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.8.5 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to equal opportunity and diversity that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.8.6 All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

2.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

2.8.8 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

2.8.9 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

2.8.11 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

2.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.8.13 All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.8.14 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.8.16 All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.8.17 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.8.18 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to equal opportunity and diversity that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

2.8.19 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.8.20 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

2.8.21 All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Records relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years.

2.8.22 All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.8.23 All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

2.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to equal opportunity and diversity that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

2.8.25 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

2.8.26 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

2.8.27 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.8.28 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.8.29 All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.8.30 Records relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

2.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.8.33 All documents relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

2.9.1 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.9.2 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.9.3 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

2.9.4 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

2.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.9.6 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.9.7 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice.

2.9.9 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.9.10 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

2.9.11 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.9.12 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.9.13 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.9.14 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

2.9.15 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

2.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.9.17 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice.

2.9.18 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.9.19 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

2.9.20 Exceptions to the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

2.9.21 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

2.9.22 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

2.9.23 Exceptions to the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.9.24 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.9.26 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.9.27 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions to the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

2.9.28 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.9.29 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.9.30 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.9.31 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

2.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

2.10.1 Where an external regulator requests information concerning equal opportunity and diversity, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.10.2 Compliance data relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. An internal audit of equal opportunity and diversity shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

2.10.3 Compliance data relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.10.4 Compliance data relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

2.10.5 An internal audit of equal opportunity and diversity shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.10.6 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.10.7 Compliance data relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

2.10.8 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to equal opportunity and diversity. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.10.9 An internal audit of equal opportunity and diversity shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.10.10 An internal audit of equal opportunity and diversity shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Compliance data relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

2.10.11 Where an external regulator requests information concerning equal opportunity and diversity, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An internal audit of equal opportunity and diversity shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

2.10.12 Compliance with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

2.10.13 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.10.14 Where an external regulator requests information concerning equal opportunity and diversity, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An internal audit of equal opportunity and diversity shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

2.10.15 An internal audit of equal opportunity and diversity shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

2.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.10.17 Compliance with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.10.18 Where an external regulator requests information concerning equal opportunity and diversity, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

2.10.19 An internal audit of equal opportunity and diversity shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

2.10.20 Compliance data relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to equal opportunity and diversity. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

2.10.22 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

2.10.23 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.10.24 Where an external regulator requests information concerning equal opportunity and diversity, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.10.25 Where an external regulator requests information concerning equal opportunity and diversity, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.10.26 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Compliance with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

2.10.27 Where an external regulator requests information concerning equal opportunity and diversity, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.10.28 Compliance with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.10.29 Compliance data relating to equal opportunity and diversity shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.10.30 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where an external regulator requests information concerning equal opportunity and diversity, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

2.10.31 Compliance with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.10.32 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.10.33 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

2.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

2.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

2.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

2.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

2.11.4 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

2.11.5 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

2.11.6 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

2.11.7 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to equal opportunity and diversity shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.11.8 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. A failure to comply with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

2.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

2.11.10 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.11.12 A failure to comply with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

2.11.13 A failure to comply with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.11.14 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to equal opportunity and diversity shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

2.11.15 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

2.11.16 A failure to comply with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

2.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

2.11.18 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

2.11.19 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

2.11.20 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

2.11.21 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.11.22 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.11.23 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to equal opportunity and diversity shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

2.11.24 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to equal opportunity and diversity shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

2.11.25 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to equal opportunity and diversity shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.11.26 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

2.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to equal opportunity and diversity shall be treated as serious misconduct.

2.11.28 A failure to comply with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.11.29 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

2.11.30 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to equal opportunity and diversity shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

2.11.31 A failure to comply with the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

2.11.32 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

2.11.33 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

2.12 Review and Amendment

2.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.12.2 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

2.12.3 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

2.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.12.5 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

2.12.6 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.12.7 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

2.12.8 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.12.9 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

2.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

2.12.11 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to equal opportunity and diversity made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

2.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

2.12.14 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

2.12.15 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.12.16 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

2.12.17 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

2.12.18 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

2.12.19 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

2.12.20 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

2.12.21 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

2.12.22 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on equal opportunity and diversity through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

2.12.23 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

2.12.24 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

2.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

2.12.26 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.12.27 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

2.12.28 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

2.12.29 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

2.12.30 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

2.12.31 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to equal opportunity and diversity, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

2.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

2.12.33 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

Chapter 3

Recruitment and Selection

3.1 Purpose and Scope

3.1.1 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

3.1.2 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to recruitment and selection and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on recruitment and selection.

3.1.3 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on recruitment and selection.

3.1.4 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

3.1.5 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to recruitment and selection and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.1.6 The objective of these provisions on recruitment and selection is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.1.7 The Company recognises that recruitment and selection has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.1.8 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

3.1.9 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.1.10 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to recruitment and selection and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

3.1.11 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.1.12 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on recruitment and selection.

3.1.14 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.1.15 The objective of these provisions on recruitment and selection is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to recruitment and selection and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

3.1.16 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.1.17 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.1.18 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on recruitment and selection. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

3.1.19 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to recruitment and selection and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

3.1.20 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

3.1.21 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to recruitment and selection and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

3.1.22 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on recruitment and selection. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company recognises that recruitment and selection has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

3.1.23 The objective of these provisions on recruitment and selection is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

3.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on recruitment and selection. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.1.25 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on recruitment and selection. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

3.1.26 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.1.27 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.1.28 The Company recognises that recruitment and selection has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.1.29 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on recruitment and selection.

3.1.30 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

3.1.31 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on recruitment and selection. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.1.32 The objective of these provisions on recruitment and selection is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

3.1.33 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.2 Definitions and Interpretation

3.2.1 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "recruitment and selection" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

3.2.2 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "recruitment and selection" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

3.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.2.4 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.2.5 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.2.6 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

3.2.7 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

3.2.8 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

3.2.9 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

3.2.10 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.2.11 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

3.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.2.13 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to recruitment and selection. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

3.2.14 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.2.15 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

3.2.17 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.2.18 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to recruitment and selection. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.2.19 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.2.20 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.2.21 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

3.2.22 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "recruitment and selection" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

3.2.23 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "recruitment and selection" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

3.2.24 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

3.2.25 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "recruitment and selection" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.2.26 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to recruitment and selection. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.2.27 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to recruitment and selection.

3.2.29 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

3.2.30 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.2.31 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.2.32 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to recruitment and selection. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.2.33 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to recruitment and selection.

3.3 Eligibility and Applicability

3.3.1 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

3.3.2 Eligibility for recruitment and selection shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.3.3 Eligibility for recruitment and selection shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

3.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

3.3.6 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for recruitment and selection restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

3.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for recruitment and selection restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Eligibility for recruitment and selection shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

3.3.8 Eligibility for recruitment and selection shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

3.3.9 Eligibility for recruitment and selection shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on recruitment and selection. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.3.11 Eligibility for recruitment and selection shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.3.12 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

3.3.13 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.3.15 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

3.3.16 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.3.17 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

3.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.3.19 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on recruitment and selection. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.3.20 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on recruitment and selection.

3.3.22 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.3.23 Eligibility for recruitment and selection shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

3.3.24 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

3.3.26 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for recruitment and selection restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.3.28 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on recruitment and selection. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

3.3.29 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

3.3.30 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on recruitment and selection.

3.3.31 Eligibility for recruitment and selection shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.3.32 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

3.3.33 Eligibility for recruitment and selection shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

3.4 Responsibilities of Employees

3.4.1 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on recruitment and selection and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

3.4.2 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on recruitment and selection and shall comply with them at all times.

3.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.4.4 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

3.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.4.7 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with recruitment and selection. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

3.4.8 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with recruitment and selection. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

3.4.9 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with recruitment and selection. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.4.10 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on recruitment and selection and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.4.11 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.4.12 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.4.13 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

3.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

3.4.15 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with recruitment and selection. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.4.16 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on recruitment and selection and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.4.17 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

3.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

3.4.19 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

3.4.20 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with recruitment and selection. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.4.21 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.4.22 The employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to recruitment and selection and shall not withhold material facts.

3.4.23 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

3.4.24 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.4.25 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with recruitment and selection.

3.4.26 The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.4.27 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

3.4.28 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to recruitment and selection and shall not withhold material facts.

3.4.29 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with recruitment and selection. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

3.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to recruitment and selection and shall not withhold material facts.

3.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with recruitment and selection. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.4.32 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

3.4.33 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of recruitment and selection as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

3.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

3.5.1 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.5.2 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on recruitment and selection and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.5.3 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.5.4 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

3.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on recruitment and selection and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.5.6 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on recruitment and selection and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to recruitment and selection within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

3.5.7 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to recruitment and selection to the HR Director without undue delay.

3.5.8 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.5.9 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.5.10 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on recruitment and selection. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.5.11 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on recruitment and selection.

3.5.12 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on recruitment and selection and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.5.13 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on recruitment and selection. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.5.14 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on recruitment and selection and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.5.15 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on recruitment and selection.

3.5.16 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.5.17 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to recruitment and selection within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

3.5.19 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on recruitment and selection. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.5.20 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to recruitment and selection within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

3.5.21 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to recruitment and selection within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.5.22 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on recruitment and selection and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.5.23 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to recruitment and selection to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

3.5.25 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to recruitment and selection to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.5.26 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to recruitment and selection within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

3.5.27 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to recruitment and selection to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on recruitment and selection and applies them consistently.

3.5.28 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to recruitment and selection within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

3.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on recruitment and selection.

3.5.30 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.5.31 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on recruitment and selection. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to recruitment and selection within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

3.5.32 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to recruitment and selection to the HR Director without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.5.33 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on recruitment and selection and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

3.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with recruitment and selection in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.6.2 HR shall respond to every written query on recruitment and selection within 15 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

3.6.3 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.6.4 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with recruitment and selection in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.6.5 HR shall respond to every written query on recruitment and selection within 7 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.6.6 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to recruitment and selection. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with recruitment and selection in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

3.6.8 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.6.9 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to recruitment and selection. HR shall respond to every written query on recruitment and selection within 14 working days of receipt.

3.6.10 HR shall respond to every written query on recruitment and selection within 15 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.6.11 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to recruitment and selection and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.6.12 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to recruitment and selection and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to recruitment and selection and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.6.14 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to recruitment and selection. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.6.15 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to recruitment and selection. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on recruitment and selection within 14 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

3.6.17 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

3.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to recruitment and selection and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.6.19 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to recruitment and selection and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.6.20 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with recruitment and selection in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.6.21 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to recruitment and selection and on the applicable legal requirements.

3.6.22 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with recruitment and selection in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.6.23 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to recruitment and selection. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for recruitment and selection and shall make them available to all employees.

3.6.24 HR shall respond to every written query on recruitment and selection within 10 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

3.6.25 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for recruitment and selection and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

3.6.26 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with recruitment and selection in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.6.27 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.6.28 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to recruitment and selection. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

3.6.29 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with recruitment and selection in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

3.6.30 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.6.31 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to recruitment and selection. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall respond to every written query on recruitment and selection within 21 working days of receipt.

3.6.32 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to recruitment and selection and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

3.6.33 HR shall respond to every written query on recruitment and selection within 14 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.7 Procedure and Process Steps

3.7.1 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.7.2 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

3.7.3 The employee shall initiate the process relating to recruitment and selection by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

3.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.7.5 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.7.6 The employee shall initiate the process relating to recruitment and selection by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.7.7 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

3.7.8 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.7.9 The employee shall initiate the process relating to recruitment and selection by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

3.7.10 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

3.7.11 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.7.12 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The employee shall initiate the process relating to recruitment and selection by submitting a written request to the Head of Department.

3.7.13 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

3.7.14 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 21 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.7.16 The employee shall initiate the process relating to recruitment and selection by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.7.17 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

3.7.18 The employee shall initiate the process relating to recruitment and selection by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.7.19 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.7.20 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

3.7.21 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 15 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by

HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.7.22 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 14 working days of receiving it.

3.7.23 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.7.24 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 21 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The employee shall initiate the process relating to recruitment and selection by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager.

3.7.25 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

3.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The employee shall initiate the process relating to recruitment and selection by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager.

3.7.27 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.7.28 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

3.7.29 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.7.30 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.7.31 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.7.32 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.7.33 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

3.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

3.8.1 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

3.8.2 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.8.3 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

3.8.4 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

3.8.5 Records relating to recruitment and selection shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.8.6 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

3.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

3.8.8 All documents relating to recruitment and selection shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

3.8.9 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to recruitment and selection that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

3.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.8.11 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.8.12 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.8.14 Records relating to recruitment and selection shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.8.15 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

3.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.8.17 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.8.18 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to recruitment and selection that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

3.8.20 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to recruitment and selection that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

3.8.21 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.8.22 Records relating to recruitment and selection shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

3.8.23 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.8.24 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Records relating to recruitment and selection shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years.

3.8.25 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

3.8.26 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.8.27 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.8.28 Records relating to recruitment and selection shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

3.8.29 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to recruitment and selection that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

3.8.30 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to recruitment and selection that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

3.8.31 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to recruitment and selection that is held about them, subject to applicable law. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.8.32 All documents relating to recruitment and selection shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.8.33 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Records relating to recruitment and selection shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years.

3.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

3.9.1 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.9.2 Exceptions to the provisions on recruitment and selection may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

3.9.3 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

3.9.4 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.9.7 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

3.9.8 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.9.9 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

3.9.10 Exceptions to the provisions on recruitment and selection may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

3.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.9.12 Exceptions to the provisions on recruitment and selection may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

3.9.13 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

3.9.14 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

3.9.15 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.9.16 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.9.17 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

3.9.18 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice.

3.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice.

3.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on recruitment and selection may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

3.9.22 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.9.23 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice.

3.9.24 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.9.25 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

3.9.26 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

3.9.27 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

3.9.28 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.9.29 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

3.9.31 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.9.33 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

3.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

3.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on recruitment and selection shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.10.2 Compliance data relating to recruitment and selection shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Compliance with the provisions on recruitment and selection shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

3.10.3 Compliance with the provisions on recruitment and selection shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.10.4 Where an external regulator requests information concerning recruitment and selection, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

3.10.5 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.10.6 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

3.10.7 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to recruitment and selection.

3.10.8 Compliance with the provisions on recruitment and selection shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to recruitment and selection.

3.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to recruitment and selection. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. An internal audit of recruitment and selection shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

3.10.10 Where an external regulator requests information concerning recruitment and selection, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.10.11 Compliance with the provisions on recruitment and selection shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Compliance data relating to recruitment and selection shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

3.10.12 Compliance with the provisions on recruitment and selection shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.10.13 Compliance data relating to recruitment and selection shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

3.10.14 Compliance data relating to recruitment and selection shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

3.10.16 Where an external regulator requests information concerning recruitment and selection, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.10.17 Compliance with the provisions on recruitment and selection shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

3.10.18 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.10.19 Where an external regulator requests information concerning recruitment and selection, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.10.20 Where an external regulator requests information concerning recruitment and selection, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An internal audit of recruitment and selection shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

3.10.21 Compliance with the provisions on recruitment and selection shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.10.22 An internal audit of recruitment and selection shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.10.23 An internal audit of recruitment and selection shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

3.10.24 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to recruitment and selection. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.10.25 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.10.26 An internal audit of recruitment and selection shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

3.10.27 Where an external regulator requests information concerning recruitment and selection, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

3.10.28 Where an external regulator requests information concerning recruitment and selection, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.10.29 Where an external regulator requests information concerning recruitment and selection, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.10.30 An internal audit of recruitment and selection shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

3.10.31 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to recruitment and selection. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

3.10.32 Compliance with the provisions on recruitment and selection shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.10.33 An internal audit of recruitment and selection shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

3.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

3.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

3.11.2 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.11.3 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.11.4 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.11.5 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to recruitment and selection shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

3.11.7 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to recruitment and selection shall be treated as serious misconduct.

3.11.8 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to recruitment and selection shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

3.11.9 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

3.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.11.11 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.11.12 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

3.11.14 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

3.11.15 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to recruitment and selection shall be treated as serious misconduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.11.18 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.11.19 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to recruitment and selection shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.11.20 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

3.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.11.22 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

3.11.24 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

3.11.25 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

3.11.26 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

3.11.27 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

3.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

3.11.30 A failure to comply with the provisions on recruitment and selection may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.11.31 A failure to comply with the provisions on recruitment and selection may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

3.11.32 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.11.33 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

3.12 Review and Amendment

3.12.1 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

3.12.2 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

3.12.3 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

3.12.4 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

3.12.5 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.12.6 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

3.12.7 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

3.12.8 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on recruitment and selection through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

3.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.12.10 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

3.12.11 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on recruitment and selection through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect.

3.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

3.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.12.14 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

3.12.15 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on recruitment and selection through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

3.12.16 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on recruitment and selection through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

3.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

3.12.18 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

3.12.19 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

3.12.20 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. As an illustration, a request relating to recruitment and selection made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

3.12.21 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

3.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

3.12.23 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.12.24 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on recruitment and selection through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

3.12.25 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

3.12.27 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

3.12.28 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

3.12.29 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

3.12.30 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on recruitment and selection through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to recruitment and selection, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

3.12.31 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

3.12.32 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

3.12.33 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

Chapter 4

Employment Contracts and Onboarding

4.1 Purpose and Scope

4.1.1 The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.1.2 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employment contracts and onboarding and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

4.1.3 The Company recognises that employment contracts and onboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.1.4 The Company recognises that employment contracts and onboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

4.1.5 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.1.7 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employment contracts and onboarding. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.1.9 The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

4.1.10 The Company recognises that employment contracts and onboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

4.1.11 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.1.12 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.1.13 The Company recognises that employment contracts and onboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

4.1.14 The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.1.15 The Company recognises that employment contracts and onboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.1.16 The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.1.17 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employment contracts and onboarding. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company recognises that employment contracts and onboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

4.1.18 The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.1.19 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employment contracts and onboarding and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

4.1.20 The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

4.1.21 The Company recognises that employment contracts and onboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

4.1.22 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employment contracts and onboarding. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

4.1.23 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employment contracts and onboarding. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

4.1.24 The objective of these provisions on employment contracts and onboarding is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

4.1.25 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.1.26 The Company recognises that employment contracts and onboarding has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

4.1.27 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employment contracts and onboarding. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.1.28 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

4.1.29 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.1.30 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.1.31 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to employment contracts and onboarding and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.1.32 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on employment contracts and onboarding. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.1.33 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.2 Definitions and Interpretation

4.2.1 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employment contracts and onboarding. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

4.2.2 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.2.3 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employment contracts and onboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.2.4 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.2.5 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employment contracts and onboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

4.2.6 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.2.8 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

4.2.9 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.2.10 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

4.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.2.12 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

4.2.13 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employment contracts and onboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.2.14 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employment contracts and onboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

4.2.15 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

4.2.16 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.2.17 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employment contracts and onboarding. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.2.18 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

4.2.19 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employment contracts and onboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

4.2.21 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employment contracts and onboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.2.22 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.2.23 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.2.24 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employment contracts and onboarding. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

4.2.25 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

4.2.26 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to employment contracts and onboarding. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

4.2.27 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

4.2.28 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

4.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employment contracts and onboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

4.2.31 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

4.2.32 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.2.33 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "employment contracts and onboarding" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

4.3 Eligibility and Applicability

4.3.1 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.3.2 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.3.3 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

4.3.4 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

4.3.5 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

4.3.6 Eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.3.11 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

4.3.12 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

4.3.13 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.3.14 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

4.3.15 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

4.3.16 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

4.3.17 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

4.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

4.3.19 Eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

4.3.20 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

4.3.21 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

4.3.22 Eligibility for employment contracts and onboarding shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

4.3.23 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.3.24 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.3.25 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.3.26 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.3.27 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

4.3.28 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

4.3.29 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.3.30 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.3.31 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.3.32 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

4.3.33 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

4.4 Responsibilities of Employees

4.4.1 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employment contracts and onboarding as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.4.3 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.4.4 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employment contracts and onboarding as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.4.5 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employment contracts and onboarding as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.4.7 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employment contracts and onboarding. To illustrate, where the Line

Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and shall comply with them at all times.

