15.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for performance management restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.3.28 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for performance management restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

15.3.29 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

15.3.30 Eligibility for performance management shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

15.3.31 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for performance management restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.3.32 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

15.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for performance management restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Eligibility for performance management shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

15.4 Responsibilities of Employees

15.4.1 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.4.2 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on performance management and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on performance management and shall comply with them at all times. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

15.4.4 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

15.4.5 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on performance management and shall comply with them at all times.

15.4.6 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with performance management. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.4.7 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

15.4.8 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with performance management.

15.4.9 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.4.10 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with performance management. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to performance management and shall not withhold material facts.

15.4.12 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on performance management and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to performance management and shall not withhold material facts. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of performance management as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.4.15 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.4.16 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of performance management as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

15.4.17 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to performance management and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.4.18 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with performance management. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of performance management as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.4.20 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.4.21 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on performance management and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.4.22 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.4.23 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on performance management and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.4.24 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of performance management as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.4.25 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to performance management and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.4.26 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.4.27 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

15.4.28 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of performance management as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

15.4.29 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to performance management and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

15.4.30 The employee shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with performance management. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.4.32 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to performance management and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.4.33 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

15.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

15.5.1 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to performance management to the HR Director without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

15.5.2 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on performance management. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.5.3 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on performance management and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

15.5.4 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to performance management to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.5.5 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on performance management. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to performance management within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on performance management and applies them consistently.

15.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on performance management and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

15.5.8 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to performance management within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

15.5.9 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to performance management to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

15.5.10 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on performance management and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

15.5.11 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on performance management and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

15.5.12 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on performance management and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

15.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.5.14 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to performance management to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on performance management and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.5.16 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on performance management. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.5.17 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on performance management. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to performance management within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.5.19 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to performance management within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

15.5.20 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

15.5.21 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.5.22 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

15.5.23 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on performance management and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to performance management to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

15.5.24 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on performance management and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on performance management.

15.5.25 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on performance management and applies them consistently.

15.5.26 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on performance management and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.5.27 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to performance management to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.5.29 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to performance management to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.5.30 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to performance management to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on performance management.

15.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

15.5.32 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to performance management to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.5.33 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on performance management. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

15.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

15.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with performance management in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

15.6.2 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to performance management. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

15.6.3 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for performance management and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.6.4 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to performance management and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.6.5 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with performance management in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to performance management.

15.6.7 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for performance management and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

15.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to performance management and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

15.6.9 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with performance management in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.6.10 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to performance management and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for performance management and shall make them available to all employees.

15.6.11 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.6.12 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

15.6.13 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.6.15 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.6.16 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with performance management in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.6.17 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to performance management and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.6.18 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with performance management in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

15.6.19 HR shall respond to every written query on performance management within 5 working days of receipt. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.6.20 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to performance management and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

15.6.21 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for performance management and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.6.22 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for performance management and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.6.23 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.6.24 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to performance management and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.6.25 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to performance management.

15.6.26 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for performance management and shall make them available to all employees.

15.6.27 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for performance management and shall make them available to all employees.

15.6.28 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.6.29 HR shall respond to every written query on performance management within 14 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with performance management in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.6.31 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to performance management and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.6.32 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to performance management and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for performance management and shall make them available to all employees.

15.6.33 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to performance management. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.7 Procedure and Process Steps

15.7.1 Review cycle. Formal performance reviews shall be conducted on a annual basis.

15.7.2 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 21 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.7.3 The employee shall initiate the process relating to performance management by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

15.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

15.7.5 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

15.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

15.7.7 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

15.7.8 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

15.7.9 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

15.7.10 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

15.7.11 The employee shall initiate the process relating to performance management by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.7.12 The employee shall initiate the process relating to performance management by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.7.13 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

15.7.15 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.7.16 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

15.7.17 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

15.7.18 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.7.19 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.7.20 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

15.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it.

15.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

15.7.23 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.7.24 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.7.25 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

15.7.26 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

15.7.27 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.7.28 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 15 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.7.29 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.7.30 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 2 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

15.7.31 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

15.7.32 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

15.7.33 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

15.7.34 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

15.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

15.8.1 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

15.8.2 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.8.3 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to performance management that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.8.4 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.8.5 All documents relating to performance management shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Records relating to performance management shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years.

15.8.6 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

15.8.8 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.8.9 Records relating to performance management shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.8.10 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

15.8.11 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.8.13 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. All documents relating to performance management shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

15.8.15 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to performance management that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

15.8.16 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.8.17 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

15.8.18 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

15.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.8.20 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.8.21 Records relating to performance management shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.8.22 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to performance management that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

15.8.23 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to performance management that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

15.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to performance management that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.8.25 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

15.8.26 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.8.27 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

15.8.28 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to performance management that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.8.29 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.8.30 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Records relating to performance management shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

15.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

15.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Records relating to performance management shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

15.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

15.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

15.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on performance management may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.9.2 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

15.9.3 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.9.4 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

15.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.9.7 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice.

15.9.8 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.9.9 Exceptions to the provisions on performance management may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.9.10 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on performance management may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

15.9.12 Exceptions to the provisions on performance management may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.9.13 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

15.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

15.9.15 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

15.9.16 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

15.9.17 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.9.18 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.9.19 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.9.20 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

15.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on performance management may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

15.9.22 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

15.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

15.9.26 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

15.9.27 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.9.28 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

15.9.30 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.9.31 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

15.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

15.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

15.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on performance management shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

15.10.2 Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to performance management.

15.10.3 An internal audit of performance management shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.10.4 Where an external regulator requests information concerning performance management, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.10.5 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to performance management. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.10.7 An internal audit of performance management shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.10.8 Where an external regulator requests information concerning performance management, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

15.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to performance management. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

15.10.10 Compliance with the provisions on performance management shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.10.11 Compliance with the provisions on performance management shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

15.10.12 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

15.10.13 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to performance management. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.10.14 An internal audit of performance management shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.10.15 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.10.16 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where an external regulator requests information concerning performance management, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

15.10.17 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

15.10.18 Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

15.10.19 Where an external regulator requests information concerning performance management, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

15.10.20 Where an external regulator requests information concerning performance management, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Compliance with the provisions on performance management shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

15.10.21 An internal audit of performance management shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

15.10.22 An internal audit of performance management shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

15.10.23 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.10.24 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to performance management. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

15.10.25 Where an external regulator requests information concerning performance management, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

15.10.26 Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

15.10.27 Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. An internal audit of performance management shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

15.10.28 An internal audit of performance management shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.10.29 Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.10.30 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to performance management. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

15.10.31 Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.10.32 Where an external regulator requests information concerning performance management, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Compliance data relating to performance management shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

15.10.33 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to performance management.

15.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

15.11.1 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.11.2 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.11.3 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

15.11.4 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.11.5 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

15.11.6 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.11.7 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

15.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.11.9 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct.

15.11.10 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.11.11 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.11.12 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

15.11.13 A failure to comply with the provisions on performance management may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

15.11.14 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

15.11.15 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

15.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

15.11.17 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.11.18 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.11.19 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

15.11.20 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

15.11.21 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct.

15.11.22 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

15.11.23 A failure to comply with the provisions on performance management may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct.

15.11.24 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.11.25 A failure to comply with the provisions on performance management may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

15.11.26 A failure to comply with the provisions on performance management may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

15.11.27 A failure to comply with the provisions on performance management may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

15.11.28 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

15.11.30 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.11.31 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.11.32 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

15.11.33 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to performance management shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

15.12 Review and Amendment

15.12.1 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

15.12.2 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on performance management through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

15.12.3 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

15.12.4 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

15.12.5 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

15.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

15.12.7 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.12.8 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

15.12.9 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

15.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.12.11 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on performance management through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

15.12.12 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.12.13 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on performance management through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

15.12.14 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

15.12.15 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.12.16 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

15.12.18 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR

Operations team.

15.12.19 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on performance management through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

15.12.20 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.12.21 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

15.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

15.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.12.24 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to performance management made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

15.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

15.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

15.12.27 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.12.28 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

15.12.29 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on performance management through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

15.12.30 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

15.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

15.12.32 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to performance management, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

15.12.33 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

Chapter 16

Learning and Development

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Learning commitment	24 hours per year

16.1 Purpose and Scope

16.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on learning and development. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.1.2 The Company recognises that learning and development has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The objective of these provisions on learning and development is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

16.1.4 The Company recognises that learning and development has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on learning and development.

16.1.5 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on learning and development. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The objective of these provisions on learning and development is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

16.1.6 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to learning and development and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

16.1.7 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to learning and development and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.1.8 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

16.1.9 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.1.10 The Company recognises that learning and development has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.1.11 The objective of these provisions on learning and development is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.1.12 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.1.13 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.1.14 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.1.15 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

16.1.16 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to learning and development and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.1.17 The objective of these provisions on learning and development is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

16.1.18 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to learning and development and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The objective of these provisions on learning and development is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

16.1.19 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.1.20 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.1.21 The Company recognises that learning and development has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to learning and development and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

16.1.23 The objective of these provisions on learning and development is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to learning and development and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

16.1.24 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

16.1.25 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. The Company recognises that learning and development has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

16.1.26 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on learning and development.

16.1.27 The objective of these provisions on learning and development is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.1.28 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.1.29 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to learning and development and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.1.30 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on learning and development. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.1.32 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on learning and development. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.1.33 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on learning and development.