4.4.8 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employment contracts and onboarding. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.4.9 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employment contracts and onboarding. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employment contracts and onboarding as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.4.11 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.4.12 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.4.13 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

4.4.14 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding and shall not withhold material facts.

4.4.15 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.4.16 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding and shall not withhold material facts.

4.4.17 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employment contracts and onboarding. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.4.18 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employment contracts and onboarding. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.4.19 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employment contracts and onboarding.

4.4.20 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

4.4.21 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.4.22 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.4.23 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.4.24 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.4.25 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.4.26 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding and shall not withhold material facts.

4.4.27 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with employment contracts and onboarding. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding and shall not withhold material facts.

4.4.28 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.4.29 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and shall comply with them at all times.

4.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.4.31 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of employment contracts and onboarding as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

4.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.4.33 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding and shall not withhold material facts.

4.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

4.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employment contracts and onboarding. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.5.2 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employment contracts and onboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.5.3 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.5.4 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employment contracts and onboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

4.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employment contracts and onboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.5.6 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employment contracts and onboarding to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.5.7 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.5.8 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employment contracts and onboarding within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employment contracts and onboarding.

4.5.9 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employment contracts and onboarding to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.5.12 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.5.15 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employment contracts and onboarding to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.5.16 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on employment contracts and onboarding. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employment contracts and onboarding within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

4.5.17 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employment contracts and onboarding within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

4.5.19 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employment contracts and onboarding to the HR Director without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

4.5.20 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employment contracts and onboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

4.5.21 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employment contracts and onboarding within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.5.22 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.5.23 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employment contracts and onboarding to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.5.24 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and applies them consistently.

4.5.25 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employment contracts and onboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.5.26 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employment contracts and onboarding within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.5.27 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employment contracts and onboarding within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.5.28 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.5.29 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on employment contracts and onboarding and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

4.5.30 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.5.31 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

4.5.32 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to employment contracts and onboarding to the HR Director without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding and applies them consistently.

4.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to employment contracts and onboarding within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

4.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

4.6.1 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employment contracts and onboarding and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

4.6.2 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

4.6.3 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employment contracts and onboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.6.4 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employment contracts and onboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding.

4.6.5 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employment contracts and onboarding and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.6.7 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employment contracts and onboarding and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding.

4.6.8 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.6.9 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employment contracts and onboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employment contracts and onboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.6.11 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.6.12 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employment contracts and onboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall respond to every written query on employment contracts and onboarding within 15 working days of receipt.

4.6.13 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall respond to every written query on employment contracts and onboarding within 21 working days of receipt.

4.6.14 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employment contracts and onboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

4.6.15 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employment contracts and onboarding and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on employment contracts and onboarding within 30 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

4.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employment contracts and onboarding and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

4.6.19 HR shall respond to every written query on employment contracts and onboarding within 10 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.6.20 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding.

4.6.21 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to employment contracts and onboarding and on the applicable legal requirements. HR shall respond to every written query on employment contracts and onboarding within 10 working days of receipt.

4.6.23 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employment contracts and onboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

4.6.24 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employment contracts and onboarding and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding.

4.6.25 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

4.6.26 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to employment contracts and onboarding. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

4.6.27 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with employment contracts and onboarding in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

4.6.31 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.6.32 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for employment contracts and onboarding and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.7 Procedure and Process Steps

4.7.1 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.7.2 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

4.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

4.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

4.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

4.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

4.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

4.7.8 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employment contracts and onboarding by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner.

4.7.9 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

4.7.10 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.7.11 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employment contracts and onboarding by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.7.12 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

4.7.14 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.7.15 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.7.16 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employment contracts and onboarding by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

4.7.17 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employment contracts and onboarding by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

4.7.18 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it.

4.7.19 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.7.20 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 21 working days of receiving it.

4.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

4.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

4.7.23 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The employee shall initiate the process relating to employment contracts and onboarding by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner.

4.7.24 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

4.7.25 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

4.7.26 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.7.27 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 3 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

4.7.28 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

4.7.29 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.7.30 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to employment contracts and onboarding by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.7.33 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

4.8.1 All documents relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.8.2 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employment contracts and onboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.8.3 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

4.8.4 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employment contracts and onboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.8.5 Records relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

4.8.6 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.8.7 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employment contracts and onboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

4.8.8 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employment contracts and onboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

4.8.9 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.8.10 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. All documents relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

4.8.11 All documents relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

4.8.12 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. All documents relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

4.8.13 All documents relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

4.8.14 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employment contracts and onboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.8.15 All documents relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Records relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years.

4.8.16 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

4.8.17 Records relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

4.8.18 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.8.19 Records relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.8.20 All documents relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.8.21 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

4.8.22 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employment contracts and onboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

4.8.23 All documents relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

4.8.24 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.8.25 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

4.8.26 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employment contracts and onboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

4.8.27 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.8.28 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.8.29 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

4.8.30 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.8.31 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

4.8.32 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.8.33 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to employment contracts and onboarding that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

4.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

4.9.1 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

4.9.2 Exceptions to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

4.9.3 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Exceptions to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

4.9.4 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.9.5 Exceptions to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.9.6 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.9.7 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

4.9.8 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

4.9.9 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.9.10 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.9.12 Exceptions to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.9.13 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

4.9.15 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.9.16 Exceptions to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice.

4.9.17 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

4.9.18 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

4.9.20 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.9.21 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

4.9.22 Exceptions to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.9.24 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

4.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

4.9.27 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.9.28 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.9.29 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

4.9.30 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice.

4.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

4.9.32 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.9.33 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

4.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

4.10.1 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employment contracts and onboarding. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.10.2 Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employment contracts and onboarding.

4.10.3 An internal audit of employment contracts and onboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.10.4 Compliance with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An internal audit of employment contracts and onboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

4.10.5 Compliance with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

4.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employment contracts and onboarding. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.10.7 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employment contracts and onboarding. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.10.8 Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.10.9 Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

4.10.10 An internal audit of employment contracts and onboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

4.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Compliance with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

4.10.12 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employment contracts and onboarding. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.10.13 Compliance with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.10.14 Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.10.15 Compliance with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where an external regulator requests information concerning employment contracts and onboarding, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

4.10.16 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.10.17 An internal audit of employment contracts and onboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.10.18 Compliance with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employment contracts and onboarding.

4.10.19 Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.10.20 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employment contracts and onboarding. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.10.22 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.10.23 Where an external regulator requests information concerning employment contracts and onboarding, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

4.10.24 Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

4.10.25 Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.10.26 Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.10.27 An internal audit of employment contracts and onboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

4.10.28 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.10.29 Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

4.10.30 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

4.10.31 An internal audit of employment contracts and onboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.10.32 An internal audit of employment contracts and onboarding shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Compliance data relating to employment contracts and onboarding shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

4.10.33 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to employment contracts and onboarding. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

4.11.1 A failure to comply with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employment contracts and onboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct.

4.11.3 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

4.11.4 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.11.5 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.11.6 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.11.7 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

4.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A failure to comply with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

4.11.9 A failure to comply with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

4.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.11.11 A failure to comply with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

4.11.12 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

4.11.13 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.11.14 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.11.15 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employment contracts and onboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

4.11.16 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.11.17 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

4.11.18 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employment contracts and onboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

4.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

4.11.20 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.11.21 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

4.11.22 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employment contracts and onboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

4.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

4.11.24 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.11.25 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

4.11.26 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employment contracts and onboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct.

4.11.27 A failure to comply with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.11.28 A failure to comply with the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

4.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.11.30 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employment contracts and onboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

4.11.31 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to employment contracts and onboarding shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

4.11.32 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

4.11.33 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.12 Review and Amendment

4.12.1 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

4.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect.

4.12.3 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

4.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

4.12.6 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

4.12.7 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.12.8 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

4.12.9 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.12.10 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

4.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.12.12 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.12.14 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

4.12.15 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.12.16 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

4.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.12.18 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

4.12.19 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

4.12.20 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

4.12.21 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

4.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

4.12.24 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

4.12.25 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

4.12.26 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to employment contracts and onboarding made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

4.12.27 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

4.12.28 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

4.12.29 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on employment contracts and onboarding through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

4.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

4.12.31 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to employment contracts and onboarding, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

4.12.32 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

4.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

Chapter 5

Probation and Confirmation

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Probation period	3 months
Maximum extension	up to 1 month

5.1 Purpose and Scope

5.1.1 The Company recognises that probation and confirmation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.1.2 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

5.1.4 The objective of these provisions on probation and confirmation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on probation and confirmation.

5.1.5 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

5.1.7 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to probation and confirmation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

5.1.8 The objective of these provisions on probation and confirmation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to probation and confirmation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

5.1.9 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on probation and confirmation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.1.10 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on probation and confirmation.

5.1.11 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

5.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on probation and confirmation. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

5.1.13 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to probation and confirmation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.1.14 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on probation and confirmation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.1.15 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.1.16 The objective of these provisions on probation and confirmation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company recognises that probation and confirmation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

5.1.17 The objective of these provisions on probation and confirmation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

5.1.18 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company recognises that probation and confirmation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

5.1.19 The Company recognises that probation and confirmation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

5.1.20 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to probation and confirmation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.1.21 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.1.22 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.1.23 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on probation and confirmation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.1.24 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to probation and confirmation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

5.1.25 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.1.26 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on probation and confirmation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.1.27 The objective of these provisions on probation and confirmation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.1.28 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on probation and confirmation. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company recognises that probation and confirmation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

5.1.29 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.1.30 The Company recognises that probation and confirmation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.1.31 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to probation and confirmation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.1.32 The Company recognises that probation and confirmation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.1.33 The objective of these provisions on probation and confirmation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on probation and confirmation.

5.2 Definitions and Interpretation

5.2.1 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.2.2 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.2.3 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.2.4 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.2.5 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "probation and confirmation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

5.2.8 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.2.9 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.2.10 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

5.2.11 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "probation and confirmation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

5.2.12 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

5.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.2.14 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to probation and confirmation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.2.15 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to probation and confirmation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.2.16 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.2.17 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "probation and confirmation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.2.18 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

5.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "probation and confirmation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to probation and confirmation.

5.2.21 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.2.22 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.2.23 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

5.2.24 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to probation and confirmation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.2.25 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.2.26 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "probation and confirmation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

5.2.27 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

5.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.2.29 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.2.30 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

5.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

5.2.33 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.3 Eligibility and Applicability

5.3.1 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for probation and confirmation restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.3.2 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

5.3.3 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

5.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for probation and confirmation restricted until the matter is concluded.

5.3.5 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on probation and confirmation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Eligibility for probation and confirmation shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

5.3.6 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.3.7 Eligibility for probation and confirmation shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.3.8 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

5.3.9 Eligibility for probation and confirmation shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.3.10 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.3.11 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.3.12 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

5.3.13 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.3.14 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.3.15 Eligibility for probation and confirmation shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.3.16 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

5.3.17 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on probation and confirmation. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

5.3.18 Eligibility for probation and confirmation shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for probation and confirmation restricted until the matter is concluded.

5.3.19 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.3.20 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

5.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.3.23 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.3.24 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for probation and confirmation restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.3.25 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for probation and confirmation restricted until the matter is concluded.

5.3.26 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for probation and confirmation restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on probation and confirmation.

5.3.27 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.3.28 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.3.29 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

5.3.30 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

5.3.31 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on probation and confirmation.

5.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on probation and confirmation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for probation and confirmation restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

5.4 Responsibilities of Employees

5.4.1 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with probation and confirmation.

5.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of probation and confirmation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on probation and confirmation and shall comply with them at all times.

5.4.3 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of probation and confirmation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.4.4 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to probation and confirmation and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of probation and confirmation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on probation and confirmation and shall comply with them at all times.

5.4.6 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.4.7 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on probation and confirmation and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.4.8 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.4.9 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to probation and confirmation and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with probation and confirmation.

5.4.10 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on probation and confirmation and shall comply with them at all times.

5.4.11 The employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.4.12 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with probation and confirmation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

5.4.13 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on probation and confirmation and shall comply with them at all times.

5.4.14 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on probation and confirmation and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.4.15 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to probation and confirmation and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with probation and confirmation.

5.4.16 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.4.17 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on probation and confirmation and shall comply with them at all times.

5.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.4.19 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.4.20 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.4.21 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of probation and confirmation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

5.4.22 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with probation and confirmation.

5.4.23 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of probation and confirmation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.4.24 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

5.4.25 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.4.26 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to probation and confirmation and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.4.27 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to probation and confirmation and shall not withhold material facts. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

5.4.28 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.4.29 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to probation and confirmation and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.4.30 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of probation and confirmation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

5.4.31 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

5.4.32 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.4.33 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of probation and confirmation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

5.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on probation and confirmation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on probation and confirmation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.5.4 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

5.5.5 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on probation and confirmation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.5.6 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to probation and confirmation to the Policy Committee without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.5.7 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to probation and confirmation within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on probation and confirmation and applies them consistently.

5.5.8 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to probation and confirmation within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.5.9 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to probation and confirmation to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

5.5.10 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to probation and confirmation within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.5.11 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on probation and confirmation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.5.12 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on probation and confirmation.

5.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.5.14 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to probation and confirmation within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on probation and confirmation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

5.5.16 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.5.17 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to probation and confirmation to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.5.18 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on probation and confirmation and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.5.19 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to probation and confirmation within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

5.5.20 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.5.21 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on probation and confirmation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

5.5.22 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on probation and confirmation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.5.25 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on probation and confirmation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.5.26 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on probation and confirmation and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

5.5.27 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on probation and confirmation and applies them consistently.

5.5.28 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

5.5.29 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on probation and confirmation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.5.30 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

5.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to probation and confirmation within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

5.5.32 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on probation and confirmation.

5.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to probation and confirmation within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

5.6.1 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to probation and confirmation and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall respond to every written query on probation and confirmation within 7 working days of receipt.

5.6.2 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with probation and confirmation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.6.3 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with probation and confirmation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to probation and confirmation.

5.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.6.5 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to probation and confirmation and on the applicable legal requirements.

5.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with probation and confirmation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

5.6.7 HR shall respond to every written query on probation and confirmation within 21 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.6.8 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.6.9 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to probation and confirmation and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

5.6.10 HR shall respond to every written query on probation and confirmation within 10 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with probation and confirmation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.6.12 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to probation and confirmation.

5.6.13 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

5.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.6.15 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for probation and confirmation and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.6.16 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.6.17 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for probation and confirmation and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.6.18 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.6.20 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to probation and confirmation and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

5.6.21 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to probation and confirmation. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.6.22 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with probation and confirmation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.6.23 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for probation and confirmation and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.6.24 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.6.25 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to probation and confirmation and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on probation and confirmation within 10 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for probation and confirmation and shall make them available to all employees.

5.6.27 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to probation and confirmation and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

5.6.28 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for probation and confirmation and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.6.29 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to probation and confirmation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for probation and confirmation and shall make them available to all employees.

5.6.30 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.6.31 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.6.32 HR shall respond to every written query on probation and confirmation within 5 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.6.33 HR shall respond to every written query on probation and confirmation within 14 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.7 Procedure and Process Steps

5.7.1 Probation period. The probation period for every new employee shall be 3 months, counted from the date of joining.

5.7.2 Maximum extension. The probation period may be extended by up to 1 month, for reasons recorded in writing and communicated to the employee.

5.7.3 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.7.5 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.7.6 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

5.7.7 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.7.8 The employee shall initiate the process relating to probation and confirmation by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

5.7.9 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.7.10 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.7.11 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

5.7.12 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The employee shall initiate the process relating to probation and confirmation by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team.

5.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.7.14 The employee shall initiate the process relating to probation and confirmation by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.7.15 The employee shall initiate the process relating to probation and confirmation by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

5.7.16 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.7.17 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.7.18 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

5.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to probation and confirmation by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team.

5.7.20 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.7.21 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

5.7.22 The employee shall initiate the process relating to probation and confirmation by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.7.23 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to probation and confirmation by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

5.7.25 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.7.26 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The employee shall initiate the process relating to probation and confirmation by submitting a written request to the Line Manager.

5.7.27 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 2 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

5.7.28 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 2 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

5.7.29 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it.

5.7.30 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 2 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.7.31 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

5.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.7.33 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.7.34 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 7 working days of receiving it.

5.7.35 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

5.8.1 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Records relating to probation and confirmation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

5.8.2 Records relating to probation and confirmation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.8.3 Records relating to probation and confirmation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

5.8.4 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

5.8.5 Records relating to probation and confirmation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.8.6 All documents relating to probation and confirmation shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.8.7 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.8.8 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

5.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.8.10 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to probation and confirmation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.8.11 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. All documents relating to probation and confirmation shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

5.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

5.8.16 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to probation and confirmation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

5.8.17 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

5.8.18 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to probation and confirmation that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

5.8.19 Records relating to probation and confirmation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

5.8.20 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

5.8.21 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

5.8.23 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.8.24 All documents relating to probation and confirmation shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.8.25 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

5.8.26 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.8.27 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to probation and confirmation that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

5.8.28 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.8.29 All documents relating to probation and confirmation shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.8.30 Records relating to probation and confirmation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.8.31 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

5.8.32 Records relating to probation and confirmation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

5.8.33 Records relating to probation and confirmation shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

5.9.1 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.9.2 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

5.9.3 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.9.4 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

5.9.5 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.9.6 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.9.7 Exceptions to the provisions on probation and confirmation may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.9.9 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.9.10 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.9.11 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

5.9.12 Exceptions to the provisions on probation and confirmation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

5.9.13 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

5.9.14 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

5.9.15 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

5.9.16 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions to the provisions on probation and confirmation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

5.9.17 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.9.18 Exceptions to the provisions on probation and confirmation may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.9.19 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

5.9.20 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

5.9.21 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.9.22 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

5.9.23 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

5.9.24 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

5.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on probation and confirmation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

5.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on probation and confirmation may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.9.27 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.9.28 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.9.29 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.9.30 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on probation and confirmation may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.9.33 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

5.10.1 Where an external regulator requests information concerning probation and confirmation, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

5.10.2 An internal audit of probation and confirmation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

5.10.3 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to probation and confirmation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.10.4 An internal audit of probation and confirmation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.10.5 Compliance with the provisions on probation and confirmation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.10.6 Where an external regulator requests information concerning probation and confirmation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.10.7 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to probation and confirmation. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Compliance data relating to probation and confirmation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

5.10.9 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where an external regulator requests information concerning probation and confirmation, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

5.10.10 Compliance data relating to probation and confirmation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.10.11 An internal audit of probation and confirmation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.10.12 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.10.13 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

5.10.14 Where an external regulator requests information concerning probation and confirmation, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.10.15 Where an external regulator requests information concerning probation and confirmation, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.10.16 Compliance data relating to probation and confirmation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Compliance with the provisions on probation and confirmation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

5.10.17 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to probation and confirmation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.10.18 Compliance data relating to probation and confirmation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.10.20 An internal audit of probation and confirmation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

5.10.21 Compliance with the provisions on probation and confirmation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.10.22 An internal audit of probation and confirmation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to probation and confirmation. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.10.24 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

5.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.10.26 Compliance with the provisions on probation and confirmation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.10.27 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

5.10.28 Where an external regulator requests information concerning probation and confirmation, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Compliance with the provisions on probation and confirmation shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

5.10.29 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to probation and confirmation. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.10.30 Compliance data relating to probation and confirmation shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.10.31 An internal audit of probation and confirmation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

5.10.32 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An internal audit of probation and confirmation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

5.10.33 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to probation and confirmation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. An internal audit of probation and confirmation shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

5.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

5.11.1 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to probation and confirmation shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

5.11.2 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to probation and confirmation shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.11.4 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.11.5 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to probation and confirmation shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

5.11.7 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.11.8 A failure to comply with the provisions on probation and confirmation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

5.11.9 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

5.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.11.11 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

5.11.12 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.11.13 A failure to comply with the provisions on probation and confirmation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.11.14 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

5.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on probation and confirmation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.11.17 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.11.18 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

5.11.20 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to probation and confirmation shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.11.21 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

5.11.22 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.11.23 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to probation and confirmation shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

5.11.24 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A failure to comply with the provisions on probation and confirmation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

5.11.25 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.11.26 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.11.28 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.11.29 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

5.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.11.31 A failure to comply with the provisions on probation and confirmation may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

5.11.32 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to probation and confirmation shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

5.11.33 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.12 Review and Amendment

5.12.1 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.12.2 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.12.3 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

5.12.4 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

5.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.12.6 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

5.12.7 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on probation and confirmation through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.12.8 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

5.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.12.10 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

5.12.11 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.12.12 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

5.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

5.12.14 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.12.15 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

5.12.16 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

5.12.17 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

5.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to probation and confirmation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

5.12.19 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.12.20 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

5.12.21 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on probation and confirmation through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

5.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.12.24 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on probation and confirmation through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

5.12.25 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

5.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

5.12.27 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

5.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to probation and confirmation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

5.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

5.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

5.12.31 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on probation and confirmation through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect.

5.12.32 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on probation and confirmation through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

5.12.33 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

Chapter 6

Working Hours and Attendance

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Standard working week	45 hours per week

6.1 Purpose and Scope

6.1.1 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.1.2 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on working hours and attendance. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.1.3 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on working hours and attendance. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company recognises that working hours and attendance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

6.1.4 The objective of these provisions on working hours and attendance is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.1.5 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on working hours and attendance.

6.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.1.7 The Company recognises that working hours and attendance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

6.1.8 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.1.10 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.1.11 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to working hours and attendance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on working hours and attendance.

6.1.12 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

6.1.13 The objective of these provisions on working hours and attendance is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.1.14 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to working hours and attendance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

6.1.15 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to working hours and attendance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

6.1.16 The Company recognises that working hours and attendance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.1.17 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to working hours and attendance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

6.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to working hours and attendance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

6.1.19 The Company recognises that working hours and attendance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.1.20 The Company recognises that working hours and attendance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.1.21 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

6.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to working hours and attendance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

6.1.23 The objective of these provisions on working hours and attendance is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.1.24 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.1.25 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.1.26 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to working hours and attendance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

6.1.27 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to working hours and attendance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.1.28 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.1.29 The Company recognises that working hours and attendance has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.1.30 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

6.1.31 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to working hours and attendance and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

6.1.32 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

6.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on working hours and attendance. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

6.2 Definitions and Interpretation

6.2.1 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.2.2 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "working hours and attendance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.2.3 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to working hours and attendance. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

6.2.4 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "working hours and attendance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to working hours and attendance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.2.6 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

6.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

6.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to working hours and attendance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.2.9 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.2.10 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

6.2.11 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

6.2.12 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

6.2.13 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

6.2.14 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.2.15 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to working hours and attendance. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.2.16 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.2.17 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.2.18 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.2.19 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

6.2.20 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

6.2.21 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to working hours and attendance. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

6.2.22 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

6.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to working hours and attendance. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

6.2.24 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.2.25 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

6.2.26 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "working hours and attendance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.2.27 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.2.28 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "working hours and attendance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

6.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "working hours and attendance" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

6.2.31 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

6.2.32 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.2.33 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

6.3 Eligibility and Applicability

6.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

6.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for working hours and attendance restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.3.3 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

6.3.4 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for working hours and attendance restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.3.5 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

6.3.6 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

6.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for working hours and attendance restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

6.3.8 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line

Manager.

6.3.9 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.3.10 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for working hours and attendance restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.3.11 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on working hours and attendance. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

6.3.13 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on working hours and attendance. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.3.14 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for working hours and attendance restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

6.3.15 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.3.16 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on working hours and attendance. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

6.3.17 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on working hours and attendance. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.3.19 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

6.3.21 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.3.22 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on working hours and attendance.

6.3.23 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for working hours and attendance restricted until the matter is concluded.

6.3.24 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.3.25 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.3.26 Eligibility for working hours and attendance shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for working hours and attendance restricted until the matter is concluded.

6.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

6.3.28 Eligibility for working hours and attendance shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

6.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on working hours and attendance. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.3.30 Eligibility for working hours and attendance shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for working hours and attendance restricted until the matter is concluded.

6.3.31 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.3.32 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for working hours and attendance restricted until the matter is concluded.

6.3.33 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on working hours and attendance. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.4 Responsibilities of Employees

6.4.1 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

6.4.2 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with working hours and attendance.

6.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on working hours and attendance and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.4.4 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on working hours and attendance and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of working hours and attendance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.4.6 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.4.7 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to working hours and attendance and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

6.4.8 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on working hours and attendance and shall comply with them at all times.

6.4.9 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

6.4.10 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.4.11 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to working hours and attendance and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.4.12 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

6.4.13 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of working hours and attendance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.4.14 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of working hours and attendance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

6.4.15 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.4.16 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

6.4.17 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.4.18 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.4.19 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on working hours and attendance and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.4.20 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of working hours and attendance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.4.21 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of working hours and attendance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

6.4.22 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to working hours and attendance and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.4.23 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on working hours and attendance and shall comply with them at all times.

6.4.24 The employee shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to working hours and attendance and shall not withhold material facts.

6.4.25 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of working hours and attendance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with working hours and attendance. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.4.27 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on working hours and attendance and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with working hours and attendance.

6.4.28 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on working hours and attendance and shall comply with them at all times. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

6.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of working hours and attendance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on working hours and attendance and shall comply with them at all times.

6.4.30 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of working hours and attendance as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with working hours and attendance. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

6.4.32 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to working hours and attendance and shall not withhold material facts. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.4.33 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the Head of Department at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with working hours and attendance.

6.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

6.5.1 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

6.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

6.5.3 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.5.4 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on working hours and attendance. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.5.5 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

6.5.6 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on working hours and attendance. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.5.7 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.5.8 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on working hours and attendance and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on working hours and attendance.

6.5.9 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on working hours and attendance. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.5.10 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.5.11 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to working hours and attendance within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.5.12 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

6.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.5.14 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to working hours and attendance to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on working hours and attendance.

6.5.15 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on working hours and attendance and applies them consistently.

6.5.16 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on working hours and attendance. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

6.5.17 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to working hours and attendance within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.5.18 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.5.19 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on working hours and attendance. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by

HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to working hours and attendance to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

6.5.20 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to working hours and attendance to the HR Director without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.5.22 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.5.23 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to working hours and attendance to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to working hours and attendance to the HR Director without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on working hours and attendance.

6.5.25 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on working hours and attendance and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.5.26 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

6.5.27 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to working hours and attendance to the HR Director without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on working hours and attendance and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

6.5.29 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.5.30 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on working hours and attendance and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.5.31 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.5.32 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on working hours and attendance and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

6.5.33 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

6.6.1 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.6.2 HR shall respond to every written query on working hours and attendance within 5 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.6.3 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for working hours and attendance and shall make them available to all employees.

6.6.4 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

6.6.5 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for working hours and attendance and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for working hours and attendance and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

6.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with working hours and attendance in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.6.8 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.6.9 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to working hours and attendance and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

6.6.10 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with working hours and attendance in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.6.11 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.6.12 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for working hours and attendance and shall make them available to all employees. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.6.13 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.6.14 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to working hours and attendance. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for working hours and attendance and shall make them available to all employees.

6.6.15 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

6.6.16 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.6.17 HR shall respond to every written query on working hours and attendance within 7 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.6.18 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with working hours and attendance in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to working hours and attendance.

6.6.19 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to working hours and attendance and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.6.20 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.6.21 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.6.22 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to working hours and attendance. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

6.6.23 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to working hours and attendance and on the applicable legal requirements.

6.6.24 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with working hours and attendance in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

6.6.25 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to working hours and attendance and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall respond to every written query on working hours and attendance within 3 working days of receipt.

6.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on working hours and attendance within 21 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.6.27 HR shall respond to every written query on working hours and attendance within 5 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.6.28 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.6.29 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to working hours and attendance. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.6.30 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.6.31 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for working hours and attendance and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to working hours and attendance and on the applicable legal requirements.

6.6.32 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.6.33 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to working hours and attendance. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

6.7 Procedure and Process Steps

6.7.1 Standard working week. The standard working week shall be 45 hours per week, exclusive of meal intervals.

6.7.2 The employee shall initiate the process relating to working hours and attendance by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

6.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.7.4 The employee shall initiate the process relating to working hours and attendance by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.7.5 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

6.7.6 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.7.7 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.7.8 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.7.9 The employee shall initiate the process relating to working hours and attendance by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it.

6.7.10 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 14 working days of receiving it.

6.7.11 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

6.7.12 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.7.14 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.7.15 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 2 working days of receiving it.

6.7.16 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

6.7.17 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.7.18 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.7.19 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

6.7.20 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 14 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.7.21 The employee shall initiate the process relating to working hours and attendance by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.7.22 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.7.23 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.7.24 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 15 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

6.7.26 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 14 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.7.27 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

6.7.28 The employee shall initiate the process relating to working hours and attendance by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.7.29 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 10 working days of receiving it.

6.7.30 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.7.31 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.7.32 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

6.7.33 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

6.7.34 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

6.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

6.8.1 Records relating to working hours and attendance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.8.2 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.8.3 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.8.4 All documents relating to working hours and attendance shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to working hours and attendance that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

6.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.8.6 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

6.8.7 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.8.8 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to working hours and attendance that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

6.8.9 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

6.8.10 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.8.11 Records relating to working hours and attendance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

6.8.12 Records relating to working hours and attendance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

6.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

6.8.14 All documents relating to working hours and attendance shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.8.15 All documents relating to working hours and attendance shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.8.16 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

6.8.17 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.8.18 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to working hours and attendance that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. All documents relating to working hours and attendance shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

6.8.19 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

6.8.20 All documents relating to working hours and attendance shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.8.21 All documents relating to working hours and attendance shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

6.8.22 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

6.8.23 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

6.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to working hours and attendance that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.8.25 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to working hours and attendance that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

6.8.26 Records relating to working hours and attendance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

6.8.27 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.8.28 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

6.8.29 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

6.8.30 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

6.8.31 All documents relating to working hours and attendance shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.8.32 Records relating to working hours and attendance shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.8.33 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to working hours and attendance that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

6.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.9.2 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

6.9.3 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice.

6.9.4 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.9.5 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.9.6 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.9.7 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.9.8 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.9.9 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

6.9.12 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.9.13 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.9.14 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.9.15 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.9.16 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.9.17 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

6.9.18 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.9.19 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.9.20 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.9.21 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

6.9.22 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.9.23 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

6.9.24 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

6.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

6.9.27 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.9.28 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

6.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

6.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

6.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on working hours and attendance may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

6.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

6.10.1 Where an external regulator requests information concerning working hours and attendance, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.10.2 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.10.3 An internal audit of working hours and attendance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Compliance with the provisions on working hours and attendance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

6.10.4 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where an external regulator requests information concerning working hours and attendance, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

6.10.5 Compliance with the provisions on working hours and attendance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.10.6 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

6.10.7 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to working hours and attendance. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.10.8 An internal audit of working hours and attendance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

6.10.9 An internal audit of working hours and attendance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.10.10 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

6.10.11 An internal audit of working hours and attendance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.10.12 An internal audit of working hours and attendance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.10.13 Compliance with the provisions on working hours and attendance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

6.10.14 An internal audit of working hours and attendance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

6.10.15 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to working hours and attendance. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.10.16 Compliance with the provisions on working hours and attendance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Compliance with the provisions on working hours and attendance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

6.10.18 Compliance with the provisions on working hours and attendance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.10.19 Compliance data relating to working hours and attendance shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.10.20 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to working hours and attendance. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.10.22 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.10.23 Compliance data relating to working hours and attendance shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

6.10.24 An internal audit of working hours and attendance shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.10.25 Compliance data relating to working hours and attendance shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Compliance with the provisions on working hours and attendance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

6.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.10.27 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Compliance with the provisions on working hours and attendance shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

6.10.28 Where an external regulator requests information concerning working hours and attendance, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.10.29 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to working hours and attendance.

6.10.30 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.10.31 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to working hours and attendance. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

6.10.32 Where an external regulator requests information concerning working hours and attendance, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.10.33 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to working hours and attendance. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

6.11.1 A failure to comply with the provisions on working hours and attendance may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.11.2 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to working hours and attendance shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

6.11.3 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

6.11.4 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

6.11.5 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to working hours and attendance shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

6.11.7 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to working hours and attendance shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.11.8 A failure to comply with the provisions on working hours and attendance may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

6.11.9 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

6.11.10 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

6.11.12 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to working hours and attendance shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

6.11.13 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.11.14 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.11.15 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.11.16 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.11.17 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to working hours and attendance shall be treated as serious misconduct. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

6.11.18 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

6.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on working hours and attendance may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

6.11.20 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.11.21 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

6.11.22 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

6.11.23 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to working hours and attendance shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

6.11.24 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.11.25 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

6.11.26 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to working hours and attendance shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.11.27 A failure to comply with the provisions on working hours and attendance may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

6.11.28 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

6.11.29 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

6.11.31 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

6.11.32 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.11.33 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

6.12 Review and Amendment

6.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

6.12.2 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on working hours and attendance through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

6.12.3 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on working hours and attendance through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

6.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.12.5 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.12.6 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.12.7 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

6.12.8 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

6.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

6.12.10 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on working hours and attendance through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

6.12.13 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

6.12.14 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.12.15 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

6.12.16 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to working hours and attendance, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

6.12.17 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.12.18 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

6.12.19 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

6.12.20 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

6.12.22 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to working hours and attendance made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

6.12.24 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on working hours and attendance through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

6.12.25 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on working hours and attendance through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

6.12.26 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

6.12.27 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

6.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on working hours and attendance through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

6.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

6.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

6.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on working hours and attendance through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect.

6.12.32 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on working hours and attendance through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

6.12.33 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

Chapter 7

Overtime and Shift Work

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Overtime rate	1.5 times
Overtime cap	50 hours per month

7.1 Purpose and Scope

7.1.1 The objective of these provisions on overtime and shift work is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

7.1.2 The objective of these provisions on overtime and shift work is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.1.4 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.1.5 The Company recognises that overtime and shift work has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

7.1.6 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

7.1.7 The Company recognises that overtime and shift work has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

7.1.8 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.1.9 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

7.1.10 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.1.11 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on overtime and shift work.

7.1.12 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to overtime and shift work and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

7.1.13 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on overtime and shift work.

7.1.14 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to overtime and shift work and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

7.1.15 The objective of these provisions on overtime and shift work is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.1.16 The Company recognises that overtime and shift work has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.1.17 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The objective of these provisions on overtime and shift work is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

7.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company recognises that overtime and shift work has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

7.1.19 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.1.20 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

7.1.21 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.1.22 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.1.23 The objective of these provisions on overtime and shift work is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.1.24 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.1.25 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

7.1.26 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to overtime and shift work and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.1.27 The Company recognises that overtime and shift work has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The objective of these provisions on overtime and shift work is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

7.1.28 The objective of these provisions on overtime and shift work is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

7.1.29 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on overtime and shift work.

7.1.30 The objective of these provisions on overtime and shift work is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.1.31 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on overtime and shift work. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.1.32 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on overtime and shift work.

7.1.33 The objective of these provisions on overtime and shift work is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

7.2 Definitions and Interpretation

7.2.1 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to overtime and shift work. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "overtime and shift work" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

7.2.2 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.2.3 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

7.2.4 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to overtime and shift work. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.2.5 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.2.6 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "overtime and shift work" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.2.7 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.2.8 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "overtime and shift work" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

7.2.9 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

7.2.10 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "overtime and shift work" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

7.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

7.2.12 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

7.2.13 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.2.14 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

7.2.15 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

7.2.17 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.2.18 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

7.2.19 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to overtime and shift work. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

7.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

7.2.21 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.2.22 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to overtime and shift work. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.2.24 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.2.25 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.2.26 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

7.2.27 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.2.29 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "overtime and shift work" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

7.2.30 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

7.2.31 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.2.32 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.2.33 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.3 Eligibility and Applicability

7.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on overtime and shift work. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.3.2 Eligibility for overtime and shift work shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

7.3.3 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for overtime and shift work restricted until the matter is concluded. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

7.3.5 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for overtime and shift work restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

7.3.6 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for overtime and shift work restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

7.3.8 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for overtime and shift work restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.3.9 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on overtime and shift work.

7.3.10 Eligibility for overtime and shift work shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.3.11 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on overtime and shift work.

7.3.12 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.3.13 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.3.14 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on overtime and shift work.

7.3.15 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.3.16 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.3.17 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on overtime and shift work. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.3.19 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on overtime and shift work. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.3.20 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on overtime and shift work. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

7.3.21 Eligibility for overtime and shift work shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

7.3.22 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for overtime and shift work restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

7.3.23 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for overtime and shift work restricted until the matter is concluded.

7.3.24 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.3.25 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on overtime and shift work. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.3.26 Eligibility for overtime and shift work shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

7.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on overtime and shift work.

7.3.28 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

7.3.29 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for overtime and shift work restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.3.31 Eligibility for overtime and shift work shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

7.3.32 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for overtime and shift work restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.3.33 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.4 Responsibilities of Employees

7.4.1 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to overtime and shift work and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.4.2 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on overtime and shift work and shall comply with them at all times. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to overtime and shift work and shall not withhold material facts.

7.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.4.4 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with overtime and shift work.

7.4.5 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

7.4.6 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with overtime and shift work. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.4.7 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on overtime and shift work and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.4.8 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to overtime and shift work and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

7.4.9 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to overtime and shift work and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on overtime and shift work and shall comply with them at all times.