16.2 Definitions and Interpretation

16.2.1 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "learning and development" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

16.2.2 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.2.4 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.2.5 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.2.6 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

16.2.8 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.2.9 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to learning and development. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

16.2.10 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

16.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

16.2.13 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

16.2.15 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.2.16 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.2.17 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "learning and development" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

16.2.18 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.2.20 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to learning and development.

16.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.2.22 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "learning and development" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.2.23 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "learning and development" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "learning and development" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

16.2.25 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to learning and development. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.2.26 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to learning and development. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.2.27 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "learning and development" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.2.29 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "learning and development" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.2.31 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

16.2.32 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.2.33 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "learning and development" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.3 Eligibility and Applicability

16.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on learning and development. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.3.2 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.3.3 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for learning and development restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.3.5 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for learning and development restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

16.3.6 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.3.7 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.3.8 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.3.9 Eligibility for learning and development shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.3.10 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.3.11 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

16.3.12 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.3.13 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Eligibility for learning and development shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

16.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.3.15 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.3.16 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for learning and development restricted until the matter is concluded.

16.3.17 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.3.18 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

16.3.19 Eligibility for learning and development shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

16.3.21 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.3.22 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

16.3.23 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.3.24 Eligibility for learning and development shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

16.3.25 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.3.26 Eligibility for learning and development shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

16.3.28 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on learning and development. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.3.29 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

16.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for learning and development restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

16.3.31 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on learning and development. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

16.3.32 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for learning and development restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.4 Responsibilities of Employees

16.4.1 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.4.2 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on learning and development and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.4.3 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with learning and development. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

16.4.4 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to learning and development and shall not withhold material facts.

16.4.5 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on learning and development and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.4.6 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

16.4.7 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

16.4.8 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on learning and development and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

16.4.9 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on learning and development and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

16.4.10 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.4.11 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of learning and development as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.4.12 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to learning and development and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

16.4.14 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.4.15 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of learning and development as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.4.16 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to learning and development and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.4.17 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on learning and development and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.4.18 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on learning and development and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to learning and development and shall not withhold material facts.

16.4.19 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with learning and development.

16.4.20 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on learning and development and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. The employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

16.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.4.22 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to learning and development and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.4.23 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.4.24 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to learning and development and shall not withhold material facts. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

16.4.25 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with learning and development. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.4.27 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to learning and development and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.4.28 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.4.29 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with learning and development. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.4.30 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with learning and development. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.4.31 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on learning and development and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on learning and development and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to learning and development and shall not withhold material facts.

16.4.33 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of learning and development as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

16.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

16.5.1 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to learning and development to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

16.5.3 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to learning and development to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.5.4 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on learning and development and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.5.5 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to learning and development within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

16.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to learning and development within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.5.7 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.5.8 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.5.9 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.5.10 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on learning and development and applies them consistently.

16.5.11 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on learning and development and applies them consistently.

16.5.12 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on learning and development and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

16.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.5.14 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on learning and development and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.5.15 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

16.5.16 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on learning and development and applies them consistently. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

16.5.17 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on learning and development and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.5.18 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on learning and development and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

16.5.19 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to learning and development to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.5.20 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on learning and development and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

16.5.21 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.5.22 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to learning and development to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

16.5.25 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.5.26 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to learning and development within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

16.5.28 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on learning and development and applies them consistently.

16.5.29 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

16.5.30 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.5.31 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on learning and development and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.5.32 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on learning and development and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.5.33 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on learning and development. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

16.6.1 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to learning and development and on the applicable legal requirements.

16.6.2 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to learning and development.

16.6.3 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to learning and development. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.6.4 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with learning and development in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to learning and development and on the applicable legal requirements.

16.6.5 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to learning and development. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.6.6 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.6.7 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to learning and development. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with learning and development in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

16.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to learning and development and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

16.6.9 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for learning and development and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.6.10 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to learning and development and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

16.6.11 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.6.12 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for learning and development and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.6.13 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to learning and development. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

16.6.14 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to learning and development. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.6.15 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to learning and development and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.6.16 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for learning and development and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to learning and development. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to learning and development and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.6.19 HR shall respond to every written query on learning and development within 21 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.6.20 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with learning and development in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

16.6.21 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with learning and development in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

16.6.22 HR shall respond to every written query on learning and development within 7 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.6.23 HR shall respond to every written query on learning and development within 21 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

16.6.24 HR shall respond to every written query on learning and development within 10 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to learning and development and on the applicable legal requirements.

16.6.25 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.6.26 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with learning and development in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for learning and development and shall make them available to all employees.

16.6.27 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall respond to every written query on learning and development within 7 working days of receipt.

16.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.6.29 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to learning and development and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with learning and development in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

16.6.31 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for learning and development and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with learning and development in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.6.33 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with learning and development in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.7 Procedure and Process Steps

16.7.1 Learning commitment. Each employee shall be provided with a minimum of 24 hours per year of structured learning.

16.7.2 The employee shall initiate the process relating to learning and development by submitting a written request to the Line Manager. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

16.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The employee shall initiate the process relating to learning and development by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department.

16.7.5 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

16.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

16.7.7 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

16.7.8 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.7.9 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

16.7.10 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 30 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

16.7.11 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

16.7.12 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.7.13 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.7.14 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 2 working days of receiving it.

16.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 15 working days of receiving it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

16.7.16 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 10 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 15 working days of receiving it.

16.7.18 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

16.7.19 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.7.20 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.7.21 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.7.22 The employee shall initiate the process relating to learning and development by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.7.23 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

16.7.24 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.7.25 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The employee shall initiate the process relating to learning and development by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department.

16.7.27 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.7.28 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

16.7.29 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.7.30 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.7.31 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

16.7.32 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.7.33 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.7.34 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

16.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

16.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to learning and development that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.8.2 All documents relating to learning and development shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Records relating to learning and development shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

16.8.3 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to learning and development that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.8.4 Records relating to learning and development shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.8.5 Records relating to learning and development shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.8.6 Records relating to learning and development shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

16.8.7 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

16.8.8 All documents relating to learning and development shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

16.8.9 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

16.8.10 All documents relating to learning and development shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

16.8.11 All documents relating to learning and development shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

16.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.8.13 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.8.14 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.8.15 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to learning and development that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.8.16 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.8.17 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.8.18 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.8.19 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.8.20 Records relating to learning and development shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

16.8.21 Records relating to learning and development shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

16.8.22 All documents relating to learning and development shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

16.8.23 Records relating to learning and development shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.8.24 All documents relating to learning and development shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

16.8.25 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.8.26 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

16.8.27 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to learning and development that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. All documents relating to learning and development shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

16.8.28 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to learning and development that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.8.29 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.8.30 Records relating to learning and development shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.8.31 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.8.32 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to learning and development that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

16.8.33 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to learning and development that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

16.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

16.9.1 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

16.9.2 Exceptions to the provisions on learning and development may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

16.9.3 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.9.4 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.9.6 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.9.7 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.9.8 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

16.9.9 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

16.9.10 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

16.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions to the provisions on learning and development may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

16.9.12 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.9.13 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.9.14 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.9.15 Exceptions to the provisions on learning and development may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.9.16 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.9.17 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

16.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.9.19 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

16.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on learning and development may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

16.9.22 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.9.23 Exceptions to the provisions on learning and development may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.9.25 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

16.9.26 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

16.9.27 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

16.9.28 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.9.29 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.9.30 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

16.9.31 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.9.32 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.9.33 Exceptions to the provisions on learning and development may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

16.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

16.10.1 An internal audit of learning and development shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.10.2 Compliance data relating to learning and development shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where an external regulator requests information concerning learning and development, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

16.10.3 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to learning and development. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

16.10.4 Compliance data relating to learning and development shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.10.5 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.10.6 Compliance with the provisions on learning and development shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.10.7 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.10.8 Where an external regulator requests information concerning learning and development, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.10.9 Compliance with the provisions on learning and development shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

16.10.10 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to learning and development. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

16.10.11 Compliance data relating to learning and development shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.10.12 An internal audit of learning and development shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.10.13 Compliance data relating to learning and development shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to learning and development.

16.10.14 Compliance with the provisions on learning and development shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

16.10.16 Compliance with the provisions on learning and development shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.10.17 Compliance data relating to learning and development shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

16.10.18 Compliance data relating to learning and development shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

16.10.19 Where an external regulator requests information concerning learning and development, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.10.20 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to learning and development. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.10.21 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

16.10.22 An internal audit of learning and development shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.10.23 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.10.24 Where an external regulator requests information concerning learning and development, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.10.25 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to learning and development. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.10.26 Compliance with the provisions on learning and development shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to learning and development. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Compliance data relating to learning and development shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

16.10.28 Compliance data relating to learning and development shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where an external regulator requests information concerning learning and development, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

16.10.29 An internal audit of learning and development shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on learning and development shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

16.10.31 Where an external regulator requests information concerning learning and development, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

16.10.32 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

16.10.33 Compliance with the provisions on learning and development shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

16.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.11.2 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to learning and development shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.11.3 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.11.4 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

16.11.5 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.11.6 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

16.11.7 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.11.8 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

16.11.9 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

16.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.11.11 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

16.11.12 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.11.13 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.11.14 A failure to comply with the provisions on learning and development may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.11.15 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to learning and development shall be treated as serious misconduct.