7.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of overtime and shift work as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.4.11 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

7.4.12 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.4.13 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.4.14 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.4.15 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on overtime and shift work and shall comply with them at all times. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

7.4.17 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.4.19 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to overtime and shift work and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.4.20 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

7.4.21 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to overtime and shift work and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line

Manager.

7.4.22 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of overtime and shift work as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.4.23 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on overtime and shift work and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

7.4.24 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on overtime and shift work and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to overtime and shift work and shall not withhold material facts.

7.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with overtime and shift work. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of overtime and shift work as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

7.4.27 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.4.28 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on overtime and shift work and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.4.29 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.4.30 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on overtime and shift work and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

7.4.31 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of overtime and shift work as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

7.4.32 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to overtime and shift work and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.4.33 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with overtime and shift work. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

7.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

7.5.1 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on overtime and shift work and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on overtime and shift work and applies them consistently.

7.5.2 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on overtime and shift work and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

7.5.3 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to overtime and shift work within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

7.5.4 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on overtime and shift work and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on overtime and shift work.

7.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on overtime and shift work and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

7.5.6 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on overtime and shift work.

7.5.7 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to overtime and shift work within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on overtime and shift work and applies them consistently.

7.5.8 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.5.9 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on overtime and shift work and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

7.5.10 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on overtime and shift work and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.5.11 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on overtime and shift work and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

7.5.12 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on overtime and shift work.

7.5.13 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to overtime and shift work to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to overtime and shift work within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

7.5.14 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

7.5.15 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to overtime and shift work to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.5.16 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to overtime and shift work to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on overtime and shift work and applies them consistently.

7.5.17 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on overtime and shift work and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.5.18 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on overtime and shift work. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.5.19 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to overtime and shift work within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.5.20 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.5.21 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on overtime and shift work and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.5.22 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on overtime and shift work. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.5.23 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to overtime and shift work to the Policy Committee without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

7.5.24 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.5.25 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on overtime and shift work and applies them consistently.

7.5.26 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.5.27 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on overtime and shift work and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.5.28 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on overtime and shift work and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.5.29 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.5.30 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

7.5.31 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to overtime and shift work within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.5.32 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on overtime and shift work and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to overtime and shift work within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on overtime and shift work and applies them consistently.

7.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

7.6.1 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to overtime and shift work and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

7.6.2 HR shall respond to every written query on overtime and shift work within 7 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.6.3 HR shall respond to every written query on overtime and shift work within 10 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.6.5 HR shall respond to every written query on overtime and shift work within 10 working days of receipt.

7.6.6 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to overtime and shift work. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

7.6.7 HR shall respond to every written query on overtime and shift work within 15 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.6.8 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with overtime and shift work in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

7.6.9 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.6.10 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to overtime and shift work. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

7.6.11 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

7.6.12 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to overtime and shift work and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.6.13 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to overtime and shift work. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

7.6.14 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to overtime and shift work. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with overtime and shift work in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

7.6.15 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to overtime and shift work and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.6.16 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall respond to every written query on overtime and shift work within 5 working days of receipt.

7.6.17 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall respond to every written query on overtime and shift work within 30 working days of receipt.

7.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to overtime and shift work and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

7.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

7.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.6.21 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to overtime and shift work and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.6.22 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.6.23 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to overtime and shift work. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.6.24 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for overtime and shift work and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.6.25 HR shall respond to every written query on overtime and shift work within 14 working days of receipt.

7.6.26 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.6.27 HR shall respond to every written query on overtime and shift work within 14 working days of receipt.

7.6.28 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to overtime and shift work and on the applicable legal requirements. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

7.6.29 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to overtime and shift work. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with overtime and shift work in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

7.6.31 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to overtime and shift work. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.6.32 HR shall respond to every written query on overtime and shift work within 5 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.6.33 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with overtime and shift work in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

7.7 Procedure and Process Steps

7.7.1 Overtime rate. Authorised overtime shall be compensated at 1.5 times the normal hourly rate.

7.7.2 Overtime cap. No employee shall be required to work more than 50 hours per month of overtime.

7.7.3 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.7.5 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

7.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.7.8 The employee shall initiate the process relating to overtime and shift work by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

7.7.9 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.7.10 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.7.11 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 10 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.7.12 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

7.7.13 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it.

7.7.14 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.7.15 The employee shall initiate the process relating to overtime and shift work by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.7.16 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

7.7.17 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.7.18 The employee shall initiate the process relating to overtime and shift work by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

7.7.19 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 30 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

7.7.20 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 10 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

7.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

7.7.22 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.7.23 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

7.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to overtime and shift work by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.7.25 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.7.26 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

7.7.27 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

7.7.28 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.7.29 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

7.7.30 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The employee shall initiate the process relating to overtime and shift work by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner.

7.7.31 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.7.32 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.7.33 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.7.34 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

7.7.35 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

7.8.1 All documents relating to overtime and shift work shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.8.2 Records relating to overtime and shift work shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.8.3 Records relating to overtime and shift work shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

7.8.4 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

7.8.5 Records relating to overtime and shift work shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.8.6 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to overtime and shift work that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.8.7 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.8.8 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

7.8.9 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

7.8.10 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.8.11 All documents relating to overtime and shift work shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

7.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.8.13 Records relating to overtime and shift work shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.8.14 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

7.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Records relating to overtime and shift work shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years.

7.8.16 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

7.8.17 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.8.18 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to overtime and shift work that is held about them, subject to applicable law. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

7.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to overtime and shift work that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.8.20 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

7.8.21 Records relating to overtime and shift work shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to overtime and shift work that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

7.8.23 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.8.24 All documents relating to overtime and shift work shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

7.8.25 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to overtime and shift work that is held about them, subject to applicable law. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.8.26 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

7.8.27 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.8.28 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to overtime and shift work that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

7.8.29 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to overtime and shift work that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

7.8.30 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

7.8.31 Records relating to overtime and shift work shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

7.8.32 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

7.8.33 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to overtime and shift work that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

7.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

7.9.1 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Exceptions to the provisions on overtime and shift work may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

7.9.2 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.9.3 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

7.9.4 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.9.5 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

7.9.6 Exceptions to the provisions on overtime and shift work may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.9.7 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

7.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

7.9.9 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

7.9.10 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

7.9.11 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

7.9.12 Exceptions to the provisions on overtime and shift work may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

7.9.13 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.9.14 Exceptions to the provisions on overtime and shift work may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.9.15 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.9.16 Exceptions to the provisions on overtime and shift work may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.9.17 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.9.19 Exceptions to the provisions on overtime and shift work may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

7.9.20 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.9.21 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice.

7.9.22 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice.

7.9.23 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.9.24 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

7.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on overtime and shift work may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

7.9.27 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.9.28 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.9.29 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.9.30 Exceptions to the provisions on overtime and shift work may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

7.9.31 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Exceptions to the provisions on overtime and shift work may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

7.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.9.33 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

7.10.1 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

7.10.2 Where an external regulator requests information concerning overtime and shift work, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.10.3 An internal audit of overtime and shift work shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to overtime and shift work.

7.10.4 Compliance with the provisions on overtime and shift work shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

7.10.5 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to overtime and shift work. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

7.10.7 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.10.8 Compliance with the provisions on overtime and shift work shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Compliance data relating to overtime and shift work shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

7.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to overtime and shift work. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.10.10 Where an external regulator requests information concerning overtime and shift work, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

7.10.11 Compliance data relating to overtime and shift work shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.10.12 Compliance data relating to overtime and shift work shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.10.13 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

7.10.14 Compliance data relating to overtime and shift work shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.10.15 Compliance with the provisions on overtime and shift work shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.10.16 Compliance with the provisions on overtime and shift work shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

7.10.17 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to overtime and shift work. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.10.18 Where an external regulator requests information concerning overtime and shift work, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.10.19 Compliance data relating to overtime and shift work shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Compliance with the provisions on overtime and shift work shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

7.10.20 Where an external regulator requests information concerning overtime and shift work, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.10.21 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where an external regulator requests information concerning overtime and shift work, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

7.10.22 Compliance data relating to overtime and shift work shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to overtime and shift work. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Compliance data relating to overtime and shift work shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

7.10.24 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

7.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An internal audit of overtime and shift work shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

7.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

7.10.27 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.10.28 Compliance data relating to overtime and shift work shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.10.29 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to overtime and shift work.

7.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on overtime and shift work shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

7.10.31 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to overtime and shift work. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.10.32 An internal audit of overtime and shift work shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where an external regulator requests information concerning overtime and shift work, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

7.10.33 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

7.11.1 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.11.2 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to overtime and shift work shall be treated as serious misconduct.

7.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.11.4 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.11.5 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to overtime and shift work shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.11.6 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

7.11.7 A failure to comply with the provisions on overtime and shift work may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

7.11.8 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.11.9 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.11.10 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

7.11.12 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.11.14 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.11.15 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

7.11.17 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.11.18 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

7.11.19 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

7.11.20 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to overtime and shift work, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

7.11.21 A failure to comply with the provisions on overtime and shift work may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.11.22 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.11.24 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

7.11.25 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

7.11.26 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

7.11.27 A failure to comply with the provisions on overtime and shift work may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.11.28 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.11.30 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

7.11.31 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to overtime and shift work shall be treated as serious misconduct. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

7.11.32 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

7.11.33 A failure to comply with the provisions on overtime and shift work may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.12 Review and Amendment

7.12.1 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

7.12.2 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to overtime and shift work made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

7.12.3 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

7.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

7.12.6 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

7.12.7 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.12.8 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

7.12.9 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

7.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

7.12.11 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

7.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.12.13 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

7.12.14 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

7.12.15 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

7.12.16 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

7.12.17 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

7.12.18 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

7.12.19 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.12.20 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

7.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.12.22 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

7.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

7.12.24 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

7.12.25 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect.

7.12.26 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

7.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

7.12.28 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

7.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

7.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

7.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

7.12.32 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on overtime and shift work through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

7.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

Chapter 8

Annual Leave

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Annual entitlement	18 working days
Carry forward	10 days

8.1 Purpose and Scope

8.1.1 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

8.1.2 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to annual leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.1.4 The objective of these provisions on annual leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

8.1.5 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.1.6 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.1.7 The Company recognises that annual leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

8.1.8 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to annual leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

8.1.9 The Company recognises that annual leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

8.1.10 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

8.1.11 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on annual leave. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.1.12 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to annual leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

8.1.13 The objective of these provisions on annual leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

8.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

8.1.15 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on annual leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.1.16 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on annual leave.

8.1.17 The Company recognises that annual leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

8.1.18 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

8.1.19 The objective of these provisions on annual leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.1.20 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

8.1.21 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to annual leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.1.22 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to annual leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.1.23 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

8.1.24 The objective of these provisions on annual leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on annual leave.

8.1.25 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.1.26 The objective of these provisions on annual leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

8.1.27 The objective of these provisions on annual leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line

Manager.

8.1.28 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.1.29 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

8.1.30 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

8.1.31 The Company recognises that annual leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.1.32 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.1.33 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.2 Definitions and Interpretation

8.2.1 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.2.2 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "annual leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.2.3 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to annual leave.

8.2.4 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.2.5 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

8.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.2.8 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "annual leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

8.2.10 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.2.11 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

8.2.12 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

8.2.13 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.2.15 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to annual leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.2.16 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to annual leave. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.2.17 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.2.18 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to annual leave. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.2.19 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

8.2.20 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

8.2.21 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

8.2.22 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.2.23 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "annual leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

8.2.24 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.2.25 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

8.2.26 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.2.27 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "annual leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

8.2.28 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

8.2.29 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.2.30 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.2.31 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to annual leave. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

8.2.32 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

8.2.33 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "annual leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.3 Eligibility and Applicability

8.3.1 Eligibility for annual leave shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

8.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.3.3 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.3.4 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.3.5 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

8.3.6 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for annual leave restricted until the matter is concluded.

8.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for annual leave restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

8.3.8 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.3.9 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.3.10 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.3.11 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on annual leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.3.12 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

8.3.13 Eligibility for annual leave shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.3.14 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for annual leave restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.3.15 Eligibility for annual leave shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.3.16 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on annual leave. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.3.17 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.3.18 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for annual leave restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.3.19 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

8.3.21 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.3.22 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for annual leave restricted until the matter is concluded. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility for annual leave shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

8.3.23 Eligibility for annual leave shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.3.24 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

8.3.25 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

8.3.26 Eligibility for annual leave shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on annual leave.

8.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for annual leave restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.3.28 Eligibility for annual leave shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.3.29 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for annual leave restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.3.31 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on annual leave.

8.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on annual leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.3.33 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on annual leave.

8.4 Responsibilities of Employees

8.4.1 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.4.2 The employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to annual leave and shall not withhold material facts.

8.4.3 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with annual leave. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.4.4 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of annual leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

8.4.5 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of annual leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

8.4.7 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

8.4.8 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on annual leave and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.4.9 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

8.4.10 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.4.11 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with annual leave. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.4.12 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of annual leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.4.13 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.4.14 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on annual leave and shall comply with them at all times.

8.4.15 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.4.16 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to annual leave and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

8.4.17 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.4.18 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with annual leave. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

8.4.19 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.4.20 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with annual leave. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.4.21 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with annual leave. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.4.22 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on annual leave and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.4.23 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of annual leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

8.4.24 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

8.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on annual leave and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.4.26 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.4.27 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.4.28 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

8.4.29 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with annual leave. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

8.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to annual leave and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.4.31 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on annual leave and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.4.32 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

8.4.33 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with annual leave.

8.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

8.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on annual leave. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

8.5.2 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on annual leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.5.3 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.5.4 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.5.5 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to annual leave within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

8.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to annual leave within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.5.7 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.5.8 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on annual leave and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.5.9 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on annual leave.

8.5.10 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on annual leave and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.5.11 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on annual leave. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on annual leave and applies them consistently.

8.5.12 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.5.13 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to annual leave within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

8.5.14 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on annual leave and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

8.5.15 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on annual leave and applies them consistently.

8.5.16 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to annual leave to the HR Director without undue delay. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

8.5.17 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

8.5.18 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to annual leave to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.5.19 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on annual leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to annual leave within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.5.21 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on annual leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

8.5.22 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

8.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

8.5.24 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

8.5.25 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to annual leave within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.5.26 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on annual leave. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to annual leave to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

8.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on annual leave. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on annual leave. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to annual leave to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

8.5.29 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on annual leave and applies them consistently. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

8.5.30 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to annual leave to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

8.5.31 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on annual leave.

8.5.32 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

8.5.33 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on annual leave. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

8.6.1 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

8.6.2 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to annual leave and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.6.3 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.6.4 HR shall respond to every written query on annual leave within 7 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees.

8.6.5 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

8.6.6 HR shall respond to every written query on annual leave within 3 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

8.6.7 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.6.8 HR shall respond to every written query on annual leave within 30 working days of receipt.

8.6.9 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.6.10 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees.

8.6.11 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.6.12 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

8.6.13 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.6.14 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with annual leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

8.6.15 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to annual leave and on the applicable legal requirements.

8.6.16 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to annual leave. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to annual leave. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.6.18 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.6.19 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to annual leave. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to annual leave and on the applicable legal requirements.

8.6.20 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with annual leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.6.21 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

8.6.22 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to annual leave.

8.6.23 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to annual leave. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

8.6.24 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

8.6.25 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to annual leave. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to annual leave and on the applicable legal requirements.

8.6.26 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.6.27 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.6.28 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with annual leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.6.29 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for annual leave and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

8.6.30 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.6.31 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall respond to every written query on annual leave within 5 working days of receipt.

8.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with annual leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to annual leave.

8.6.33 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.7 Procedure and Process Steps

8.7.1 Annual entitlement. Each confirmed employee shall be entitled to 18 working days of paid annual leave in every leave year.

8.7.2 Carry forward. Unused annual leave of up to 10 days may be carried forward to the next leave year.

8.7.3 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

8.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

8.7.5 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 21 working days of receiving it.

8.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it.

8.7.7 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.7.8 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.7.9 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

8.7.10 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

8.7.11 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.7.12 The employee shall initiate the process relating to annual leave by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

8.7.13 The employee shall initiate the process relating to annual leave by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

8.7.14 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.7.15 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

8.7.16 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

8.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.7.18 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it.

8.7.19 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

8.7.20 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

8.7.22 The employee shall initiate the process relating to annual leave by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.7.23 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

8.7.24 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.7.25 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

8.7.26 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

8.7.27 The employee shall initiate the process relating to annual leave by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.7.28 The employee shall initiate the process relating to annual leave by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.7.29 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

8.7.30 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

8.7.31 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 10 working days of receiving it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

8.7.33 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

8.7.34 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.7.35 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

8.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

8.8.1 Records relating to annual leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

8.8.2 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

8.8.3 Records relating to annual leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

8.8.4 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. All documents relating to annual leave shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

8.8.5 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.8.6 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to annual leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

8.8.8 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

8.8.9 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

8.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

8.8.11 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.8.12 All documents relating to annual leave shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

8.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

8.8.14 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.8.15 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.8.16 Records relating to annual leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.8.17 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

8.8.18 All documents relating to annual leave shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.8.19 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.8.20 Records relating to annual leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to annual leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

8.8.21 Records relating to annual leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

8.8.22 Records relating to annual leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.8.23 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

8.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to annual leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.8.25 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

8.8.26 All documents relating to annual leave shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to annual leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

8.8.27 All documents relating to annual leave shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.8.28 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.8.29 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to annual leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

8.8.30 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

8.8.31 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.8.32 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to annual leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

8.8.33 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

8.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

8.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on annual leave may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice.

8.9.2 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.9.3 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

8.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

8.9.5 Exceptions to the provisions on annual leave may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

8.9.6 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.9.7 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.9.8 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.9.9 Exceptions to the provisions on annual leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.9.10 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on annual leave may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.9.12 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

8.9.13 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

8.9.14 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

8.9.15 Exceptions to the provisions on annual leave may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

8.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

8.9.17 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.9.18 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.9.19 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on annual leave may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

8.9.22 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.9.24 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

8.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.9.26 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

8.9.27 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

8.9.28 Exceptions to the provisions on annual leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

8.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

8.9.30 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.9.31 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.9.32 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

8.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

8.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on annual leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.10.2 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave. An internal audit of annual leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

8.10.3 Compliance data relating to annual leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

8.10.4 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

8.10.5 An internal audit of annual leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave.

8.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.10.7 Compliance data relating to annual leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

8.10.8 An internal audit of annual leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Compliance with the provisions on annual leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

8.10.9 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

8.10.10 Compliance data relating to annual leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where an external regulator requests information concerning annual leave, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

8.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.10.12 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where an external regulator requests information concerning annual leave, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

8.10.13 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.10.14 Compliance data relating to annual leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An internal audit of annual leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

8.10.15 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

8.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.10.18 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

8.10.19 Where an external regulator requests information concerning annual leave, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Compliance data relating to annual leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

8.10.20 An internal audit of annual leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

8.10.21 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave.

8.10.22 Compliance data relating to annual leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where an external regulator requests information concerning annual leave, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

8.10.23 An internal audit of annual leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

8.10.24 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave.