16.11.16 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

16.11.17 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

16.11.18 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.11.19 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.11.20 A failure to comply with the provisions on learning and development may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

16.11.21 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

16.11.22 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.11.23 A failure to comply with the provisions on learning and development may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.11.24 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.11.25 A failure to comply with the provisions on learning and development may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.11.26 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

16.11.27 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.11.28 A failure to comply with the provisions on learning and development may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

16.11.30 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.11.31 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

16.11.32 A failure to comply with the provisions on learning and development may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.11.33 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.12 Review and Amendment

16.12.1 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

16.12.2 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

16.12.3 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

16.12.4 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.12.5 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

16.12.6 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.12.7 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

16.12.8 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

16.12.9 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

16.12.10 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

16.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

16.12.13 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on learning and development through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.12.14 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

16.12.15 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on learning and development through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect.

16.12.16 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

16.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

16.12.19 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.12.20 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

16.12.21 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to learning and development made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

16.12.22 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on learning and development through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

16.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

16.12.24 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on learning and development through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

16.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

16.12.26 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

16.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on learning and development through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

16.12.28 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

16.12.29 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

16.12.30 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on learning and development through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to learning and development, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

16.12.31 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on learning and development through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

16.12.32 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

16.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

Chapter 17

Career Progression and Promotions

17.1 Purpose and Scope

17.1.1 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to career progression and promotions and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.1.2 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.1.3 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on career progression and promotions.

17.1.4 The objective of these provisions on career progression and promotions is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

17.1.5 The Company recognises that career progression and promotions has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The objective of these provisions on career progression and promotions is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

17.1.6 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to career progression and promotions and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

17.1.7 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The objective of these provisions on career progression and promotions is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

17.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on career progression and promotions. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.1.9 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to career progression and promotions and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

17.1.10 The objective of these provisions on career progression and promotions is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

17.1.11 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on career progression and promotions. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.1.12 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

17.1.13 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

17.1.14 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to career progression and promotions and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.1.15 The objective of these provisions on career progression and promotions is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.1.16 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.1.17 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

17.1.18 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on career progression and promotions. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

17.1.19 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

17.1.20 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to career progression and promotions and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on career progression and promotions.

17.1.21 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on career progression and promotions. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.1.22 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to career progression and promotions and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The objective of these provisions on career progression and promotions is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

17.1.23 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on career progression and promotions.

17.1.24 The Company recognises that career progression and promotions has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

17.1.25 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on career progression and promotions. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

17.1.26 The Company recognises that career progression and promotions has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.1.27 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to career progression and promotions and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.1.28 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

17.1.29 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.1.30 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.1.31 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to career progression and promotions and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

17.1.32 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

17.1.33 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to career progression and promotions and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.2 Definitions and Interpretation

17.2.1 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.2.2 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to career progression and promotions. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

17.2.3 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

17.2.4 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "career progression and promotions" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

17.2.5 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

17.2.6 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

17.2.7 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.2.8 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

17.2.9 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

17.2.10 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.2.11 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.2.12 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

17.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

17.2.14 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "career progression and promotions" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.2.15 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.2.16 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.2.17 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to career progression and promotions. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

17.2.18 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

17.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.2.20 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.2.21 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to career progression and promotions.

17.2.22 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

17.2.23 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

17.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "career progression and promotions" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.2.25 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to career progression and promotions. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.2.26 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.2.27 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.2.28 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

17.2.30 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to career progression and promotions.

17.2.31 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to career progression and promotions. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

17.2.32 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

17.2.33 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.3 Eligibility and Applicability

17.3.1 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.3.3 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.3.4 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

17.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

17.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.3.7 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

17.3.8 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

17.3.9 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on career progression and promotions. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.3.10 Eligibility for career progression and promotions shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for career progression and promotions restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Eligibility for career progression and promotions shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

17.3.12 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for career progression and promotions restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

17.3.13 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

17.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for career progression and promotions restricted until the matter is concluded.

17.3.15 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

17.3.16 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on career progression and promotions. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

17.3.17 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for career progression and promotions restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

17.3.19 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

17.3.20 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

17.3.21 Eligibility for career progression and promotions shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for career progression and promotions restricted until the matter is concluded.

17.3.22 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.3.23 Eligibility for career progression and promotions shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

17.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

17.3.26 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

17.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for career progression and promotions restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

17.3.28 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on career progression and promotions. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on career progression and promotions. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Eligibility for career progression and promotions shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

17.3.30 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on career progression and promotions. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.3.31 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.3.32 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for career progression and promotions restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

17.3.33 Eligibility for career progression and promotions shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.4 Responsibilities of Employees

17.4.1 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on career progression and promotions and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

17.4.2 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with career progression and promotions. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR

Operations team.

17.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on career progression and promotions and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.4.4 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with career progression and promotions. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.4.5 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

17.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to career progression and promotions and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.4.7 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to career progression and promotions and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of career progression and promotions as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

17.4.8 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of career progression and promotions as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

17.4.9 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

17.4.10 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

17.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.4.12 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

17.4.13 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with career progression and promotions. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of career progression and promotions as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with career progression and promotions.

17.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.4.16 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with career progression and promotions. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of career progression and promotions as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.4.18 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on career progression and promotions and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to career progression and promotions and shall not withhold material facts.

17.4.19 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.4.20 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with career progression and promotions. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.4.21 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

17.4.22 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

17.4.23 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.4.24 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.4.25 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

17.4.26 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

17.4.27 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with career progression and promotions.

17.4.28 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of career progression and promotions as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to career progression and promotions and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.4.31 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.4.32 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of career progression and promotions as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

17.4.33 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to career progression and promotions and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with career progression and promotions.

17.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

17.5.1 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on career progression and promotions and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on career progression and promotions.

17.5.2 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on career progression and promotions and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.5.3 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

17.5.4 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on career progression and promotions. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.5.5 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on career progression and promotions. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

17.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to career progression and promotions within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

17.5.7 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on career progression and promotions.

17.5.8 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on career progression and promotions. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

17.5.9 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on career progression and promotions and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.5.10 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.5.12 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.5.13 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on career progression and promotions and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

17.5.14 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on career progression and promotions and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.5.15 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

17.5.16 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

17.5.17 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on career progression and promotions. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.5.18 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

17.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.5.20 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to career progression and promotions to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on career progression and promotions.

17.5.21 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on career progression and promotions and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

17.5.22 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.5.23 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to career progression and promotions to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to career progression and promotions to the Policy Committee without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.5.25 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to career progression and promotions within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

17.5.26 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to career progression and promotions to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.5.27 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on career progression and promotions. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.5.29 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on career progression and promotions. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.5.30 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to career progression and promotions within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

17.5.31 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to career progression and promotions to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.5.32 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on career progression and promotions and applies them consistently. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to career progression and promotions within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

17.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with career progression and promotions in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

17.6.2 HR shall respond to every written query on career progression and promotions within 3 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with career progression and promotions in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

17.6.3 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall respond to every written query on career progression and promotions within 5 working days of receipt.

17.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.6.5 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall respond to every written query on career progression and promotions within 5 working days of receipt.

17.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with career progression and promotions in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

17.6.8 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for career progression and promotions and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.6.9 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to career progression and promotions and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.6.10 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with career progression and promotions in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.6.12 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for career progression and promotions and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to career progression and promotions.

17.6.13 HR shall respond to every written query on career progression and promotions within 21 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.6.14 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to career progression and promotions and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

17.6.15 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to career progression and promotions and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.6.16 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to career progression and promotions. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for career progression and promotions and shall make them available to all employees.

17.6.17 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to career progression and promotions and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to career progression and promotions. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall respond to every written query on career progression and promotions within 5 working days of receipt.

17.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.6.20 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for career progression and promotions and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.6.21 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to career progression and promotions. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.6.22 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.6.23 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

17.6.24 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to career progression and promotions. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.6.25 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for career progression and promotions and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.6.26 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for career progression and promotions and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

17.6.27 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.6.28 HR shall respond to every written query on career progression and promotions within 10 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.6.29 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.6.30 HR shall respond to every written query on career progression and promotions within 10 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.6.31 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to career progression and promotions. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.6.32 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for career progression and promotions and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to career progression and promotions and on the applicable legal requirements.

17.7 Procedure and Process Steps

17.7.1 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

17.7.2 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 30 working days of receiving it. On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

17.7.3 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. The employee shall initiate the process relating to career progression and promotions by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner.

17.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

17.7.5 The employee shall initiate the process relating to career progression and promotions by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

17.7.6 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The employee shall initiate the process relating to career progression and promotions by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager.

17.7.7 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

17.7.8 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.7.9 The employee shall initiate the process relating to career progression and promotions by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.7.10 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

17.7.11 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.7.12 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.7.14 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

17.7.15 The employee shall initiate the process relating to career progression and promotions by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

17.7.16 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.7.17 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.7.18 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to career progression and promotions by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.7.20 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.7.21 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.7.22 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 2 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

17.7.23 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

17.7.24 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

17.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 14 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.7.26 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.7.27 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

17.7.28 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

17.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.7.30 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

17.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to career progression and promotions by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.7.33 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

17.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

17.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to career progression and promotions that is held about them, subject to applicable law. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.8.2 Records relating to career progression and promotions shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

17.8.3 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

17.8.4 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to career progression and promotions that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

17.8.6 All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.8.7 All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.8.8 Records relating to career progression and promotions shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.8.9 All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

17.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Records relating to career progression and promotions shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

17.8.11 All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.8.12 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to career progression and promotions that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.8.13 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.8.14 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

17.8.15 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to career progression and promotions that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.8.16 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to career progression and promotions that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.8.17 Records relating to career progression and promotions shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.8.18 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to career progression and promotions that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

17.8.19 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

17.8.20 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.8.21 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.8.22 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to career progression and promotions that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.8.23 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.8.24 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

17.8.25 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to career progression and promotions that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

17.8.26 All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Records relating to career progression and promotions shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

17.8.27 Records relating to career progression and promotions shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.8.28 Records relating to career progression and promotions shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.8.29 Records relating to career progression and promotions shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

17.8.30 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.8.31 All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Records relating to career progression and promotions shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

17.8.32 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.8.33 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. All documents relating to career progression and promotions shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

17.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

17.9.1 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.9.2 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.9.3 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Exceptions to the provisions on career progression and promotions may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

17.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

17.9.5 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.9.6 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.9.7 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

17.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Exceptions to the provisions on career progression and promotions may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

17.9.9 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice.

17.9.10 Exceptions to the provisions on career progression and promotions may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on career progression and promotions may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.9.12 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.9.13 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

17.9.14 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

17.9.15 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

17.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.9.17 Exceptions to the provisions on career progression and promotions may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

17.9.18 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.9.20 Exceptions to the provisions on career progression and promotions may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice.

17.9.21 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

17.9.22 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.9.23 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.9.25 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

17.9.26 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

17.9.27 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.9.28 Exceptions to the provisions on career progression and promotions may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.9.29 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.9.30 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.9.31 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

17.9.32 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.9.33 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

17.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on career progression and promotions shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where an external regulator requests information concerning career progression and promotions, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

17.10.2 An internal audit of career progression and promotions shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

17.10.3 Where an external regulator requests information concerning career progression and promotions, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.10.4 Where an external regulator requests information concerning career progression and promotions, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.10.5 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to career progression and promotions. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.10.6 Compliance data relating to career progression and promotions shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.10.7 Compliance with the provisions on career progression and promotions shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

17.10.8 Where an external regulator requests information concerning career progression and promotions, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.10.9 An internal audit of career progression and promotions shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.10.10 An internal audit of career progression and promotions shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.10.12 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.10.13 An internal audit of career progression and promotions shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

17.10.14 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to career progression and promotions. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.10.15 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to career progression and promotions. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

17.10.16 Compliance with the provisions on career progression and promotions shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.10.17 Compliance data relating to career progression and promotions shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

17.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to career progression and promotions. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

17.10.19 Compliance with the provisions on career progression and promotions shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.10.20 An internal audit of career progression and promotions shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.10.21 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.10.22 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An internal audit of career progression and promotions shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

17.10.23 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to career progression and promotions. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. An internal audit of career progression and promotions shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

17.10.24 An internal audit of career progression and promotions shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

17.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

17.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning career progression and promotions, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

17.10.27 Compliance data relating to career progression and promotions shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.10.28 An internal audit of career progression and promotions shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.10.29 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

17.10.30 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to career progression and promotions.

17.10.31 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.10.32 Compliance with the provisions on career progression and promotions shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

17.10.33 Where an external regulator requests information concerning career progression and promotions, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

17.11.1 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

17.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

17.11.3 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.11.4 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to career progression and promotions made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A failure to comply with the provisions on career progression and promotions may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

17.11.5 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to career progression and promotions shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.11.6 A failure to comply with the provisions on career progression and promotions may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

17.11.7 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

17.11.8 A failure to comply with the provisions on career progression and promotions may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

17.11.10 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to career progression and promotions shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

17.11.11 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

17.11.12 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

17.11.13 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.11.14 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to career progression and promotions shall be treated as serious misconduct.

17.11.15 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.11.16 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

17.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.11.18 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on career progression and promotions may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

17.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.11.22 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

17.11.24 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. A failure to comply with the provisions on career progression and promotions may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

17.11.25 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

17.11.26 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

17.11.27 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

17.11.28 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

17.11.29 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.11.30 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

17.11.31 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.11.32 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.11.33 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

17.12 Review and Amendment

17.12.1 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

17.12.2 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

17.12.4 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

17.12.5 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

17.12.6 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

17.12.7 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

17.12.8 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

17.12.9 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on career progression and promotions through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

17.12.10 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

17.12.11 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

17.12.12 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

17.12.13 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

17.12.14 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

17.12.15 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.12.16 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on career progression and promotions through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

17.12.18 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

17.12.19 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

17.12.20 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

17.12.21 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

17.12.22 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

17.12.23 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on career progression and promotions through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

17.12.24 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

17.12.25 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to career progression and promotions, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

17.12.26 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

17.12.27 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

17.12.28 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

17.12.29 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on career progression and promotions through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

17.12.30 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

17.12.31 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

17.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

17.12.33 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

Chapter 18

Code of Conduct

18.1 Purpose and Scope

18.1.1 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

18.1.2 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

18.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.1.4 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on code of conduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.1.5 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

18.1.6 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on code of conduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.1.7 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.1.8 The Company recognises that code of conduct has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

18.1.9 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on code of conduct. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.1.10 The Company recognises that code of conduct has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

18.1.11 The objective of these provisions on code of conduct is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.1.12 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

18.1.13 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

18.1.14 The objective of these provisions on code of conduct is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.1.15 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

18.1.16 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on code of conduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.1.17 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.1.18 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

18.1.19 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on code of conduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

18.1.20 The objective of these provisions on code of conduct is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

18.1.21 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The objective of these provisions on code of conduct is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

18.1.22 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

18.1.23 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on code of conduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.1.25 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on code of conduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.1.26 The objective of these provisions on code of conduct is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.1.27 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to code of conduct and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

18.1.28 The objective of these provisions on code of conduct is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.1.29 The objective of these provisions on code of conduct is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

18.1.30 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

18.1.31 The Company recognises that code of conduct has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

18.1.32 The Company recognises that code of conduct has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.1.33 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.2 Definitions and Interpretation

18.2.1 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "code of conduct" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

18.2.2 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.2.4 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

18.2.5 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "code of conduct" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.2.6 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.2.7 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

18.2.8 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

18.2.9 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to code of conduct.

18.2.10 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "code of conduct" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.2.11 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.2.12 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

18.2.13 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

18.2.14 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to code of conduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "code of conduct" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

18.2.15 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

18.2.16 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.2.17 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "code of conduct" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.2.18 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to code of conduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

18.2.19 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

18.2.20 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

18.2.21 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.2.22 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.2.23 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

18.2.24 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

18.2.25 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "code of conduct" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

18.2.26 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "code of conduct" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

18.2.27 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.2.28 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.2.29 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "code of conduct" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

18.2.30 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

18.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.2.32 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "code of conduct" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

18.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

18.3 Eligibility and Applicability

18.3.1 Eligibility for code of conduct shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

18.3.2 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.3.3 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.3.4 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.3.5 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

18.3.6 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.3.7 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for code of conduct restricted until the matter is concluded.

18.3.8 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on code of conduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

18.3.10 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.3.11 Eligibility for code of conduct shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.3.12 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

18.3.13 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.3.15 Eligibility for code of conduct shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

18.3.16 Eligibility for code of conduct shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.3.17 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on code of conduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.3.19 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on code of conduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.3.20 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on code of conduct. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Eligibility for code of conduct shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

18.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for code of conduct restricted until the matter is concluded.

18.3.22 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for code of conduct restricted until the matter is concluded. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.3.23 Eligibility for code of conduct shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

18.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Eligibility for code of conduct shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

18.3.25 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for code of conduct restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.3.26 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.3.27 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on code of conduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility for code of conduct shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

18.3.28 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for code of conduct restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.3.29 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.3.30 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on code of conduct.

18.3.31 Eligibility for code of conduct shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.3.32 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

18.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for code of conduct restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.4 Responsibilities of Employees

18.4.1 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of code of conduct as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of code of conduct as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.4.3 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to code of conduct and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.4.4 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to code of conduct and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

18.4.5 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of code of conduct as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.4.7 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of code of conduct as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.4.8 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.4.9 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on code of conduct and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with code of conduct.

18.4.10 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to code of conduct and shall not withhold material facts. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of code of conduct as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

18.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.4.12 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.4.13 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on code of conduct and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

18.4.14 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

18.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

18.4.16 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

18.4.17 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.4.18 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to code of conduct and shall not withhold material facts. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

18.4.19 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on code of conduct and shall comply with them at all times. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

18.4.20 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to code of conduct and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.4.21 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.4.22 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.4.23 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of code of conduct as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

18.4.24 The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

18.4.25 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with code of conduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.4.27 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

18.4.28 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with code of conduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The staff member shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

18.4.29 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on code of conduct and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.4.30 The staff member shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

18.4.31 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

18.4.32 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.4.33 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with code of conduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

18.5.1 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on code of conduct and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to code of conduct within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

18.5.3 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to code of conduct to the HR Director without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

18.5.4 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.5.5 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on code of conduct and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

18.5.6 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on code of conduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.5.7 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.5.8 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on code of conduct and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to code of conduct within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

18.5.9 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to code of conduct to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

18.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to code of conduct to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on code of conduct and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

18.5.11 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on code of conduct and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

18.5.12 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.5.13 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on code of conduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.5.14 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to code of conduct to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on code of conduct and applies them consistently.

18.5.15 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on code of conduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

18.5.16 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.5.17 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on code of conduct and applies them consistently. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

18.5.18 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on code of conduct and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

18.5.19 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on code of conduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

18.5.20 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

18.5.21 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.5.22 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to code of conduct within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

18.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

18.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on code of conduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.5.25 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to code of conduct within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on code of conduct and applies them consistently.

18.5.26 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to code of conduct to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on code of conduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.5.28 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on code of conduct and applies them consistently.