8.10.25 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning annual leave, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

8.10.27 Compliance data relating to annual leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.10.28 Where an external regulator requests information concerning annual leave, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.10.29 An internal audit of annual leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

8.10.30 Compliance data relating to annual leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.10.31 Compliance with the provisions on annual leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

8.10.32 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to annual leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

8.10.33 An internal audit of annual leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. To illustrate, where the Reporting

Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Compliance data relating to annual leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

8.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

8.11.1 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

8.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.11.3 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.11.4 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

8.11.5 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to annual leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A failure to comply with the provisions on annual leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

8.11.6 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.11.7 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

8.11.8 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to annual leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

8.11.9 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.11.10 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to annual leave shall be treated as serious misconduct.

8.11.12 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.11.13 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to annual leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

8.11.14 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.11.15 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A failure to comply with the provisions on annual leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

8.11.16 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.11.17 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

8.11.18 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. A failure to comply with the provisions on annual leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

8.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on annual leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

8.11.20 A failure to comply with the provisions on annual leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.11.21 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

8.11.22 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

8.11.23 A failure to comply with the provisions on annual leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

8.11.24 A failure to comply with the provisions on annual leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

8.11.25 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

8.11.26 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

8.11.27 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

8.11.28 A failure to comply with the provisions on annual leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

8.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

8.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

8.11.31 A failure to comply with the provisions on annual leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.11.32 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

8.11.33 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.12 Review and Amendment

8.12.1 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

8.12.2 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

8.12.3 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

8.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

8.12.5 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

8.12.6 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

8.12.7 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.12.8 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

8.12.9 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.12.10 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.12.11 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

8.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

8.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.12.14 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

8.12.15 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect.

8.12.16 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

8.12.17 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

8.12.18 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

8.12.19 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

8.12.20 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

8.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

8.12.22 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

8.12.23 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

8.12.24 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

8.12.25 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

8.12.26 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

8.12.27 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

8.12.29 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to annual leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

8.12.30 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on annual leave through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

8.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

8.12.32 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to annual leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

8.12.33 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

Chapter 9

Sick Leave and Medical Absence

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Paid sick leave	8 days
Medical certificate	more than 3 consecutive days

9.1 Purpose and Scope

9.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on sick leave and medical absence. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

9.1.2 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.1.3 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to sick leave and medical absence and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

9.1.4 The objective of these provisions on sick leave and medical absence is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

9.1.5 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to sick leave and medical absence and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.1.6 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on sick leave and medical absence. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.1.7 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. By way of illustration, where the concerned

employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to sick leave and medical absence and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

9.1.8 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to sick leave and medical absence and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

9.1.9 The objective of these provisions on sick leave and medical absence is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.1.10 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.1.11 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.1.12 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.1.13 The objective of these provisions on sick leave and medical absence is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. The Company recognises that sick leave and medical absence has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

9.1.14 The Company recognises that sick leave and medical absence has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.1.15 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on sick leave and medical absence. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.1.16 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

9.1.17 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on sick leave and medical absence. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

9.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.1.19 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.1.20 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.1.21 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.1.22 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

9.1.23 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

9.1.24 The objective of these provisions on sick leave and medical absence is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.1.25 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on sick leave and medical absence. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.1.26 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.1.27 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to sick leave and medical absence and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

9.1.28 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The objective of these provisions on sick leave and medical absence is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

9.1.29 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

9.1.30 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to sick leave and medical absence and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

9.1.31 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to sick leave and medical absence and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

9.1.32 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

9.1.33 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.2 Definitions and Interpretation

9.2.1 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.2.2 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "sick leave and medical absence" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

9.2.3 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "sick leave and medical absence" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to sick leave and medical absence.

9.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

9.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to sick leave and medical absence. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

9.2.6 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "sick leave and medical absence" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

9.2.7 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to sick leave and medical absence. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to sick leave and medical absence. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.2.9 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to sick leave and medical absence. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.2.10 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "sick leave and medical absence" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

9.2.11 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

9.2.12 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.2.13 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

9.2.15 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

9.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.2.17 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

9.2.18 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to sick leave and medical absence. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

9.2.19 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "sick leave and medical absence" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.2.20 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.2.21 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.2.22 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "sick leave and medical absence" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

9.2.23 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "sick leave and medical absence" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.2.25 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to sick leave and medical absence. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.2.26 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.2.27 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.2.28 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "sick leave and medical absence" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

9.2.29 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to sick leave and medical absence. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.2.30 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

9.2.31 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to sick leave and medical absence.

9.2.33 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.3 Eligibility and Applicability

9.3.1 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for sick leave and medical absence restricted until the matter is concluded.

9.3.3 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.3.4 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.3.5 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Eligibility for sick leave and medical absence shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

9.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for sick leave and medical absence restricted until the matter is concluded.

9.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on sick leave and medical absence. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

9.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

9.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on sick leave and medical absence. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.3.11 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.3.12 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.3.13 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.3.14 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.3.15 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.3.16 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on sick leave and medical absence. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.3.17 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on sick leave and medical absence. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.3.18 Eligibility for sick leave and medical absence shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.3.19 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.3.20 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

9.3.21 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

9.3.22 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on sick leave and medical absence. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

9.3.23 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for sick leave and medical absence restricted until the matter is concluded.

9.3.25 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on sick leave and medical absence.

9.3.26 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

9.3.27 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.3.28 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

9.3.29 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.3.30 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

9.3.31 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.3.32 Eligibility for sick leave and medical absence shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.3.33 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

9.4 Responsibilities of Employees

9.4.1 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of sick leave and medical absence as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.4.2 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

9.4.3 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence and shall comply with them at all times.

9.4.4 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of sick leave and medical absence as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.4.5 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

9.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of sick leave and medical absence as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.4.7 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to sick leave and medical absence and shall not withhold material facts.

9.4.8 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of sick leave and medical absence as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

9.4.9 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of sick leave and medical absence as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.4.10 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.4.12 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with sick leave and medical absence. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.4.13 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence and shall comply with them at all times.

9.4.14 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.4.15 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

9.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.4.17 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to sick leave and medical absence and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.4.18 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.4.19 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to sick leave and medical absence and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.4.20 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

9.4.22 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

9.4.23 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to sick leave and medical absence and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.4.24 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with sick leave and medical absence. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.4.25 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.4.26 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to sick leave and medical absence and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of sick leave and medical absence as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

9.4.27 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

9.4.28 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to sick leave and medical absence and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.4.29 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

9.4.30 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with sick leave and medical absence. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.4.32 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of sick leave and medical absence as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

9.4.33 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence and shall comply with them at all times. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

9.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

9.5.1 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

9.5.2 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on sick leave and medical absence and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

9.5.3 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.5.4 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on sick leave and medical absence. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on sick leave and medical absence and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.5.6 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on sick leave and medical absence and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on sick leave and medical absence.

9.5.8 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.5.9 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on sick leave and medical absence and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

9.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to sick leave and medical absence to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

9.5.11 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.5.12 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to sick leave and medical absence within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

9.5.14 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to sick leave and medical absence to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.5.15 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on sick leave and medical absence and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

9.5.16 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.5.17 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to sick leave and medical absence within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.5.19 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on sick leave and medical absence. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

9.5.20 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on sick leave and medical absence and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.5.21 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to sick leave and medical absence within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.5.22 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to sick leave and medical absence to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.5.23 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.5.24 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to sick leave and medical absence within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.5.25 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.5.26 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on sick leave and medical absence. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on sick leave and medical absence and applies them consistently.

9.5.28 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on sick leave and medical absence and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.5.29 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to sick leave and medical absence to the HR Director without undue delay. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.5.30 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on sick leave and medical absence and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to sick leave and medical absence to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

9.5.31 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on sick leave and medical absence. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.5.32 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on sick leave and medical absence.

9.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to sick leave and medical absence within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

9.6.1 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for sick leave and medical absence and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.6.2 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with sick leave and medical absence in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.6.3 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to sick leave and medical absence. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.6.4 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with sick leave and medical absence in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

9.6.5 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to sick leave and medical absence. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for sick leave and medical absence and shall make them available to all employees.

9.6.6 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with sick leave and medical absence in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to sick leave and medical absence and on the applicable legal requirements.

9.6.7 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to sick leave and medical absence and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

9.6.9 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with sick leave and medical absence in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

9.6.10 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

9.6.11 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to sick leave and medical absence. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.6.12 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with sick leave and medical absence in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to sick leave and medical absence and on the applicable legal requirements.

9.6.13 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.6.14 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to sick leave and medical absence. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.6.15 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to sick leave and medical absence. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.6.16 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for sick leave and medical absence and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.6.17 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for sick leave and medical absence and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to sick leave and medical absence.

9.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to sick leave and medical absence. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

9.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.6.20 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for sick leave and medical absence and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

9.6.21 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to sick leave and medical absence and on the applicable legal requirements.

9.6.22 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.6.23 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to sick leave and medical absence and on the applicable legal requirements.

9.6.24 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.6.25 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with sick leave and medical absence in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

9.6.26 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.6.27 HR shall respond to every written query on sick leave and medical absence within 21 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

9.6.28 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for sick leave and medical absence and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.6.29 HR shall respond to every written query on sick leave and medical absence within 5 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.6.30 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

9.6.31 HR shall respond to every written query on sick leave and medical absence within 5 working days of receipt. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with sick leave and medical absence in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.6.33 HR shall respond to every written query on sick leave and medical absence within 15 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with sick leave and medical absence in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

9.7 Procedure and Process Steps

9.7.1 Paid sick leave. Each employee shall be entitled to 8 days of paid sick leave in every leave year.

9.7.2 Medical certificate. A medical certificate shall be produced for any absence lasting more than 3 consecutive days.

9.7.3 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

9.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.7.5 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 21 working days of receiving it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.7.6 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.7.7 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.7.8 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.7.9 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.7.10 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.7.11 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.7.12 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.7.13 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.7.14 The employee shall initiate the process relating to sick leave and medical absence by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager.

9.7.15 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.7.16 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

9.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.7.18 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.7.19 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.7.20 The employee shall initiate the process relating to sick leave and medical absence by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

9.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.7.22 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to sick leave and medical absence by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

9.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to sick leave and medical absence by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

9.7.25 The employee shall initiate the process relating to sick leave and medical absence by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department.

9.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

9.7.27 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it.

9.7.28 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

9.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

9.7.30 The employee shall initiate the process relating to sick leave and medical absence by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.7.31 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.7.32 The employee shall initiate the process relating to sick leave and medical absence by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it.

9.7.33 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.7.34 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.7.35 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 2 working days of receiving it.

9.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

9.8.1 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

9.8.2 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.8.3 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

9.8.4 All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

9.8.5 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to sick leave and medical absence that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

9.8.6 All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

9.8.7 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

9.8.8 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to sick leave and medical absence that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.8.9 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to sick leave and medical absence that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

9.8.10 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

9.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.8.12 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

9.8.14 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.8.15 All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to sick leave and medical absence that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

9.8.16 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.8.17 All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.8.18 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to sick leave and medical absence that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

9.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

9.8.20 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.8.21 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.8.22 All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.8.23 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to sick leave and medical absence that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.8.24 Records relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.8.25 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.8.26 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

9.8.27 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.8.28 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

9.8.29 All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

9.8.30 All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

9.8.31 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

9.8.32 Records relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. All documents relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

9.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

9.9.1 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

9.9.2 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.9.3 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.9.4 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.9.5 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.9.7 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

9.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.9.9 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.9.10 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

9.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

9.9.12 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.9.13 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.9.14 Exceptions to the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice.

9.9.15 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.9.16 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.9.17 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.9.18 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.9.19 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.9.20 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.9.21 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.9.22 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.9.23 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Exceptions to the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

9.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

9.9.25 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.9.26 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

9.9.27 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

9.9.28 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.9.29 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

9.9.30 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.9.31 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.9.32 Exceptions to the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

9.9.33 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Exceptions to the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

9.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

9.10.1 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.10.2 Compliance data relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

9.10.3 Where an external regulator requests information concerning sick leave and medical absence, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.10.4 Compliance data relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.10.5 An internal audit of sick leave and medical absence shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.10.6 An internal audit of sick leave and medical absence shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.10.7 Where an external regulator requests information concerning sick leave and medical absence, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Compliance with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

9.10.8 Compliance with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.10.9 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Compliance data relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

9.10.10 Compliance with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

9.10.11 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where an external regulator requests information concerning sick leave and medical absence, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

9.10.12 Where an external regulator requests information concerning sick leave and medical absence, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Compliance data relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

9.10.13 Compliance with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An internal audit of sick leave and medical absence shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

9.10.14 Compliance with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.10.15 Compliance with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

9.10.16 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.10.17 Compliance data relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to sick leave and medical absence. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.10.19 Compliance data relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An internal audit of sick leave and medical absence shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

9.10.20 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to sick leave and medical absence. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.10.22 An internal audit of sick leave and medical absence shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to sick leave and medical absence.

9.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to sick leave and medical absence. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

9.10.24 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning sick leave and medical absence, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

9.10.27 Where an external regulator requests information concerning sick leave and medical absence, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.10.28 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to sick leave and medical absence. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.10.29 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

9.10.30 Compliance data relating to sick leave and medical absence shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.10.31 An internal audit of sick leave and medical absence shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.10.32 An internal audit of sick leave and medical absence shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

9.10.33 Compliance with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where an external regulator requests information concerning sick leave and medical absence, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

9.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

9.11.1 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to sick leave and medical absence, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

9.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

9.11.3 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

9.11.4 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

9.11.5 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.11.6 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A failure to comply with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

9.11.7 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to sick leave and medical absence shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

9.11.8 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

9.11.9 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

9.11.12 A failure to comply with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.11.13 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.11.14 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.11.15 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to sick leave and medical absence shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.11.16 A failure to comply with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.11.17 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.11.18 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.11.20 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to sick leave and medical absence shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

9.11.21 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

9.11.22 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

9.11.23 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

9.11.24 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to sick leave and medical absence shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

9.11.25 A failure to comply with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.11.26 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

9.11.27 A failure to comply with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

9.11.28 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.11.30 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

9.11.31 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A failure to comply with the provisions on sick leave and medical absence may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

9.11.32 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.11.33 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.12 Review and Amendment

9.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

9.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

9.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

9.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

9.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

9.12.7 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

9.12.8 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.12.10 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

9.12.11 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.12.12 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on sick leave and medical absence through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

9.12.13 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on sick leave and medical absence through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.12.14 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

9.12.15 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

9.12.16 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

9.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.12.18 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.12.19 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.12.20 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

9.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.12.22 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

9.12.23 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

9.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

9.12.26 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.12.27 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

9.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.12.29 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

9.12.30 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

9.12.31 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

9.12.32 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

9.12.33 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to sick leave and medical absence made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

Chapter 10

Parental Leave

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Maternity leave	26 weeks
Paternity leave	5 days

10.1 Purpose and Scope

10.1.1 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to parental leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.1.2 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.1.3 The Company recognises that parental leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.1.4 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on parental leave. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The objective of these provisions on parental leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

10.1.5 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.1.6 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to parental leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

10.1.7 The objective of these provisions on parental leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.1.8 The Company recognises that parental leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

10.1.9 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on parental leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.1.10 The objective of these provisions on parental leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.1.11 The Company recognises that parental leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on parental leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

10.1.14 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.1.15 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.1.16 The Company recognises that parental leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on parental leave.

10.1.17 The objective of these provisions on parental leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

10.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.1.19 The objective of these provisions on parental leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

10.1.20 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.1.21 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

10.1.22 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

10.1.23 The objective of these provisions on parental leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.1.24 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to parental leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.1.25 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

10.1.26 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

10.1.27 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

10.1.28 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.1.29 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to parental leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.1.30 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.1.31 The objective of these provisions on parental leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.1.32 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on parental leave. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.1.33 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.2 Definitions and Interpretation

10.2.1 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to parental leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.2.2 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "parental leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.2.3 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to parental leave. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.2.4 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to parental leave. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

10.2.5 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "parental leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

10.2.6 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.2.7 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.2.8 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.2.9 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.2.10 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.2.11 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "parental leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

10.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

10.2.13 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.2.14 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.2.15 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to parental leave. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "parental leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

10.2.16 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.2.17 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.2.18 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

10.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.2.20 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to parental leave.

10.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.2.22 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

10.2.23 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

10.2.24 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.2.25 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "parental leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

10.2.26 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

10.2.27 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.2.28 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.2.29 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to parental leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.2.30 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.2.32 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

10.2.33 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

10.3 Eligibility and Applicability

10.3.1 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.3.2 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.3.4 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.3.5 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

10.3.6 Eligibility for parental leave shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.3.7 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.3.8 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

10.3.9 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on parental leave. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

10.3.11 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

10.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

10.3.13 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for parental leave restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

10.3.14 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

10.3.15 Eligibility for parental leave shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.3.16 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

10.3.17 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

10.3.19 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.3.20 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.3.21 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on parental leave.

10.3.22 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on parental leave.

10.3.23 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.3.24 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.3.26 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on parental leave.

10.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

10.3.28 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on parental leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for parental leave restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.3.31 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on parental leave. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

10.3.32 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

10.3.33 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.4 Responsibilities of Employees

10.4.1 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on parental leave and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of parental leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

10.4.3 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of parental leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.4.4 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

10.4.5 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to parental leave and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.4.6 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.4.7 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of parental leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.4.8 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with parental leave.

10.4.9 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of parental leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

10.4.10 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to parental leave and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

10.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

10.4.12 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to parental leave and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.4.13 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.4.14 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with parental leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

10.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.4.16 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on parental leave and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.4.17 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to parental leave and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

10.4.18 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to parental leave and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

10.4.19 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with parental leave. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.4.20 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on parental leave and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

10.4.21 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

10.4.22 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with parental leave. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on parental leave and shall comply with them at all times.

10.4.23 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.4.24 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with parental leave. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.4.25 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to parental leave and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with parental leave.

10.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with parental leave. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

10.4.27 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to parental leave and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

10.4.28 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.4.29 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

10.4.30 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of parental leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

10.4.31 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

10.4.32 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of parental leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.4.33 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on parental leave and shall comply with them at all times.

10.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

10.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

10.5.3 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

10.5.4 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.5.5 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to parental leave to the HR Director without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

10.5.6 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on parental leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave.

10.5.7 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to parental leave to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.5.8 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on parental leave and applies them consistently. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on parental leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

10.5.9 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to parental leave to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.5.11 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave.

10.5.12 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

10.5.13 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on parental leave and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.5.14 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to parental leave to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.5.15 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on parental leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

10.5.17 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.5.18 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on parental leave and applies them consistently. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.5.19 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to parental leave within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

10.5.20 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.5.21 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on parental leave and applies them consistently.

10.5.22 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

10.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.5.25 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on parental leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.5.26 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

10.5.27 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on parental leave and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to parental leave to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.5.29 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on parental leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to parental leave within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

10.5.30 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

10.5.32 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on parental leave. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.5.33 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on parental leave and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

10.6.1 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.6.2 HR shall respond to every written query on parental leave within 30 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to parental leave and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.6.4 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.6.5 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for parental leave and shall make them available to all employees. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with parental leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

10.6.6 HR shall respond to every written query on parental leave within 30 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.6.7 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to parental leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.6.8 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to parental leave. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.6.9 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to parental leave and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for parental leave and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

10.6.11 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.6.12 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to parental leave and on the applicable legal requirements. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall respond to every written query on parental leave within 21 working days of receipt.