18.5.29 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to code of conduct within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

18.5.30 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on code of conduct and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.5.31 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to code of conduct within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

18.5.32 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to code of conduct within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to code of conduct to the HR Director without undue delay.

18.5.33 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on code of conduct and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

18.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with code of conduct in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.6.2 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to code of conduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.6.3 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

18.6.4 HR shall respond to every written query on code of conduct within 2 working days of receipt. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for code of conduct and shall make them available to all employees.

18.6.5 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to code of conduct.

18.6.6 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to code of conduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.6.7 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for code of conduct and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.6.8 HR shall respond to every written query on code of conduct within 5 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to code of conduct and on the applicable legal requirements.

18.6.9 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with code of conduct in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.6.10 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with code of conduct in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to code of conduct.

18.6.11 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for code of conduct and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

18.6.12 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to code of conduct and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

18.6.13 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for code of conduct and shall make them available to all employees.

18.6.14 HR shall respond to every written query on code of conduct within 10 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.6.15 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to code of conduct and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

18.6.16 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with code of conduct in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.6.17 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with code of conduct in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.6.18 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.6.19 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with code of conduct in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

18.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to code of conduct.

18.6.21 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to code of conduct.

18.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to code of conduct and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.6.23 HR shall respond to every written query on code of conduct within 15 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

18.6.24 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for code of conduct and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.6.25 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to code of conduct.

18.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on code of conduct within 30 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to code of conduct and on the applicable legal requirements.

18.6.27 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for code of conduct and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.6.28 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to code of conduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.6.29 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to code of conduct and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.6.30 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for code of conduct and shall make them available to all employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with code of conduct in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

18.6.31 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

18.6.32 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.6.33 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

18.7 Procedure and Process Steps

18.7.1 The employee shall initiate the process relating to code of conduct by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

18.7.2 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The employee shall initiate the process relating to code of conduct by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team.

18.7.3 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.7.4 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

18.7.5 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 7 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.7.6 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

18.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.7.8 The employee shall initiate the process relating to code of conduct by submitting the prescribed form to the Head of Department.

18.7.9 The employee shall initiate the process relating to code of conduct by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

18.7.10 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.7.11 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.7.12 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

18.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.7.14 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.7.15 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.7.16 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 10 working days of receiving it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

18.7.17 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

18.7.18 The employee shall initiate the process relating to code of conduct by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.7.19 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.7.20 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

18.7.21 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.7.22 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.7.23 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.7.24 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

18.7.25 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

18.7.26 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.7.27 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

18.7.28 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

18.7.29 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

18.7.30 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.7.31 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.7.32 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.7.33 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

18.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

18.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to code of conduct that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

18.8.2 Records relating to code of conduct shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. All documents relating to code of conduct shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

18.8.3 All documents relating to code of conduct shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.8.4 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to code of conduct that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.8.5 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to code of conduct that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Records relating to code of conduct shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years.

18.8.6 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to code of conduct that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

18.8.7 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.8.8 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.8.9 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.8.10 Records relating to code of conduct shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.8.11 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to code of conduct that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.8.12 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to code of conduct that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.8.13 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

18.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.8.15 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.8.16 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.8.17 All documents relating to code of conduct shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

18.8.18 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

18.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to code of conduct that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

18.8.20 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.8.21 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.8.23 Records relating to code of conduct shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to code of conduct that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.8.25 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

18.8.26 Records relating to code of conduct shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.8.27 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.8.28 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.8.29 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

18.8.30 Records relating to code of conduct shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

18.8.32 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

18.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

18.9.1 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.9.2 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.9.3 Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.9.4 Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

18.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

18.9.7 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

18.9.8 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.9.9 Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.9.10 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

18.9.11 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

18.9.12 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

18.9.13 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.9.14 Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.9.15 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

18.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.9.17 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

18.9.18 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.9.19 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

18.9.20 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.9.22 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

18.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.9.24 Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

18.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

18.9.27 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.9.28 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.9.29 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

18.9.30 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

18.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.9.33 Exceptions to the provisions on code of conduct may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

18.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on code of conduct shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

18.10.2 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to code of conduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.10.3 Compliance with the provisions on code of conduct shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

18.10.4 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.10.5 Where an external regulator requests information concerning code of conduct, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

18.10.6 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where an external regulator requests information concerning code of conduct, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

18.10.7 Compliance with the provisions on code of conduct shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where an external regulator requests information concerning code of conduct, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

18.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where an external regulator requests information concerning code of conduct, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

18.10.9 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.10.10 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to code of conduct. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

18.10.12 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to code of conduct. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.10.13 Compliance with the provisions on code of conduct shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

18.10.14 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

18.10.15 Where an external regulator requests information concerning code of conduct, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.10.16 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to code of conduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

18.10.17 Compliance data relating to code of conduct shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.10.18 An internal audit of code of conduct shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Compliance data relating to code of conduct shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

18.10.20 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to code of conduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.10.21 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

18.10.22 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.10.23 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to code of conduct.

18.10.24 Compliance data relating to code of conduct shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

18.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.10.26 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to code of conduct. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.10.27 Compliance data relating to code of conduct shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

18.10.28 Compliance with the provisions on code of conduct shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

18.10.29 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.10.30 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to code of conduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.10.31 Where an external regulator requests information concerning code of conduct, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

18.10.32 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to code of conduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.10.33 Compliance with the provisions on code of conduct shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An internal audit of code of conduct shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

18.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

18.11.1 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

18.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.11.3 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.11.4 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.11.5 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to code of conduct shall be treated as serious misconduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

18.11.6 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.11.7 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to code of conduct shall be treated as serious misconduct.

18.11.8 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to code of conduct shall be treated as serious misconduct. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.11.9 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

18.11.10 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

18.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

18.11.12 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

18.11.13 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

18.11.14 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on code of conduct may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.11.16 A failure to comply with the provisions on code of conduct may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.11.17 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

18.11.18 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on code of conduct may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

18.11.20 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to code of conduct shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

18.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

18.11.22 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to code of conduct shall be treated as serious misconduct.

18.11.23 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to code of conduct shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.11.24 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

18.11.25 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to code of conduct shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

18.11.26 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.11.29 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

18.11.30 A failure to comply with the provisions on code of conduct may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.11.31 A failure to comply with the provisions on code of conduct may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.11.32 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to code of conduct shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.11.33 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to code of conduct shall be treated as serious misconduct.

18.12 Review and Amendment

18.12.1 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.12.2 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.12.3 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

18.12.4 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

18.12.5 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.12.6 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect.

18.12.7 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

18.12.8 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

18.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

18.12.11 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

18.12.12 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.12.13 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

18.12.14 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.12.15 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

18.12.16 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.12.17 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

18.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect.

18.12.19 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect.

18.12.20 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

18.12.21 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

18.12.22 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

18.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

18.12.24 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to code of conduct made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

18.12.25 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

18.12.26 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

18.12.27 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

18.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

18.12.29 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

18.12.30 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on code of conduct through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

18.12.31 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

18.12.32 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

18.12.33 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to code of conduct, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

Chapter 19

Conflict of Interest

19.1 Purpose and Scope

19.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conflict of interest. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.1.2 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

19.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.1.4 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conflict of interest and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

19.1.5 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.1.6 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

19.1.7 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conflict of interest and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.1.8 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.1.9 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conflict of interest. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

19.1.10 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.1.11 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conflict of interest.

19.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conflict of interest. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

19.1.13 The objective of these provisions on conflict of interest is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.1.14 The Company recognises that conflict of interest has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.1.15 The objective of these provisions on conflict of interest is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.1.16 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conflict of interest and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

19.1.17 The objective of these provisions on conflict of interest is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

19.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.1.19 The objective of these provisions on conflict of interest is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.1.20 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.1.21 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

19.1.22 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conflict of interest. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.1.23 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conflict of interest and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.1.24 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.1.25 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.1.26 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

19.1.27 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conflict of interest. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

19.1.28 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.1.29 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.1.30 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.1.31 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conflict of interest and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

19.1.32 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to conflict of interest and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on conflict of interest. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.2 Definitions and Interpretation

19.2.1 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.2.2 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

19.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "conflict of interest" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

19.2.4 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.2.5 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.2.6 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "conflict of interest" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

19.2.7 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

19.2.8 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

19.2.9 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.2.10 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.2.11 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

19.2.12 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.2.13 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.2.14 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.2.15 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to conflict of interest. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

19.2.17 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.2.18 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to conflict of interest. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

19.2.20 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to conflict of interest. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

19.2.21 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.2.22 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to conflict of interest. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.2.23 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.2.24 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

19.2.25 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to conflict of interest.

19.2.26 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.2.27 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

19.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

19.2.29 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to conflict of interest. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "conflict of interest" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

19.2.32 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

19.2.33 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

19.3 Eligibility and Applicability

19.3.1 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conflict of interest restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.3.2 Eligibility for conflict of interest shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.3.3 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.3.4 Eligibility for conflict of interest shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.3.5 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.3.6 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conflict of interest restricted until the matter is concluded.

19.3.7 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conflict of interest restricted until the matter is concluded.

19.3.8 Eligibility for conflict of interest shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.3.9 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conflict of interest. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.3.10 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.3.11 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conflict of interest. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.3.12 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.3.13 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.3.14 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.3.15 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

19.3.16 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.3.17 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.3.18 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conflict of interest. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.3.19 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.3.20 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conflict of interest restricted until the matter is concluded. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.3.21 Eligibility for conflict of interest shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

19.3.22 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

19.3.23 Eligibility for conflict of interest shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

19.3.24 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.3.25 Eligibility for conflict of interest shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.3.26 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conflict of interest. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.3.27 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.3.28 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conflict of interest restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

19.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conflict of interest. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

19.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for conflict of interest restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

19.3.31 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conflict of interest. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.3.32 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

19.3.33 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on conflict of interest.

19.4 Responsibilities of Employees

19.4.1 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

19.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conflict of interest as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.4.3 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conflict of interest.

19.4.4 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.4.5 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conflict of interest and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conflict of interest and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.4.7 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.4.8 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

19.4.9 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conflict of interest.

19.4.10 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The staff member shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

19.4.11 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conflict of interest as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.4.12 The staff member shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.4.13 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Head of Department at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

19.4.14 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.4.15 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.4.16 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conflict of interest and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.4.17 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conflict of interest.

19.4.18 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of conflict of interest as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

19.4.19 The staff member shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.4.20 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conflict of interest and shall comply with them at all times.

19.4.21 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conflict of interest and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.4.22 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conflict of interest and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

19.4.23 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

19.4.24 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conflict of interest and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on conflict of interest and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.4.26 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conflict of interest and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

19.4.27 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conflict of interest and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

19.4.28 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.4.29 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conflict of interest.

19.4.30 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conflict of interest. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.4.31 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with conflict of interest. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

19.4.32 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to conflict of interest and shall not withhold material facts.

19.4.33 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

19.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

19.5.1 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

19.5.2 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conflict of interest and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

19.5.3 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to conflict of interest within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

19.5.4 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.5.5 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.5.6 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.5.7 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.5.8 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conflict of interest and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.5.9 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

19.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

19.5.12 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conflict of interest and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

19.5.13 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conflict of interest and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.5.14 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.5.15 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conflict of interest and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on conflict of interest.

19.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conflict of interest and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.5.17 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

19.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to conflict of interest within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.5.19 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conflict of interest and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conflict of interest and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

19.5.20 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to conflict of interest within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

19.5.21 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conflict of interest and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.5.22 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on conflict of interest. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

19.5.23 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on conflict of interest.

19.5.24 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.5.25 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

19.5.26 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

19.5.27 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Policy Committee without undue delay. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to conflict of interest to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on conflict of interest and applies them consistently.

19.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.5.30 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conflict of interest and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on conflict of interest.

19.5.31 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on conflict of interest and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.5.32 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to conflict of interest within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

19.6.1 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to conflict of interest. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.6.2 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conflict of interest and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

19.6.3 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conflict of interest in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

19.6.4 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall respond to every written query on conflict of interest within 3 working days of receipt.

19.6.5 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conflict of interest and on the applicable legal requirements.

19.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.6.7 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.6.8 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to conflict of interest. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.6.9 HR shall respond to every written query on conflict of interest within 15 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conflict of interest in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

19.6.10 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to conflict of interest. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for conflict of interest and shall make them available to all employees.

19.6.11 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conflict of interest and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.6.12 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conflict of interest in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.6.13 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

19.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.6.15 HR shall respond to every written query on conflict of interest within 5 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.6.16 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for conflict of interest and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.6.17 HR shall respond to every written query on conflict of interest within 7 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to conflict of interest.

19.6.18 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to conflict of interest.

19.6.19 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conflict of interest and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.6.20 HR shall respond to every written query on conflict of interest within 3 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to conflict of interest.

19.6.21 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.6.22 HR shall respond to every written query on conflict of interest within 15 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.6.23 HR shall respond to every written query on conflict of interest within 5 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.6.24 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.6.25 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conflict of interest in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

19.6.26 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for conflict of interest and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conflict of interest in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

19.6.27 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.6.28 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conflict of interest and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.6.29 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with conflict of interest in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.6.31 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conflict of interest and on the applicable legal requirements. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.6.32 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to conflict of interest and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.6.33 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

19.7 Procedure and Process Steps

19.7.1 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

19.7.3 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.7.4 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conflict of interest by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.7.5 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

19.7.6 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 14 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

19.7.8 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.7.9 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.7.10 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.7.11 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.7.12 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 10 working days of receiving it.

19.7.13 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

19.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

19.7.15 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

19.7.16 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 5 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.7.18 The employee shall initiate the process relating to conflict of interest by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.7.19 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.7.20 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

19.7.21 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

19.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

19.7.23 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.7.24 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.7.25 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.7.26 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

19.7.27 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

19.7.28 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.7.29 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.7.30 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The employee shall initiate the process relating to conflict of interest by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team.

19.7.31 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 15 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.7.32 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

19.7.33 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it.

19.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

19.8.1 Records relating to conflict of interest shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

19.8.2 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.8.3 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.8.4 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

19.8.6 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

19.8.7 Records relating to conflict of interest shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

19.8.8 Records relating to conflict of interest shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.8.9 All documents relating to conflict of interest shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.8.11 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.8.12 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

19.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.8.14 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

19.8.15 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conflict of interest that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.8.17 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conflict of interest that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

19.8.18 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.8.19 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.8.20 All documents relating to conflict of interest shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.8.21 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Records relating to conflict of interest shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years.

19.8.22 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conflict of interest that is held about them, subject to applicable law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.8.23 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.8.24 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conflict of interest that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

19.8.25 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. All documents relating to conflict of interest shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

19.8.26 Records relating to conflict of interest shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.8.27 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conflict of interest that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.8.28 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conflict of interest that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.8.29 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to conflict of interest that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

19.8.30 All documents relating to conflict of interest shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Records relating to conflict of interest shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

19.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.8.32 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.8.33 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

19.9.1 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

19.9.2 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

19.9.3 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.9.4 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.9.5 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

19.9.6 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

19.9.7 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.9.8 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Exceptions to the provisions on conflict of interest may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

19.9.9 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.9.10 Exceptions to the provisions on conflict of interest may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

19.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.9.12 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.9.13 Exceptions to the provisions on conflict of interest may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

19.9.14 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.9.15 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

19.9.16 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.9.17 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

19.9.18 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.9.19 Exceptions to the provisions on conflict of interest may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

19.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.9.21 Exceptions to the provisions on conflict of interest may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

19.9.22 Exceptions to the provisions on conflict of interest may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.9.23 Exceptions to the provisions on conflict of interest may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice.

19.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.9.25 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.9.26 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.9.27 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.9.28 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.9.29 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.9.30 Exceptions to the provisions on conflict of interest may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

19.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on conflict of interest may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.9.33 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

19.10.1 An internal audit of conflict of interest shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.10.2 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conflict of interest. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.10.3 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conflict of interest. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.10.4 Compliance with the provisions on conflict of interest shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

19.10.5 Compliance data relating to conflict of interest shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conflict of interest.

19.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conflict of interest. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An internal audit of conflict of interest shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

19.10.7 Where an external regulator requests information concerning conflict of interest, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

19.10.9 Compliance with the provisions on conflict of interest shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.10.10 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

19.10.11 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.10.12 Where an external regulator requests information concerning conflict of interest, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.10.13 An internal audit of conflict of interest shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.10.14 An internal audit of conflict of interest shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.10.15 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

19.10.17 An internal audit of conflict of interest shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.10.18 Where an external regulator requests information concerning conflict of interest, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

19.10.20 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conflict of interest. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.10.22 An internal audit of conflict of interest shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.10.23 Compliance data relating to conflict of interest shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.10.24 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.10.25 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conflict of interest. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

19.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning conflict of interest, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.10.27 An internal audit of conflict of interest shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

19.10.28 Compliance data relating to conflict of interest shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Compliance with the provisions on conflict of interest shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

19.10.29 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conflict of interest.

19.10.30 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.10.31 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to conflict of interest.

19.10.32 Compliance with the provisions on conflict of interest shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

19.10.33 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

19.11.1 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.11.2 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

19.11.3 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.11.4 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A failure to comply with the provisions on conflict of interest may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

19.11.5 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to conflict of interest shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

19.11.6 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to conflict of interest shall be treated as serious misconduct.

19.11.7 A failure to comply with the provisions on conflict of interest may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

19.11.8 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A failure to comply with the provisions on conflict of interest may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

19.11.10 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.11.12 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.11.14 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

19.11.15 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A failure to comply with the provisions on conflict of interest may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

19.11.16 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

19.11.17 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

19.11.18 A failure to comply with the provisions on conflict of interest may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.11.19 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.11.20 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

19.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.11.22 A failure to comply with the provisions on conflict of interest may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

19.11.23 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

19.11.24 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.11.25 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.11.26 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

19.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

19.11.28 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to conflict of interest shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.11.29 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to conflict of interest shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. A failure to comply with the provisions on conflict of interest may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

19.11.30 A failure to comply with the provisions on conflict of interest may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

19.11.31 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

19.11.32 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

19.11.33 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

19.12 Review and Amendment

19.12.1 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.12.2 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.12.3 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conflict of interest through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

19.12.5 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

19.12.6 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.12.7 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.12.8 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

19.12.9 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conflict of interest through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect.