10.6.13 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with parental leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.6.14 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to parental leave and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.6.15 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for parental leave and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.6.16 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.6.17 HR shall respond to every written query on parental leave within 7 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

10.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to parental leave.

10.6.19 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for parental leave and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to parental leave and on the applicable legal requirements.

10.6.20 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with parental leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.6.21 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with parental leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.6.22 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to parental leave. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.6.23 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to parental leave and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

10.6.24 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to parental leave.

10.6.25 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for parental leave and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to parental leave and on the applicable legal requirements.

10.6.26 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.6.27 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

10.6.28 HR shall respond to every written query on parental leave within 2 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to parental leave.

10.6.29 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.6.30 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.6.31 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with parental leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.6.33 HR shall respond to every written query on parental leave within 10 working days of receipt. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

10.7 Procedure and Process Steps

10.7.1 Maternity leave. Eligible employees shall be entitled to 26 weeks of paid maternity leave.

10.7.2 Paternity leave. Eligible employees shall be entitled to 5 days of paid paternity leave.

10.7.3 The employee shall initiate the process relating to parental leave by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

10.7.4 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 3 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.7.5 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

10.7.6 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

10.7.7 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

10.7.8 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it.

10.7.9 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it.

10.7.10 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 3 working days of receiving it.

10.7.11 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 7 working days of receiving it.

10.7.12 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.7.14 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 3 working days of receiving it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

10.7.15 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

10.7.16 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

10.7.17 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.7.18 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to parental leave by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.7.20 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

10.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

10.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.7.23 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

10.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to parental leave by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

10.7.25 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 10 working days of receiving it.

10.7.26 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

10.7.27 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.7.28 The employee shall initiate the process relating to parental leave by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

10.7.29 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

10.7.30 The employee shall initiate the process relating to parental leave by submitting the prescribed form to the Line Manager. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

10.7.31 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

10.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.7.33 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 30 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.7.34 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 30 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The employee shall initiate the process relating to parental leave by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department.

10.7.35 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 10 working days of receiving it.

10.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

10.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to parental leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.8.2 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to parental leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.8.3 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.8.4 All documents relating to parental leave shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.8.6 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.8.7 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

10.8.8 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to parental leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

10.8.9 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.8.10 All documents relating to parental leave shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.8.11 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to parental leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.8.12 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

10.8.13 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

10.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. All documents relating to parental leave shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

10.8.15 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to parental leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

10.8.16 All documents relating to parental leave shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.8.17 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to parental leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.8.18 All documents relating to parental leave shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to parental leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

10.8.20 All documents relating to parental leave shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records relating to parental leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

10.8.21 All documents relating to parental leave shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

10.8.22 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to parental leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records relating to parental leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

10.8.23 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.8.24 All documents relating to parental leave shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

10.8.25 Records relating to parental leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.8.26 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

10.8.27 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.8.28 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.8.29 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.8.30 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

10.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.8.33 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

10.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice.

10.9.2 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.9.3 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.9.4 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice.

10.9.5 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.9.6 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

10.9.8 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.9.9 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.9.10 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.9.11 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

10.9.12 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.9.13 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.9.14 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

10.9.15 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

10.9.16 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.9.17 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

10.9.18 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

10.9.19 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

10.9.20 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

10.9.22 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

10.9.23 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.9.25 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

10.9.26 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

10.9.27 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

10.9.28 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.9.29 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.9.30 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

10.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.9.32 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions to the provisions on parental leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

10.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

10.10.1 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.10.2 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.10.3 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Where an external regulator requests information concerning parental leave, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

10.10.4 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to parental leave. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.10.5 Compliance with the provisions on parental leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

10.10.6 Where an external regulator requests information concerning parental leave, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Compliance with the provisions on parental leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

10.10.7 Compliance with the provisions on parental leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.10.8 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.10.9 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.10.10 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.10.11 Compliance data relating to parental leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.10.12 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.10.13 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.10.14 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

10.10.15 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

10.10.16 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.10.17 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Compliance data relating to parental leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

10.10.18 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.10.19 Where an external regulator requests information concerning parental leave, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Compliance with the provisions on parental leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

10.10.20 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

10.10.21 An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where an external regulator requests information concerning parental leave, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

10.10.22 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.10.23 Where an external regulator requests information concerning parental leave, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Compliance data relating to parental leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

10.10.24 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to parental leave. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.10.25 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to parental leave. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.10.27 Compliance with the provisions on parental leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

10.10.28 Compliance data relating to parental leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

10.10.29 Compliance data relating to parental leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An internal audit of parental leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

10.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on parental leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.10.31 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

10.10.32 Compliance with the provisions on parental leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.10.33 Where an external regulator requests information concerning parental leave, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

10.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

10.11.1 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

10.11.2 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

10.11.4 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by

HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.11.5 A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct.

10.11.6 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

10.11.7 A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.11.8 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct.

10.11.9 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.11.11 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

10.11.12 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

10.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

10.11.14 A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

10.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.11.16 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

10.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct.

10.11.18 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

10.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

10.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

10.11.21 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

10.11.22 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

10.11.23 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

10.11.24 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.11.25 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

10.11.26 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.11.27 A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.11.28 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

10.11.29 A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct.

10.11.30 A failure to comply with the provisions on parental leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

10.11.31 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.11.32 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

10.11.33 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to parental leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

10.12 Review and Amendment

10.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

10.12.2 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

10.12.3 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

10.12.4 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

10.12.6 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

10.12.7 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

10.12.8 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

10.12.9 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.12.10 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.12.11 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to parental leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on parental leave through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect.

10.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

10.12.13 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

10.12.14 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on parental leave through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

10.12.15 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.12.16 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.12.17 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

10.12.18 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

10.12.19 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.12.20 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

10.12.21 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

10.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

10.12.23 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on parental leave through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

10.12.24 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on parental leave through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to parental leave, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

10.12.25 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on parental leave through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect.

10.12.26 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on parental leave through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect.

10.12.27 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

10.12.28 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

10.12.29 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on parental leave through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect.

10.12.30 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

10.12.31 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

10.12.32 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on parental leave through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

10.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

Chapter 11

Public Holidays and Special Leave

11.1 Purpose and Scope

11.1.1 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to public holidays and special leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.1.2 The objective of these provisions on public holidays and special leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

11.1.3 The objective of these provisions on public holidays and special leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.1.4 The Company recognises that public holidays and special leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on public holidays and special leave.

11.1.5 The objective of these provisions on public holidays and special leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.1.6 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on public holidays and special leave.

11.1.7 The Company recognises that public holidays and special leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.1.8 The objective of these provisions on public holidays and special leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

11.1.10 The objective of these provisions on public holidays and special leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.1.11 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to public holidays and special leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company recognises that public holidays and special leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

11.1.12 The objective of these provisions on public holidays and special leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.1.13 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to public holidays and special leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

11.1.15 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to public holidays and special leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

11.1.16 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.1.17 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to public holidays and special leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.1.18 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to public holidays and special leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.1.19 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.1.20 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.1.21 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.1.22 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on public holidays and special leave.

11.1.23 The objective of these provisions on public holidays and special leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on public holidays and special leave.

11.1.25 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to public holidays and special leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.1.26 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.1.27 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to public holidays and special leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.1.28 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to public holidays and special leave and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

11.1.29 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on public holidays and special leave. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

11.1.30 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.1.31 The objective of these provisions on public holidays and special leave is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

11.1.32 The Company recognises that public holidays and special leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on public holidays and special leave.

11.1.33 The Company recognises that public holidays and special leave has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.2 Definitions and Interpretation

11.2.1 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

11.2.2 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

11.2.3 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to public holidays and special leave. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "public holidays and special leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

11.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.2.5 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "public holidays and special leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.2.6 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

11.2.7 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "public holidays and special leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

11.2.8 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "public holidays and special leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.2.9 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to public holidays and special leave.

11.2.10 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "public holidays and special leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

11.2.11 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

11.2.12 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.2.13 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "public holidays and special leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.2.14 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.2.15 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.2.16 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "public holidays and special leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

11.2.17 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.2.18 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

11.2.19 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

11.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

11.2.21 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to public holidays and special leave. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

11.2.22 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.2.23 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

11.2.24 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to public holidays and special leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

11.2.25 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

11.2.26 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to public holidays and special leave. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

11.2.27 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "public holidays and special leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

11.2.28 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "public holidays and special leave" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

11.2.29 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to public holidays and special leave. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

11.2.30 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.2.31 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to public holidays and special leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.2.33 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.3 Eligibility and Applicability

11.3.1 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

11.3.2 Eligibility for public holidays and special leave shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.3.3 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

11.3.4 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.3.5 Eligibility for public holidays and special leave shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

11.3.6 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.3.7 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.3.8 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

11.3.9 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on public holidays and special leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

11.3.10 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.3.11 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.3.12 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

11.3.13 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

11.3.14 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

11.3.15 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on public holidays and special leave. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

11.3.16 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.3.17 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on public holidays and special leave. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.3.18 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

11.3.19 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.3.20 Eligibility for public holidays and special leave shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.3.21 Eligibility for public holidays and special leave shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

11.3.22 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for public holidays and special leave restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

11.3.23 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

11.3.24 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for public holidays and special leave restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

11.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.3.26 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

11.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for public holidays and special leave restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.3.28 Eligibility for public holidays and special leave shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

11.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on public holidays and special leave. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

11.3.30 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on public holidays and special leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

11.3.31 Eligibility for public holidays and special leave shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.3.32 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

11.3.33 Eligibility for public holidays and special leave shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for public holidays and special leave restricted until the matter is concluded.

11.4 Responsibilities of Employees

11.4.1 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with public holidays and special leave. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

11.4.2 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to public holidays and special leave and shall not withhold material facts.

11.4.3 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

11.4.4 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with public holidays and special leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.4.5 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.4.7 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

11.4.8 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

11.4.9 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.4.10 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to public holidays and special leave and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.4.11 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with public holidays and special leave. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.4.12 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.4.13 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.4.14 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with public holidays and special leave. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

11.4.15 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.4.16 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.4.17 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to public holidays and special leave and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.4.18 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on public holidays and special leave and shall comply with them at all times.

11.4.19 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.4.20 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

11.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to public holidays and special leave and shall not withhold material facts.

11.4.22 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with public holidays and special leave. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.4.23 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on public holidays and special leave and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.4.24 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.4.25 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.4.26 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.4.27 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.4.28 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

11.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of public holidays and special leave as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to public holidays and special leave and shall not withhold material facts.

11.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to public holidays and special leave and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.4.31 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

11.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on public holidays and special leave and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.4.33 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

11.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on public holidays and special leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

11.5.2 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.5.3 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to public holidays and special leave within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.5.4 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave.

11.5.5 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to public holidays and special leave within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

11.5.6 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on public holidays and special leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.5.7 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on public holidays and special leave and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

11.5.8 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.5.9 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.5.10 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to public holidays and special leave to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

11.5.11 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on public holidays and special leave and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.5.12 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on public holidays and special leave and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.5.13 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to public holidays and special leave within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

11.5.14 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

11.5.15 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on public holidays and special leave and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on public holidays and special leave and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave.

11.5.17 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

11.5.18 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.5.20 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to public holidays and special leave to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

11.5.22 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to public holidays and special leave to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.5.23 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on public holidays and special leave and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

11.5.24 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to public holidays and special leave within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

11.5.25 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on public holidays and special leave and applies them consistently.

11.5.26 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to public holidays and special leave to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.5.27 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on public holidays and special leave and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave.

11.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.5.29 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.5.30 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.5.32 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.5.33 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on public holidays and special leave. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

11.6.1 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to public holidays and special leave. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.6.2 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for public holidays and special leave and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.6.3 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. HR shall respond to every written query on public holidays and special leave within 15 working days of receipt.

11.6.4 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for public holidays and special leave and shall make them available to all employees.

11.6.5 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with public holidays and special leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for public holidays and special leave and shall make them available to all employees.

11.6.6 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.6.7 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to public holidays and special leave and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with public holidays and special leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

11.6.8 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for public holidays and special leave and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.6.9 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.6.10 HR shall respond to every written query on public holidays and special leave within 10 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with public holidays and special leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.6.12 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

11.6.13 HR shall respond to every written query on public holidays and special leave within 21 working days of receipt. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to public holidays and special leave and on the applicable legal requirements.

11.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.6.15 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

11.6.16 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

11.6.17 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for public holidays and special leave and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to public holidays and special leave.

11.6.18 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with public holidays and special leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.6.19 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with public holidays and special leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on public holidays and special leave within 15 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

11.6.22 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.6.23 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to public holidays and special leave and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to public holidays and special leave.

11.6.24 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with public holidays and special leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

11.6.25 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to public holidays and special leave and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.6.26 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

11.6.27 HR shall respond to every written query on public holidays and special leave within 30 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with public holidays and special leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

11.6.28 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with public holidays and special leave in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.6.29 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to public holidays and special leave and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to public holidays and special leave.

11.6.30 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to public holidays and special leave and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.6.31 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

11.6.32 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to public holidays and special leave. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

11.6.33 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.7 Procedure and Process Steps

11.7.1 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.7.2 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it.

11.7.3 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.7.5 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.7.6 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.7.7 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.7.8 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.7.9 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.7.10 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.7.11 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

11.7.12 The employee shall initiate the process relating to public holidays and special leave by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

11.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

11.7.14 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

11.7.15 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

11.7.16 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

11.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.7.18 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to public holidays and special leave by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

11.7.20 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

11.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

11.7.22 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

11.7.23 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The employee shall initiate the process relating to public holidays and special leave by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager.

11.7.24 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

11.7.25 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.7.26 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

11.7.27 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.7.28 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

11.7.29 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

11.7.30 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to public holidays and special leave by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner.

11.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.7.33 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

11.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

11.8.1 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to public holidays and special leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

11.8.2 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

11.8.3 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to public holidays and special leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.8.4 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.8.5 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.8.6 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

11.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

11.8.8 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to public holidays and special leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.8.10 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

11.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

11.8.12 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.8.13 All documents relating to public holidays and special leave shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.8.14 All documents relating to public holidays and special leave shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

11.8.15 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

11.8.16 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.8.17 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.8.18 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to public holidays and special leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

11.8.20 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

11.8.21 All documents relating to public holidays and special leave shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to public holidays and special leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

11.8.22 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.8.23 All documents relating to public holidays and special leave shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.8.24 Records relating to public holidays and special leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years.

11.8.25 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Records relating to public holidays and special leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years.

11.8.26 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.8.27 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

11.8.28 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to public holidays and special leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

11.8.29 Records relating to public holidays and special leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.8.30 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to public holidays and special leave that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.8.31 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.8.32 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.8.33 Records relating to public holidays and special leave shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years.

11.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

11.9.1 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

11.9.2 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.9.3 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.9.4 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

11.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

11.9.7 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

11.9.8 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

11.9.9 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.9.10 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

11.9.11 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.9.12 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.9.13 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

11.9.14 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

11.9.16 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

11.9.17 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

11.9.19 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

11.9.20 Exceptions to the provisions on public holidays and special leave may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

11.9.21 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

11.9.22 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.9.23 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.9.25 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

11.9.26 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.9.27 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.9.28 Exceptions to the provisions on public holidays and special leave may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

11.9.29 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

11.9.31 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.9.32 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

11.9.33 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

11.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

11.10.1 Compliance data relating to public holidays and special leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where an external regulator requests information concerning public holidays and special leave, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

11.10.2 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.10.3 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where an external regulator requests information concerning public holidays and special leave, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

11.10.4 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to public holidays and special leave. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.10.5 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to public holidays and special leave. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.10.6 Compliance with the provisions on public holidays and special leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.10.7 Compliance data relating to public holidays and special leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.10.8 Compliance data relating to public holidays and special leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.10.9 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.10.10 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

11.10.11 An internal audit of public holidays and special leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

11.10.12 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to public holidays and special leave. An internal audit of public holidays and special leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

11.10.13 An internal audit of public holidays and special leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.10.14 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Compliance with the provisions on public holidays and special leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

11.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to public holidays and special leave.

11.10.16 Compliance data relating to public holidays and special leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.10.17 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to public holidays and special leave.

11.10.18 Compliance data relating to public holidays and special leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

11.10.19 An internal audit of public holidays and special leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.10.20 Compliance with the provisions on public holidays and special leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.10.21 Where an external regulator requests information concerning public holidays and special leave, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Compliance with the provisions on public holidays and special leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

11.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on public holidays and special leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

11.10.23 Where an external regulator requests information concerning public holidays and special leave, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

11.10.24 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.10.25 An internal audit of public holidays and special leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.10.27 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.10.28 Where an external regulator requests information concerning public holidays and special leave, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.10.29 Compliance data relating to public holidays and special leave shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An internal audit of public holidays and special leave shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

11.10.30 Where an external regulator requests information concerning public holidays and special leave, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

11.10.31 Compliance with the provisions on public holidays and special leave shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.10.32 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.10.33 Where an external regulator requests information concerning public holidays and special leave, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

11.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

11.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.11.3 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

11.11.4 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.11.5 A failure to comply with the provisions on public holidays and special leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.11.6 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.11.7 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

11.11.9 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on public holidays and special leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.11.11 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to public holidays and special leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

11.11.12 A failure to comply with the provisions on public holidays and special leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

11.11.13 A failure to comply with the provisions on public holidays and special leave may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.11.14 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.11.16 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

11.11.17 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

11.11.18 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

11.11.19 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

11.11.21 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.11.22 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

11.11.23 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.11.24 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to public holidays and special leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.11.25 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

11.11.26 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

11.11.27 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to public holidays and special leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

11.11.28 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

11.11.29 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

11.11.30 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

11.11.31 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

11.11.32 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

11.11.33 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to public holidays and special leave shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.12 Review and Amendment

11.12.1 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to public holidays and special leave, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

11.12.2 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on public holidays and special leave through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

11.12.3 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

11.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

11.12.5 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

11.12.6 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

11.12.7 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on public holidays and special leave through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect.

11.12.8 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.12.9 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

11.12.10 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

11.12.11 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on public holidays and special leave through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

11.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.12.13 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

11.12.14 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

11.12.15 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

11.12.16 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

11.12.17 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

11.12.18 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

11.12.19 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

11.12.20 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on public holidays and special leave through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

11.12.21 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

11.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

11.12.23 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

11.12.24 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.12.25 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

11.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to public holidays and special leave made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

11.12.27 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

11.12.28 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on public holidays and special leave through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

11.12.29 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

11.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

11.12.31 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

11.12.32 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

11.12.33 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on public holidays and special leave through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

Chapter 12

Compensation and Pay Administration

12.1 Purpose and Scope

12.1.1 The objective of these provisions on compensation and pay administration is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.1.2 The Company recognises that compensation and pay administration has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. The objective of these provisions on compensation and pay administration is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

12.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.1.4 The Company recognises that compensation and pay administration has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.1.5 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

12.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

12.1.7 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.1.8 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The objective of these provisions on compensation and pay administration is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

12.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The objective of these provisions on compensation and pay administration is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

12.1.10 The objective of these provisions on compensation and pay administration is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.1.11 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.1.12 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.1.14 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

12.1.15 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.1.16 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.1.17 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

12.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.1.19 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.1.20 The objective of these provisions on compensation and pay administration is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.1.21 The objective of these provisions on compensation and pay administration is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.1.23 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to compensation and pay administration and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The objective of these provisions on compensation and pay administration is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

12.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on compensation and pay administration. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to compensation and pay administration and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

12.1.25 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.1.26 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.1.27 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.1.28 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

12.1.29 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.1.30 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.1.31 The Company recognises that compensation and pay administration has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.1.32 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

12.1.33 The Company recognises that compensation and pay administration has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

12.2 Definitions and Interpretation

12.2.1 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.2.2 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to compensation and pay administration. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

12.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.2.4 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to compensation and pay administration. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.2.6 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to compensation and pay administration. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

12.2.8 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.2.9 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.2.10 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.2.11 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

12.2.12 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.2.15 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

12.2.16 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

12.2.17 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

12.2.18 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

12.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "compensation and pay administration" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.2.22 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to compensation and pay administration. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.2.23 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.2.24 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.2.25 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

12.2.26 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

12.2.27 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "compensation and pay administration" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

12.2.28 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

12.2.29 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to compensation and pay administration. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.2.30 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.2.31 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

12.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

12.2.33 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to compensation and pay administration. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

12.3 Eligibility and Applicability

12.3.1 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

12.3.3 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.3.5 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on compensation and pay administration. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Eligibility for compensation and pay administration shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

12.3.6 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on compensation and pay administration.

12.3.8 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on compensation and pay administration.

12.3.9 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded.

12.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on compensation and pay administration.

12.3.11 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

12.3.12 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.3.13 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.3.14 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.3.15 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

12.3.16 Eligibility for compensation and pay administration shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.3.17 Eligibility for compensation and pay administration shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded.

12.3.18 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

12.3.19 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

12.3.20 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on compensation and pay administration. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

12.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.3.23 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.3.24 Eligibility for compensation and pay administration shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

12.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded.

12.3.26 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on compensation and pay administration.

12.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.3.28 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.3.29 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

12.3.30 Eligibility for compensation and pay administration shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

12.3.31 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility for compensation and pay administration shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

12.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on compensation and pay administration. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for compensation and pay administration restricted until the matter is concluded.

12.3.33 Eligibility for compensation and pay administration shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.4 Responsibilities of Employees

12.4.1 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

12.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of compensation and pay administration as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on compensation and pay administration and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.4.4 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of compensation and pay administration as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.4.5 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.4.6 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

12.4.7 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of compensation and pay administration as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

12.4.8 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to compensation and pay administration and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.4.9 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of compensation and pay administration as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.4.10 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on compensation and pay administration and shall comply with them at all times.

12.4.12 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.4.13 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with compensation and pay administration. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of compensation and pay administration as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to compensation and pay administration and shall not withhold material facts.

12.4.15 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with compensation and pay administration. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.4.16 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on compensation and pay administration and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of compensation and pay administration as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

12.4.17 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

12.4.18 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Head of Department at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

12.4.19 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to compensation and pay administration and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.4.20 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

12.4.22 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.4.23 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with compensation and pay administration. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.4.24 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with compensation and pay administration. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.4.25 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.4.26 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on compensation and pay administration and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.4.27 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

12.4.28 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.4.29 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of compensation and pay administration as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

12.4.30 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

12.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with compensation and pay administration. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.4.32 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to compensation and pay administration and shall not withhold material facts. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with compensation and pay administration.

12.4.33 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with compensation and pay administration. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

12.5.1 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to compensation and pay administration to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.5.2 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

12.5.3 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

12.5.4 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.5.5 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to compensation and pay administration to the HR Director without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.5.6 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to compensation and pay administration to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

12.5.7 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on compensation and pay administration. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.5.8 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

12.5.9 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to compensation and pay administration within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on compensation and pay administration and applies them consistently.

12.5.10 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on compensation and pay administration and applies them consistently.

12.5.11 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on compensation and pay administration. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.5.12 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to compensation and pay administration to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

12.5.13 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

12.5.14 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to compensation and pay administration to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.5.15 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on compensation and pay administration. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

12.5.17 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to compensation and pay administration within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

12.5.18 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.5.19 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

12.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to compensation and pay administration within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to compensation and pay administration to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

12.5.22 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to compensation and pay administration within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

12.5.23 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.5.24 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.5.25 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on compensation and pay administration. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.5.26 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on compensation and pay administration. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.5.27 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on compensation and pay administration. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

12.5.29 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

12.5.30 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to compensation and pay administration within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

12.5.31 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to compensation and pay administration within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

12.5.32 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.5.33 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on compensation and pay administration and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

12.6.1 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to compensation and pay administration and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.6.2 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with compensation and pay administration in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

12.6.3 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.6.4 HR shall respond to every written query on compensation and pay administration within 2 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

12.6.5 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.6.6 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with compensation and pay administration in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.6.7 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to compensation and pay administration and on the applicable legal requirements.

12.6.8 HR shall respond to every written query on compensation and pay administration within 7 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

12.6.9 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to compensation and pay administration.

12.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for compensation and pay administration and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

12.6.11 HR shall respond to every written query on compensation and pay administration within 10 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.6.12 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to compensation and pay administration. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.6.13 HR shall respond to every written query on compensation and pay administration within 10 working days of receipt.

12.6.14 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to compensation and pay administration. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

12.6.15 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

12.6.16 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to compensation and pay administration and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.6.17 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with compensation and pay administration in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

12.6.18 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for compensation and pay administration and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.6.19 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.6.20 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to compensation and pay administration and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

12.6.21 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to compensation and pay administration and on the applicable legal requirements. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with compensation and pay administration in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

12.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to compensation and pay administration and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to compensation and pay administration.

12.6.23 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.6.24 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to compensation and pay administration. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.6.25 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to compensation and pay administration and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for compensation and pay administration and shall make them available to all employees.

12.6.26 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.6.27 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to compensation and pay administration and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

12.6.28 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with compensation and pay administration in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for compensation and pay administration and shall make them available to all employees.

12.6.29 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with compensation and pay administration in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.6.30 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for compensation and pay administration and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with compensation and pay administration in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

12.6.31 HR shall respond to every written query on compensation and pay administration within 7 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with compensation and pay administration in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

12.6.33 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

12.7 Procedure and Process Steps

12.7.1 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

12.7.2 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

12.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.7.4 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.7.5 The employee shall initiate the process relating to compensation and pay administration by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.7.8 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.7.9 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 7 working days of receiving it.

12.7.10 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.7.11 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

12.7.12 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

12.7.14 The employee shall initiate the process relating to compensation and pay administration by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.7.15 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.7.16 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The employee shall initiate the process relating to compensation and pay administration by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager.

12.7.17 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.7.18 The employee shall initiate the process relating to compensation and pay administration by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.7.19 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.7.20 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

12.7.21 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.7.22 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to compensation and pay administration by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

12.7.24 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.7.25 The employee shall initiate the process relating to compensation and pay administration by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.7.26 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

12.7.27 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.7.28 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

12.7.29 The employee shall initiate the process relating to compensation and pay administration by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.7.30 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 15 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

12.7.31 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 2 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.7.32 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

12.7.33 The employee shall initiate the process relating to compensation and pay administration by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

12.8.1 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

12.8.2 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to compensation and pay administration that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. All documents relating to compensation and pay administration shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

12.8.3 Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

12.8.4 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

12.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.8.6 All documents relating to compensation and pay administration shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

12.8.8 Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.8.9 All documents relating to compensation and pay administration shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to compensation and pay administration that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

12.8.10 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

12.8.11 All documents relating to compensation and pay administration shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.8.12 Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.8.13 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to compensation and pay administration that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.8.14 Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.8.15 All documents relating to compensation and pay administration shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

12.8.17 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.8.18 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. All documents relating to compensation and pay administration shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

12.8.19 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.8.20 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.8.21 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to compensation and pay administration that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.8.23 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to compensation and pay administration that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

12.8.24 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.8.25 Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.8.26 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to compensation and pay administration that is held about them, subject to applicable law. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.8.27 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

12.8.28 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

12.8.29 Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.8.30 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to compensation and pay administration that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.8.31 Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.8.32 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

12.8.33 Records relating to compensation and pay administration shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to compensation and pay administration that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

12.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

12.9.1 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.9.2 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.9.3 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

12.9.4 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.9.5 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

12.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.9.7 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

12.9.8 Exceptions to the provisions on compensation and pay administration may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.9.9 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.9.10 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.9.11 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.9.12 Exceptions to the provisions on compensation and pay administration may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.9.13 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.9.14 Exceptions to the provisions on compensation and pay administration may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

12.9.15 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.9.16 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.9.17 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

12.9.18 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.9.19 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.9.20 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

12.9.21 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.9.22 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

12.9.23 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.9.24 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.9.25 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on compensation and pay administration may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.9.27 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.9.28 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.9.29 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

12.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

12.9.31 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.9.32 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

12.10.1 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to compensation and pay administration. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.10.2 Compliance data relating to compensation and pay administration shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

12.10.3 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

12.10.4 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.10.5 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where an external regulator requests information concerning compensation and pay administration, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

12.10.6 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance with the provisions on compensation and pay administration shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

12.10.7 An internal audit of compensation and pay administration shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

12.10.8 Where an external regulator requests information concerning compensation and pay administration, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

12.10.9 Where an external regulator requests information concerning compensation and pay administration, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.10.10 Where an external regulator requests information concerning compensation and pay administration, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Compliance with the provisions on compensation and pay administration shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

12.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where an external regulator requests information concerning compensation and pay administration, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

12.10.12 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.10.13 Where an external regulator requests information concerning compensation and pay administration, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

12.10.14 Compliance with the provisions on compensation and pay administration shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.10.15 Compliance data relating to compensation and pay administration shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.10.16 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to compensation and pay administration. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Compliance with the provisions on compensation and pay administration shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

12.10.17 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.10.18 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.10.19 Compliance data relating to compensation and pay administration shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.10.20 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to compensation and pay administration. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

12.10.22 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to compensation and pay administration. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

12.10.23 Where an external regulator requests information concerning compensation and pay administration, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.10.24 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.10.25 Compliance with the provisions on compensation and pay administration shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.10.26 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to compensation and pay administration.

12.10.27 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.10.28 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to compensation and pay administration. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

12.10.29 Where an external regulator requests information concerning compensation and pay administration, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.10.30 Compliance data relating to compensation and pay administration shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.10.31 Where an external regulator requests information concerning compensation and pay administration, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.10.32 An internal audit of compensation and pay administration shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.10.33 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to compensation and pay administration.

12.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

12.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.11.2 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

12.11.3 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.11.4 A failure to comply with the provisions on compensation and pay administration may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

12.11.5 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.11.7 A failure to comply with the provisions on compensation and pay administration may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.11.8 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.11.9 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct.

12.11.10 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.11.11 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

12.11.12 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

12.11.13 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.11.14 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.11.16 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

12.11.17 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

12.11.18 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

12.11.19 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

12.11.20 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

12.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

12.11.22 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.11.23 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

12.11.24 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.11.25 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.11.26 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

12.11.27 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.11.29 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

12.11.30 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.11.31 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

12.11.32 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to compensation and pay administration shall be treated as serious misconduct.

12.11.33 A failure to comply with the provisions on compensation and pay administration may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

12.12 Review and Amendment

12.12.1 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

12.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

12.12.3 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.12.4 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on compensation and pay administration through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

12.12.5 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.12.6 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

12.12.7 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.12.8 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

12.12.9 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on compensation and pay administration through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

12.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to compensation and pay administration made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

12.12.11 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

12.12.12 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to compensation and pay administration, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

12.12.13 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on compensation and pay administration through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect.

12.12.14 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on compensation and pay administration through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

12.12.15 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

12.12.16 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.12.17 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

12.12.18 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.12.19 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

12.12.20 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

12.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.12.22 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

12.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

12.12.25 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

12.12.26 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on compensation and pay administration through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect.

12.12.27 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

12.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

12.12.29 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on compensation and pay administration through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect.

12.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

12.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

12.12.32 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

12.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

Chapter 13

Benefits and Allowances

13.1 Purpose and Scope

13.1.1 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company recognises that benefits and allowances has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

13.1.2 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

13.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

13.1.4 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.1.5 The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.1.6 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on benefits and allowances. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

13.1.7 The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

13.1.8 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

13.1.9 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.1.10 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

13.1.11 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The Company recognises that benefits and allowances has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

13.1.12 The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.1.13 The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.1.14 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.1.15 The Company recognises that benefits and allowances has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on benefits and allowances.

13.1.16 The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

13.1.17 The Company recognises that benefits and allowances has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to benefits and allowances and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

13.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.1.19 The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.1.20 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on benefits and allowances. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.1.21 The Company recognises that benefits and allowances has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

13.1.22 The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.1.23 The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.1.24 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.1.25 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to benefits and allowances and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company recognises that benefits and allowances has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

13.1.26 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

13.1.27 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.1.28 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.1.29 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.1.30 The objective of these provisions on benefits and allowances is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

13.1.31 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on benefits and allowances. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company recognises that benefits and allowances has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

13.1.32 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on benefits and allowances. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.2 Definitions and Interpretation

13.2.1 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "benefits and allowances" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

13.2.2 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

13.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.2.4 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "benefits and allowances" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

13.2.5 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.2.6 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.2.8 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.2.9 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.2.10 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "benefits and allowances" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.2.11 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

13.2.13 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "benefits and allowances" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

13.2.14 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

13.2.15 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.2.16 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.2.17 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.2.18 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to benefits and allowances.

13.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "benefits and allowances" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.2.21 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

13.2.22 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to benefits and allowances. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

13.2.23 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

13.2.24 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.2.25 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

13.2.26 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.2.27 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.2.28 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

13.2.29 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

13.2.30 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

13.2.31 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

13.2.32 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

13.2.33 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to benefits and allowances. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

13.3 Eligibility and Applicability

13.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on benefits and allowances. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.3.4 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.3.5 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.3.6 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on benefits and allowances. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.3.7 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for benefits and allowances restricted until the matter is concluded.

13.3.8 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.3.9 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on benefits and allowances. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for benefits and allowances restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

13.3.12 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.3.13 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on benefits and allowances. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

13.3.14 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for benefits and allowances restricted until the matter is concluded.

13.3.15 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on benefits and allowances.

13.3.16 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.3.17 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.3.19 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for benefits and allowances restricted until the matter is concluded. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

13.3.20 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

13.3.21 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for benefits and allowances restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.3.22 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.3.23 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

13.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.3.25 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for benefits and allowances restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.3.26 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for benefits and allowances restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.3.28 Eligibility for benefits and allowances shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.3.29 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for benefits and allowances restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

13.3.31 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.3.32 Eligibility for benefits and allowances shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

13.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for benefits and allowances restricted until the matter is concluded. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility for benefits and allowances shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

13.4 Responsibilities of Employees

13.4.1 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of benefits and allowances as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on benefits and allowances and shall comply with them at all times.

13.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of benefits and allowances as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

13.4.3 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to benefits and allowances and shall not withhold material facts. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

13.4.4 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on benefits and allowances and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.4.5 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.4.6 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

13.4.7 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with benefits and allowances. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

13.4.8 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.4.9 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of benefits and allowances as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

13.4.10 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of benefits and allowances as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

13.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to benefits and allowances and shall not withhold material facts.

13.4.12 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to benefits and allowances and shall not withhold material facts.

13.4.13 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.4.14 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to benefits and allowances and shall not withhold material facts.

13.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.4.17 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to benefits and allowances and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.4.19 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.4.20 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

13.4.21 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of benefits and allowances as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.4.22 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on benefits and allowances and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.4.23 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

13.4.24 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on benefits and allowances and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.4.25 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to benefits and allowances and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with benefits and allowances.

13.4.26 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.4.27 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to benefits and allowances and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.4.28 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with benefits and allowances. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

13.4.29 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.4.30 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

13.4.31 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

13.4.32 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.4.33 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

13.5.1 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to benefits and allowances within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.5.2 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to benefits and allowances to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on benefits and allowances and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.5.4 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.5.5 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.5.6 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on benefits and allowances and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.5.8 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

13.5.9 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

13.5.10 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

13.5.11 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.5.12 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on benefits and allowances and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.5.13 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on benefits and allowances and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.5.14 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on benefits and allowances. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on benefits and allowances and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

13.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on benefits and allowances and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

13.5.17 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to benefits and allowances to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

13.5.18 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on benefits and allowances and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

13.5.19 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.5.20 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to benefits and allowances to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.5.22 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

13.5.23 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.5.24 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently.

13.5.25 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.5.26 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to benefits and allowances to the Policy Committee without undue delay. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently.

13.5.27 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to benefits and allowances to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on benefits and allowances and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

13.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to benefits and allowances to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.5.30 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.5.31 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.5.32 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to benefits and allowances within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.5.33 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on benefits and allowances and applies them consistently. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

13.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

13.6.1 HR shall respond to every written query on benefits and allowances within 7 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.6.2 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to benefits and allowances. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

13.6.3 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to benefits and allowances. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

13.6.4 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with benefits and allowances in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.6.5 HR shall respond to every written query on benefits and allowances within 30 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for benefits and allowances and shall make them available to all employees.

13.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for benefits and allowances and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with benefits and allowances in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to benefits and allowances and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.6.9 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with benefits and allowances in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

13.6.10 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to benefits and allowances and on the applicable legal requirements.

13.6.11 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for benefits and allowances and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.6.12 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with benefits and allowances in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.6.13 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with benefits and allowances in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

13.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

13.6.15 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to benefits and allowances. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall respond to every written query on benefits and allowances within 2 working days of receipt.

13.6.16 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to benefits and allowances. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.6.17 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for benefits and allowances and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.6.18 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.6.19 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to benefits and allowances and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with benefits and allowances in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

13.6.20 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with benefits and allowances in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

13.6.21 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.6.22 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for benefits and allowances and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.6.23 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to benefits and allowances and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

13.6.24 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to benefits and allowances. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.6.25 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.6.26 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.6.27 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to benefits and allowances.

13.6.28 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to benefits and allowances and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.6.29 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to benefits and allowances and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

13.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with benefits and allowances in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

13.6.31 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with benefits and allowances in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.6.32 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to benefits and allowances. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.6.33 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.7 Procedure and Process Steps

13.7.1 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

13.7.3 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The employee shall initiate the process relating to benefits and allowances by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner.

13.7.4 The employee shall initiate the process relating to benefits and allowances by submitting the prescribed form to the Line Manager. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

13.7.5 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

13.7.6 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.7.7 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.7.8 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

13.7.9 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it.

13.7.10 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

13.7.11 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

13.7.12 The employee shall initiate the process relating to benefits and allowances by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.7.13 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.7.14 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

13.7.15 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

13.7.16 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.7.17 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.7.18 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

13.7.19 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 30 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

13.7.20 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

13.7.21 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.7.22 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.7.23 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

13.7.24 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 7 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.7.25 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it.

13.7.26 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.7.27 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 30 working days of receiving it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

13.7.28 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The employee shall initiate the process relating to benefits and allowances by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner.