19.12.10 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conflict of interest through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.12.11 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

19.12.12 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

19.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

19.12.14 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

19.12.15 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.12.16 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.12.17 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

19.12.18 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

19.12.19 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

19.12.20 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.12.21 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

19.12.22 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to conflict of interest, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

19.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

19.12.24 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

19.12.25 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

19.12.26 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

19.12.27 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

19.12.28 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

19.12.29 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

19.12.30 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to conflict of interest made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on conflict of interest through the

HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

19.12.31 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

19.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

19.12.33 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

Chapter 20

Anti-Harassment and Anti-Bullying

20.1 Purpose and Scope

20.1.1 The objective of these provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.1.2 The Company recognises that anti-harassment and anti-bullying has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.1.3 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.1.4 The Company recognises that anti-harassment and anti-bullying has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

20.1.5 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

20.1.6 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.1.7 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.1.9 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.1.10 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

20.1.11 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.1.12 The objective of these provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

20.1.13 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.1.14 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

20.1.15 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.1.16 The objective of these provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

20.1.17 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.1.19 The Company recognises that anti-harassment and anti-bullying has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.1.20 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.1.21 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

20.1.22 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.1.23 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

20.1.24 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

20.1.25 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

20.1.26 The Company recognises that anti-harassment and anti-bullying has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.1.27 The Company recognises that anti-harassment and anti-bullying has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.1.28 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.1.29 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on anti-harassment and anti-bullying.

20.1.30 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.1.31 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The objective of these provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

20.1.32 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company recognises that anti-harassment and anti-bullying has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

20.1.33 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.2 Definitions and Interpretation

20.2.1 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.2.2 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

20.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.2.4 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

20.2.5 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.2.8 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "anti-harassment and anti-bullying" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.2.9 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.2.10 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.2.11 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying.

20.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.2.13 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "anti-harassment and anti-bullying" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.2.14 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "anti-harassment and anti-bullying" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

20.2.15 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "anti-harassment and anti-bullying" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

20.2.16 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.2.17 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "anti-harassment and anti-bullying" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

20.2.18 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.2.19 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.2.21 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

20.2.22 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying.

20.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "anti-harassment and anti-bullying" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.2.25 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.2.26 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "anti-harassment and anti-bullying" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

20.2.27 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.2.28 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.2.30 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.2.31 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

20.2.32 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

20.2.33 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

20.3 Eligibility and Applicability

20.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

20.3.2 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying.

20.3.3 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

20.3.4 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.3.5 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

20.3.6 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

20.3.8 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

20.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.3.10 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.3.11 Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying.

20.3.12 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

20.3.13 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.3.14 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.3.15 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.3.16 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

20.3.17 Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.3.18 Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.3.19 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

20.3.20 Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.3.21 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.3.22 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

20.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

20.3.24 Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

20.3.25 Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

20.3.26 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.3.27 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

20.3.28 Eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.3.30 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.3.31 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for anti-harassment and anti-bullying restricted until the matter is concluded.

20.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.3.33 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.4 Responsibilities of Employees

20.4.1 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

20.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of anti-harassment and anti-bullying as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

20.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.4.4 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.4.5 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

20.4.6 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.4.7 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

20.4.8 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.4.9 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of anti-harassment and anti-bullying as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.4.10 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall not withhold material facts.

20.4.11 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of anti-harassment and anti-bullying as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with anti-harassment and anti-bullying.

20.4.12 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.4.13 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of anti-harassment and anti-bullying as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.4.14 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall comply with them at all times. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of anti-harassment and anti-bullying as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

20.4.15 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.4.16 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.4.17 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall not withhold material facts.

20.4.18 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall not withhold material facts. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

20.4.19 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.4.20 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall comply with them at all times. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

20.4.21 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of anti-harassment and anti-bullying as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.4.22 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall comply with them at all times. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall not withhold material facts.

20.4.23 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.4.24 The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

20.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall comply with them at all times. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

20.4.26 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.4.27 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

20.4.28 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.4.29 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.4.30 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.4.31 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.4.33 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

20.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

20.5.1 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and applies them consistently.

20.5.2 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.5.3 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

20.5.4 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.5.5 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

20.5.6 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and applies them consistently. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

20.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.5.8 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and applies them consistently.

20.5.9 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

20.5.10 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and applies them consistently.

20.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.5.12 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.5.13 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.5.14 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

20.5.15 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying to the HR Director without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.5.16 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

20.5.17 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.5.18 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.5.19 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

20.5.20 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.5.21 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.5.22 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

20.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.5.24 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.5.25 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

20.5.26 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

20.5.27 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying to the Policy Committee without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.5.28 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

20.5.29 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

20.5.30 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and applies them consistently. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

20.5.31 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying to the HR Director without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

20.5.32 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

20.5.33 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

20.6.1 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.6.2 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with anti-harassment and anti-bullying in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and on the applicable legal requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.6.4 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

20.6.5 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.6.7 HR shall respond to every written query on anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 30 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.6.8 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.6.9 HR shall respond to every written query on anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 14 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

20.6.10 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying.

20.6.11 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.6.12 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.6.13 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

20.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.6.15 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.6.16 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and on the applicable legal requirements.

20.6.18 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.6.19 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for anti-harassment and anti-bullying and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.6.20 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.6.21 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.6.22 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.6.23 HR shall respond to every written query on anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 10 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.6.24 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

20.6.25 HR shall respond to every written query on anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 3 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.6.26 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.6.27 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.6.28 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.6.29 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.6.30 HR shall respond to every written query on anti-harassment and anti-bullying within 7 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

20.6.31 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with anti-harassment and anti-bullying in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

20.6.32 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.6.33 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying and on the applicable legal requirements. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.7 Procedure and Process Steps

20.7.1 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

20.7.2 The employee shall initiate the process relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.7.4 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.7.5 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.7.7 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

20.7.8 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.7.9 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

20.7.10 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.7.11 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.7.12 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

20.7.13 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.7.14 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.7.15 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

20.7.16 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

20.7.18 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.7.19 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The employee shall initiate the process relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team.

20.7.20 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.7.21 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 14 working days of receiving it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.7.22 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 10 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The employee shall initiate the process relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team.

20.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

20.7.24 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 21 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

20.7.26 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

20.7.27 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.7.28 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.7.29 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.7.30 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.7.31 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.7.32 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

20.7.33 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

20.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

20.8.2 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.8.3 All documents relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

20.8.4 Records relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.8.5 All documents relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

20.8.6 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

20.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. All documents relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

20.8.8 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

20.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.8.11 Records relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.8.12 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

20.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

20.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.8.15 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.8.16 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

20.8.17 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.8.18 All documents relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.8.19 Records relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.8.20 All documents relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.8.21 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Records relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

20.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.8.23 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.8.24 Records relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.8.25 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.8.26 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

20.8.27 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.8.28 All documents relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.8.29 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

20.8.30 Records relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

20.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

20.8.32 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.8.33 All documents relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

20.9.1 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

20.9.2 Exceptions to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

20.9.3 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.9.4 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

20.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

20.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

20.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.9.8 Exceptions to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.9.9 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

20.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice.

20.9.11 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.9.12 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

20.9.13 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.9.14 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.9.15 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

20.9.16 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.9.17 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.9.18 Exceptions to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

20.9.20 Exceptions to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.9.21 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.9.22 Exceptions to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.9.23 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

20.9.26 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

20.9.27 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice.

20.9.28 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.9.29 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.9.30 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

20.9.31 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.9.33 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

20.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

20.10.1 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.10.2 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.10.3 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.10.4 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

20.10.5 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Compliance data relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

20.10.6 Compliance with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

20.10.7 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

20.10.8 Where an external regulator requests information concerning anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.10.9 An internal audit of anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.10.10 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.10.11 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

20.10.12 An internal audit of anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.10.13 Compliance data relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.10.14 An internal audit of anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.10.15 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.10.17 Compliance data relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Compliance with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

20.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

20.10.20 An internal audit of anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

20.10.21 An internal audit of anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.10.23 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.10.24 An internal audit of anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Compliance data relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

20.10.25 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

20.10.27 An internal audit of anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.10.28 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.10.29 Compliance data relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.10.30 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where an external regulator requests information concerning anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

20.10.31 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Compliance data relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

20.10.32 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to anti-harassment and anti-bullying. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.10.33 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

20.11.1 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

20.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.11.3 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.11.4 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be treated as serious misconduct.

20.11.5 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be treated as serious misconduct.

20.11.6 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.11.7 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

20.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.11.9 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

20.11.10 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.11.11 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

20.11.12 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.11.13 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

20.11.14 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

20.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

20.11.16 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.11.17 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.11.18 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

20.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

20.11.20 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.11.21 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.11.22 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.11.23 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

20.11.24 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

20.11.25 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.11.26 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.11.27 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

20.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.11.29 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.11.30 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to anti-harassment and anti-bullying shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

20.11.31 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

20.11.32 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.11.33 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

20.12 Review and Amendment

20.12.1 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.12.2 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

20.12.4 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

20.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

20.12.7 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

20.12.8 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect.

20.12.9 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

20.12.10 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

20.12.11 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.12.13 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

20.12.14 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.12.15 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

20.12.16 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

20.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

20.12.18 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

20.12.19 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.12.20 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

20.12.21 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

20.12.22 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

20.12.23 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.12.24 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

20.12.25 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

20.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on anti-harassment and anti-bullying through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

20.12.28 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

20.12.29 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

20.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

20.12.31 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. As an illustration, a request relating to anti-harassment and anti-bullying made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

20.12.32 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

20.12.33 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

Chapter 21

Grievance Handling

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Resolution time	15 working days

21.1 Purpose and Scope

21.1.1 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.1.2 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on grievance handling. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to grievance handling and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

21.1.4 The objective of these provisions on grievance handling is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.1.5 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on grievance handling. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.1.6 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.1.7 The objective of these provisions on grievance handling is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on grievance handling. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.1.9 The Company recognises that grievance handling has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

21.1.10 The Company recognises that grievance handling has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

21.1.11 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.1.12 The objective of these provisions on grievance handling is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.1.13 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on grievance handling. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.1.14 The Company recognises that grievance handling has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.1.15 The objective of these provisions on grievance handling is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

21.1.16 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company recognises that grievance handling has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

21.1.17 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

21.1.19 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.1.20 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on grievance handling. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The objective of these provisions on grievance handling is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

21.1.21 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

21.1.23 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.1.24 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to grievance handling and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.1.25 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to grievance handling and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The objective of these provisions on grievance handling is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

21.1.26 The objective of these provisions on grievance handling is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

21.1.27 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on grievance handling.