13.7.29 The employee shall initiate the process relating to benefits and allowances by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.7.30 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.7.31 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.7.32 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.7.33 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

13.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

13.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to benefits and allowances that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.8.2 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to benefits and allowances that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.8.3 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

13.8.4 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

13.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.8.6 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

13.8.8 Records relating to benefits and allowances shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

13.8.9 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.8.11 All documents relating to benefits and allowances shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

13.8.13 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.8.14 All documents relating to benefits and allowances shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.8.15 Records relating to benefits and allowances shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

13.8.16 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. All documents relating to benefits and allowances shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

13.8.17 Records relating to benefits and allowances shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

13.8.18 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records relating to benefits and allowances shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years.

13.8.19 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.8.20 Records relating to benefits and allowances shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

13.8.21 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.8.22 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

13.8.23 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to benefits and allowances that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

13.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to benefits and allowances that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

13.8.25 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to benefits and allowances that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.8.26 Records relating to benefits and allowances shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.8.27 Records relating to benefits and allowances shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

13.8.28 Records relating to benefits and allowances shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. All documents relating to benefits and allowances shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

13.8.29 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.8.30 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.8.31 Records relating to benefits and allowances shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

13.8.32 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

13.8.33 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to benefits and allowances that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

13.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

13.9.1 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.9.2 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.9.3 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

13.9.4 Exceptions to the provisions on benefits and allowances may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

13.9.5 Exceptions to the provisions on benefits and allowances may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

13.9.7 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice.

13.9.8 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.9.9 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

13.9.11 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.9.12 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.9.13 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.9.14 Exceptions to the provisions on benefits and allowances may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

13.9.16 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

13.9.17 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

13.9.18 Exceptions to the provisions on benefits and allowances may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

13.9.19 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.9.20 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.9.21 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

13.9.22 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

13.9.23 Exceptions to the provisions on benefits and allowances may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.9.25 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.9.26 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Exceptions to the provisions on benefits and allowances may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

13.9.27 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

13.9.28 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

13.9.29 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.9.31 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

13.9.32 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

13.10.1 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

13.10.2 An internal audit of benefits and allowances shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.10.3 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.10.4 Where an external regulator requests information concerning benefits and allowances, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

13.10.5 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.10.6 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.10.7 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to benefits and allowances. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An internal audit of benefits and allowances shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

13.10.9 Compliance data relating to benefits and allowances shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.10.10 Compliance with the provisions on benefits and allowances shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.10.11 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.10.12 Where an external regulator requests information concerning benefits and allowances, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.10.13 An internal audit of benefits and allowances shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.10.14 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

13.10.15 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.10.16 Compliance data relating to benefits and allowances shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.10.17 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to benefits and allowances. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An internal audit of benefits and allowances shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

13.10.18 Compliance with the provisions on benefits and allowances shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

13.10.19 Compliance with the provisions on benefits and allowances shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

13.10.20 Where an external regulator requests information concerning benefits and allowances, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

13.10.21 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Compliance data relating to benefits and allowances shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

13.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on benefits and allowances shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Compliance data relating to benefits and allowances shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

13.10.23 Compliance data relating to benefits and allowances shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.10.24 Compliance with the provisions on benefits and allowances shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

13.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.10.26 Compliance with the provisions on benefits and allowances shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.10.27 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.10.28 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to benefits and allowances. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.10.29 Compliance with the provisions on benefits and allowances shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on benefits and allowances shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

13.10.31 Compliance data relating to benefits and allowances shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.10.32 An internal audit of benefits and allowances shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.10.33 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

13.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on benefits and allowances may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

13.11.4 A failure to comply with the provisions on benefits and allowances may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

13.11.5 A failure to comply with the provisions on benefits and allowances may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

13.11.6 A failure to comply with the provisions on benefits and allowances may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.11.7 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

13.11.8 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.11.9 A failure to comply with the provisions on benefits and allowances may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

13.11.10 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to benefits and allowances shall be treated as serious misconduct.

13.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to benefits and allowances shall be treated as serious misconduct.

13.11.12 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A failure to comply with the provisions on benefits and allowances may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

13.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to benefits and allowances shall be treated as serious misconduct.

13.11.14 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on benefits and allowances may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.11.16 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.11.17 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.11.18 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.11.19 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

13.11.21 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.11.22 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.11.23 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to benefits and allowances shall be treated as serious misconduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.11.24 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

13.11.25 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.11.26 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

13.11.27 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.11.28 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

13.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.11.30 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

13.11.31 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A failure to comply with the provisions on benefits and allowances may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

13.11.32 A failure to comply with the provisions on benefits and allowances may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.11.33 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to benefits and allowances shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.12 Review and Amendment

13.12.1 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.12.2 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

13.12.3 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

13.12.5 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on benefits and allowances through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

13.12.6 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

13.12.7 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on benefits and allowances through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

13.12.8 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.12.9 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

13.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

13.12.11 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.12.12 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

13.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.12.14 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on benefits and allowances through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect.

13.12.15 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

13.12.16 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.12.17 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

13.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.12.19 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to benefits and allowances, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

13.12.20 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

13.12.21 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

13.12.22 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on benefits and allowances through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect.

13.12.23 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

13.12.24 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

13.12.25 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

13.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

13.12.27 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

13.12.28 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to benefits and allowances made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

13.12.29 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

13.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

13.12.31 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

13.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

13.12.33 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

Chapter 14

Travel and Expense Reimbursement

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Claim deadline	30 days

14.1 Purpose and Scope

14.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on travel and expense reimbursement. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company recognises that travel and expense reimbursement has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

14.1.2 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on travel and expense reimbursement. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.1.3 The objective of these provisions on travel and expense reimbursement is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.1.4 The objective of these provisions on travel and expense reimbursement is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.1.5 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to travel and expense reimbursement and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.1.6 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on travel and expense reimbursement. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.1.7 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to travel and expense reimbursement and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.1.8 The Company recognises that travel and expense reimbursement has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on travel and expense reimbursement.

14.1.9 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.1.10 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

14.1.11 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

14.1.12 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.1.14 The Company recognises that travel and expense reimbursement has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

14.1.15 The Company recognises that travel and expense reimbursement has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.1.16 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to travel and expense reimbursement and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

14.1.17 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.1.19 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.1.20 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.1.21 The objective of these provisions on travel and expense reimbursement is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.1.22 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

14.1.23 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on travel and expense reimbursement.

14.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on travel and expense reimbursement. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.1.25 The Company recognises that travel and expense reimbursement has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to travel and expense reimbursement and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

14.1.26 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to travel and expense reimbursement and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

14.1.27 The objective of these provisions on travel and expense reimbursement is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.1.28 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to travel and expense reimbursement and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on travel and expense reimbursement.

14.1.29 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.1.30 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

14.1.31 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.1.32 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to travel and expense reimbursement and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.1.33 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.2 Definitions and Interpretation

14.2.1 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

14.2.2 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.2.3 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "travel and expense reimbursement" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

14.2.4 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

14.2.5 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

14.2.6 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.2.7 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to travel and expense reimbursement. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

14.2.8 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "travel and expense reimbursement" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.2.9 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

14.2.10 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.2.11 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

14.2.12 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.2.13 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

14.2.14 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "travel and expense reimbursement" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.2.15 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

14.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

14.2.17 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.2.18 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to travel and expense reimbursement.

14.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.2.20 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

14.2.22 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to travel and expense reimbursement. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

14.2.23 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

14.2.24 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.2.25 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "travel and expense reimbursement" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.2.26 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to travel and expense reimbursement. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

14.2.27 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "travel and expense reimbursement" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

14.2.29 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "travel and expense reimbursement" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to travel and expense reimbursement.

14.2.30 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

14.2.31 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "travel and expense reimbursement" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.2.32 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.2.33 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

14.3 Eligibility and Applicability

14.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.3.2 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.3.4 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

14.3.5 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.3.6 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.3.8 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement.

14.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

14.3.10 Eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

14.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

14.3.12 Eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.3.13 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.3.14 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

14.3.15 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

14.3.16 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.3.17 Eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

14.3.18 Eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

14.3.19 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

14.3.20 Eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

14.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.3.24 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.3.25 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement restricted until the matter is concluded.

14.3.26 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

14.3.28 Eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

14.3.30 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement restricted until the matter is concluded.

14.3.31 Eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

14.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for travel and expense reimbursement restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.4 Responsibilities of Employees

14.4.1 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with travel and expense reimbursement.

14.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement and shall comply with them at all times.

14.4.4 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

14.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.4.7 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with travel and expense reimbursement. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.4.8 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with travel and expense reimbursement.

14.4.9 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement and shall not withhold material facts.

14.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.4.12 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

14.4.13 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.4.14 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.4.15 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.4.16 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with travel and expense reimbursement. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

14.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.4.19 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.4.20 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement and shall comply with them at all times.

14.4.21 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement and shall comply with them at all times. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

14.4.22 The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.4.23 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

14.4.24 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

14.4.25 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

14.4.26 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.4.27 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.4.28 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.4.29 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with travel and expense reimbursement. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.4.30 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement and shall comply with them at all times. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

14.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with travel and expense reimbursement. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement and shall not withhold material facts.

14.4.32 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of travel and expense reimbursement as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.4.33 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

14.5.1 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.5.2 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on travel and expense reimbursement and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to travel and expense reimbursement to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

14.5.4 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to travel and expense reimbursement to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

14.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on travel and expense reimbursement and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.5.6 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.5.7 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.5.8 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.5.9 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on travel and expense reimbursement and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement and applies them consistently.

14.5.10 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on travel and expense reimbursement.

14.5.11 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on travel and expense reimbursement. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

14.5.12 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

14.5.13 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.5.14 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on travel and expense reimbursement and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.5.15 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

14.5.16 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.5.17 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to travel and expense reimbursement to the HR Director without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.5.18 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on travel and expense reimbursement. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

14.5.19 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on travel and expense reimbursement and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

14.5.21 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

14.5.22 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on travel and expense reimbursement.

14.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

14.5.24 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

14.5.25 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on travel and expense reimbursement. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.5.26 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on travel and expense reimbursement.

14.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on travel and expense reimbursement. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

14.5.30 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on travel and expense reimbursement and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

14.5.31 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to travel and expense reimbursement within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.5.32 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on travel and expense reimbursement and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.5.33 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

14.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

14.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with travel and expense reimbursement in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.6.2 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with travel and expense reimbursement in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to travel and expense reimbursement and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.6.4 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for travel and expense reimbursement and shall make them available to all employees. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to travel and expense reimbursement and on the applicable legal requirements.

14.6.5 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to travel and expense reimbursement and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

14.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.6.7 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to travel and expense reimbursement and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.6.9 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

14.6.10 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

14.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with travel and expense reimbursement in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.6.12 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

14.6.13 HR shall respond to every written query on travel and expense reimbursement within 10 working days of receipt. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

14.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement.

14.6.15 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.6.16 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.6.17 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. HR shall respond to every written query on travel and expense reimbursement within 10 working days of receipt.

14.6.19 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to travel and expense reimbursement and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.6.20 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.6.21 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to travel and expense reimbursement and on the applicable legal requirements. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.6.22 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement.

14.6.23 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.6.24 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to travel and expense reimbursement. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

14.6.25 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.6.26 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

14.6.27 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

14.6.28 HR shall respond to every written query on travel and expense reimbursement within 7 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.6.30 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to travel and expense reimbursement and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.6.31 HR shall respond to every written query on travel and expense reimbursement within 30 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

14.6.32 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

14.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.7 Procedure and Process Steps

14.7.1 Claim deadline. All expense claims shall be submitted within 30 days of the date on which the expense was incurred.

14.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

14.7.3 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

14.7.4 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.7.5 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.7.6 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.7.7 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

14.7.8 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.7.9 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.7.10 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.7.11 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 3 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

14.7.12 The employee shall initiate the process relating to travel and expense reimbursement by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.7.13 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 2 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.7.14 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 3 working days of receiving it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.7.16 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

14.7.17 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 3 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

14.7.18 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

14.7.19 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.7.20 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR

Business Partner. The employee shall initiate the process relating to travel and expense reimbursement by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner.

14.7.22 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

14.7.23 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to travel and expense reimbursement by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.7.25 The employee shall initiate the process relating to travel and expense reimbursement by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

14.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.7.27 The employee shall initiate the process relating to travel and expense reimbursement by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.7.28 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 2 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.7.30 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

14.7.31 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

14.7.32 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.7.33 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.7.34 The employee shall initiate the process relating to travel and expense reimbursement by submitting an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

14.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

14.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to travel and expense reimbursement that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.8.2 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

14.8.3 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Records relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

14.8.4 Records relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.8.5 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to travel and expense reimbursement that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

14.8.6 All documents relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

14.8.7 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

14.8.8 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to travel and expense reimbursement that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.8.9 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

14.8.10 Records relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

14.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

14.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

14.8.14 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.8.15 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

14.8.16 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to travel and expense reimbursement that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.8.17 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

14.8.18 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

14.8.20 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to travel and expense reimbursement that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

14.8.21 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to travel and expense reimbursement that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

14.8.23 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

14.8.24 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.8.25 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

14.8.26 All documents relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

14.8.27 All documents relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.8.28 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.8.29 All documents relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

14.8.30 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Records relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

14.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

14.8.32 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to travel and expense reimbursement that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Records relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

14.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

14.9.1 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

14.9.2 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

14.9.3 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

14.9.4 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

14.9.5 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

14.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.9.7 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

14.9.8 Exceptions to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.9.9 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Exceptions to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

14.9.10 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.9.11 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

14.9.12 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.9.13 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

14.9.14 Exceptions to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.9.15 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.9.16 Exceptions to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.9.17 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.9.18 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.9.19 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.9.20 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

14.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.9.22 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.9.23 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.9.24 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.9.26 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

14.9.27 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

14.9.28 Exceptions to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.9.29 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

14.9.30 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.9.31 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

14.9.32 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.9.33 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

14.10.1 Compliance data relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to travel and expense reimbursement.

14.10.2 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.10.3 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.10.4 Where an external regulator requests information concerning travel and expense reimbursement, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

14.10.5 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.10.6 Compliance data relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.10.7 Where an external regulator requests information concerning travel and expense reimbursement, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

14.10.8 Compliance data relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

14.10.9 An internal audit of travel and expense reimbursement shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Compliance with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

14.10.10 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.10.11 An internal audit of travel and expense reimbursement shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Where an external regulator requests information concerning travel and expense reimbursement, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

14.10.12 Where an external regulator requests information concerning travel and expense reimbursement, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

14.10.13 Compliance with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.10.14 Where an external regulator requests information concerning travel and expense reimbursement, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Compliance data relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

14.10.15 Where an external regulator requests information concerning travel and expense reimbursement, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.10.16 Compliance data relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

14.10.17 Compliance with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

14.10.18 Where an external regulator requests information concerning travel and expense reimbursement, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. An internal audit of travel and expense reimbursement shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

14.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An internal audit of travel and expense reimbursement shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

14.10.20 Where an external regulator requests information concerning travel and expense reimbursement, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.10.21 Where an external regulator requests information concerning travel and expense reimbursement, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

14.10.22 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.10.23 Compliance with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.10.24 Compliance with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.10.25 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to travel and expense reimbursement.

14.10.26 Compliance with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

14.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to travel and expense reimbursement. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

14.10.28 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to travel and expense reimbursement.

14.10.29 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An internal audit of travel and expense reimbursement shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

14.10.30 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to travel and expense reimbursement. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Compliance with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

14.10.31 Compliance data relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.10.32 Compliance data relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.10.33 Compliance data relating to travel and expense reimbursement shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

14.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

14.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

14.11.2 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.11.4 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

14.11.5 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

14.11.6 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

14.11.7 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.11.8 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

14.11.9 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.11.10 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

14.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.11.12 A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.11.13 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to travel and expense reimbursement shall be treated as serious misconduct.

14.11.14 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

14.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

14.11.16 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

14.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

14.11.18 A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.11.19 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

14.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

14.11.21 A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

14.11.22 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.11.23 A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to travel and expense reimbursement shall be treated as serious misconduct.

14.11.24 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

14.11.25 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to travel and expense reimbursement shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.11.26 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.11.28 A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

14.11.29 A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

14.11.31 A failure to comply with the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.11.32 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.11.33 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to travel and expense reimbursement shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.12 Review and Amendment

14.12.1 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.12.2 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.12.3 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

14.12.4 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

14.12.5 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.12.6 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.12.7 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

14.12.8 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.12.9 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

14.12.10 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

14.12.11 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect.

14.12.13 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

14.12.14 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

14.12.15 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

14.12.16 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.12.17 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

14.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

14.12.19 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

14.12.20 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

14.12.21 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

14.12.22 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

14.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

14.12.24 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on travel and expense reimbursement through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

14.12.25 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

14.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

14.12.27 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

14.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

14.12.29 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

14.12.30 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

14.12.31 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to travel and expense reimbursement, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

14.12.32 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

14.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to travel and expense reimbursement made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

Chapter 15

Performance Management

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Review cycle	annual

15.1 Purpose and Scope

15.1.1 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

15.1.2 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

15.1.3 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to performance management and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

15.1.4 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on performance management. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

15.1.5 The Company recognises that performance management has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

15.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

15.1.7 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on performance management. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

15.1.8 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to performance management and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

15.1.9 The objective of these provisions on performance management is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to performance management and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

15.1.10 The Company recognises that performance management has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

15.1.11 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on performance management. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.1.12 The Company recognises that performance management has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The objective of these provisions on performance management is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

15.1.13 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on performance management. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.1.14 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to performance management and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.1.15 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on performance management. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

15.1.16 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.1.17 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company recognises that performance management has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

15.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to performance management and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

15.1.19 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

15.1.20 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

15.1.21 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

15.1.22 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

15.1.23 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to performance management and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

15.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on performance management. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.1.25 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to performance management and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.1.26 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.1.27 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.1.28 The objective of these provisions on performance management is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

15.1.29 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

15.1.30 The Company recognises that performance management has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on performance management.

15.1.31 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on performance management.

15.1.32 The objective of these provisions on performance management is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.1.33 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to performance management and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.2 Definitions and Interpretation

15.2.1 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.2.2 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.2.3 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to performance management. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.2.4 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.2.5 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

15.2.6 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to performance management. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to performance management. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.2.9 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.2.10 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.2.11 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

15.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.2.13 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "performance management" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

15.2.14 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "performance management" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

15.2.15 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "performance management" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.2.16 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to performance management.

15.2.17 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.2.18 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.2.19 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

15.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

15.2.21 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.2.22 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to performance management. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "performance management" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

15.2.23 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "performance management" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

15.2.25 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.2.26 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.2.27 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "performance management" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

15.2.28 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.2.29 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "performance management" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "performance management" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.2.31 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.2.32 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.2.33 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

15.3 Eligibility and Applicability

15.3.1 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for performance management restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

15.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on performance management.

15.3.3 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for performance management restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Eligibility for performance management shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

15.3.4 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for performance management restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

15.3.5 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

15.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.3.7 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.3.8 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Eligibility for performance management shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

15.3.9 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.3.10 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

15.3.11 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

15.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.3.13 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

15.3.14 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for performance management restricted until the matter is concluded.

15.3.15 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on performance management.

15.3.16 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.3.17 Eligibility for performance management shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.3.18 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

15.3.19 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Eligibility for performance management shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

15.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

15.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

15.3.23 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of

illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

15.3.25 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.3.26 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for performance management restricted until the matter is concluded.