21.1.28 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to grievance handling and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.1.29 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on grievance handling. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to grievance handling and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

21.1.30 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.1.31 The Company recognises that grievance handling has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

21.1.32 The objective of these provisions on grievance handling is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.1.33 The objective of these provisions on grievance handling is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

21.2 Definitions and Interpretation

21.2.1 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to grievance handling. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "grievance handling" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

21.2.2 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to grievance handling. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

21.2.5 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.2.6 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

21.2.7 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "grievance handling" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

21.2.8 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.2.9 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.2.10 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to grievance handling. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

21.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

21.2.13 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to grievance handling. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.2.14 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

21.2.15 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

21.2.17 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

21.2.18 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to grievance handling. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

21.2.19 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

21.2.20 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.2.21 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.2.22 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

21.2.23 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.2.24 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

21.2.25 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.2.26 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.2.27 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

21.2.28 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

21.2.29 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.2.30 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "grievance handling" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

21.2.31 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to grievance handling. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

21.2.33 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.3 Eligibility and Applicability

21.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on grievance handling. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for grievance handling restricted until the matter is concluded.

21.3.3 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.3.4 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

21.3.5 Eligibility for grievance handling shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.3.6 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for grievance handling restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.3.8 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.3.10 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for grievance handling restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

21.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for grievance handling restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.3.13 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on grievance handling.

21.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

21.3.15 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on grievance handling. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

21.3.16 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

21.3.17 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

21.3.18 Eligibility for grievance handling shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

21.3.19 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

21.3.20 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on grievance handling. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.3.21 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for grievance handling restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

21.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.3.23 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.3.24 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for grievance handling restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.3.25 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

21.3.26 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for grievance handling restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

21.3.28 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for grievance handling restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.3.29 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for grievance handling restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

21.3.30 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.3.31 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.3.32 Eligibility for grievance handling shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

21.3.33 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

21.4 Responsibilities of Employees

21.4.1 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to grievance handling and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on grievance handling and shall comply with them at all times.

21.4.2 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to grievance handling and shall not withhold material facts.

21.4.3 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of grievance handling as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.4.4 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on grievance handling and shall comply with them at all times.

21.4.5 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with grievance handling. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of grievance handling as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to grievance handling and shall not withhold material facts.

21.4.7 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.4.8 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of grievance handling as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.4.9 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with grievance handling. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of grievance handling as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

21.4.10 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with grievance handling. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.4.11 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to grievance handling and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with grievance handling.

21.4.12 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of grievance handling as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

21.4.13 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on grievance handling and shall comply with them at all times.

21.4.14 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to grievance handling and shall not withhold material facts. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

21.4.15 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

21.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of grievance handling as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

21.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with grievance handling.

21.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of grievance handling as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.4.20 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

21.4.21 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of grievance handling as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.4.22 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with grievance handling. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.4.23 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.4.24 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with grievance handling. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.4.25 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with grievance handling. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The staff member shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

21.4.26 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.4.27 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.4.28 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.4.29 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on grievance handling and shall comply with them at all times. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

21.4.30 The employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

21.4.31 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of grievance handling as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

21.4.32 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to grievance handling and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.4.33 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to grievance handling and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

21.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

21.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on grievance handling. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.5.2 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on grievance handling and applies them consistently.

21.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on grievance handling and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

21.5.4 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.5.5 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on grievance handling. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.5.6 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on grievance handling. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

21.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on grievance handling and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.5.8 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to grievance handling within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

21.5.9 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to grievance handling to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.5.10 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

21.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.5.12 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on grievance handling and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.5.13 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to grievance handling to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

21.5.14 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on grievance handling and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on grievance handling and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.5.16 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to grievance handling within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on grievance handling.

21.5.17 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on grievance handling and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

21.5.18 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on grievance handling and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.5.19 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to grievance handling to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

21.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to grievance handling within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

21.5.21 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.5.22 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on grievance handling. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.5.24 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to grievance handling within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

21.5.25 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on grievance handling and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to grievance handling to the HR Director without undue delay.

21.5.26 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to grievance handling to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

21.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on grievance handling. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to grievance handling to the Policy Committee without undue delay.

21.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to grievance handling to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

21.5.29 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.5.30 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.5.31 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

21.5.32 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on grievance handling. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.5.33 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to grievance handling to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

21.6.1 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for grievance handling and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.6.2 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to grievance handling and on the applicable legal requirements. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

21.6.4 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to grievance handling. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

21.6.5 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for grievance handling and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

21.6.6 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with grievance handling in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to grievance handling.

21.6.7 HR shall respond to every written query on grievance handling within 7 working days of receipt.

21.6.8 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for grievance handling and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. HR shall respond to every written query on grievance handling within 30 working days of receipt.

21.6.9 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to grievance handling and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

21.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for grievance handling and shall make them available to all employees.

21.6.11 HR shall respond to every written query on grievance handling within 10 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.6.12 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to grievance handling. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall respond to every written query on grievance handling within 3 working days of receipt.

21.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to grievance handling and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.6.14 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with grievance handling in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall respond to every written query on grievance handling within 2 working days of receipt.

21.6.15 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.6.16 HR shall respond to every written query on grievance handling within 10 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for grievance handling and shall make them available to all employees.

21.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to grievance handling. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to grievance handling and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

21.6.19 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to grievance handling. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

21.6.21 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.6.22 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with grievance handling in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

21.6.23 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall respond to every written query on grievance handling within 3 working days of receipt.

21.6.24 HR shall respond to every written query on grievance handling within 5 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.6.25 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to grievance handling and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with grievance handling in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

21.6.26 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to grievance handling. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.6.27 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

21.6.28 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.6.29 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with grievance handling in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.6.30 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to grievance handling and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.6.31 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.6.32 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for grievance handling and shall make them available to all employees. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.6.33 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to grievance handling and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.7 Procedure and Process Steps

21.7.1 Resolution time. The Company shall endeavour to resolve every formal grievance within 15 working days of receipt.

21.7.2 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 21 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

21.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.7.4 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 10 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.7.5 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

21.7.6 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 30 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.7.7 The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

21.7.8 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.7.9 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 2 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.7.10 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.7.11 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.7.12 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team.

21.7.14 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.7.15 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

21.7.16 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

21.7.17 The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

21.7.18 The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.7.19 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

21.7.20 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

21.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.7.22 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

21.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

21.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting the prescribed form to the Line Manager. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.7.25 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

21.7.26 The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.7.27 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

21.7.28 The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

21.7.29 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 30 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.7.30 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

21.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.7.32 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.7.33 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

21.7.34 The employee shall initiate the process relating to grievance handling by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

21.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

21.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to grievance handling that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

21.8.2 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.8.3 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.8.4 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

21.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

21.8.6 All documents relating to grievance handling shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

21.8.7 All documents relating to grievance handling shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

21.8.8 All documents relating to grievance handling shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.8.9 Records relating to grievance handling shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

21.8.10 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to grievance handling that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

21.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.8.12 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

21.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

21.8.15 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.8.16 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to grievance handling that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.8.17 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.8.18 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

21.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.8.20 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

21.8.21 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

21.8.22 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. All documents relating to grievance handling shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

21.8.23 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.8.24 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.8.25 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.8.26 Records relating to grievance handling shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.8.27 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.8.28 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to grievance handling that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

21.8.29 All documents relating to grievance handling shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Records relating to grievance handling shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years.

21.8.30 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.8.31 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to grievance handling that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.8.32 All documents relating to grievance handling shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.8.33 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

21.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on grievance handling may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

21.9.2 Exceptions to the provisions on grievance handling may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.9.3 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

21.9.5 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

21.9.6 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.9.7 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

21.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

21.9.9 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.9.10 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on grievance handling may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

21.9.11 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.9.12 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

21.9.13 Exceptions to the provisions on grievance handling may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on grievance handling may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

21.9.15 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.9.16 Exceptions to the provisions on grievance handling may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.9.17 Exceptions to the provisions on grievance handling may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

21.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

21.9.21 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.9.22 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

21.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.9.25 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.9.26 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

21.9.27 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.9.28 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

21.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

21.9.30 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.9.31 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Exceptions to the provisions on grievance handling may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

21.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.9.33 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

21.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

21.10.1 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An internal audit of grievance handling shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

21.10.2 An internal audit of grievance handling shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

21.10.3 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.10.4 An internal audit of grievance handling shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.10.5 Where an external regulator requests information concerning grievance handling, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

21.10.6 Where an external regulator requests information concerning grievance handling, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.10.7 Where an external regulator requests information concerning grievance handling, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

21.10.8 An internal audit of grievance handling shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.10.9 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.10.10 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to grievance handling. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.10.11 An internal audit of grievance handling shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.10.12 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to grievance handling. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.10.13 Where an external regulator requests information concerning grievance handling, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.10.14 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to grievance handling. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

21.10.15 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

21.10.16 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

21.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

21.10.18 An internal audit of grievance handling shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.10.19 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An internal audit of grievance handling shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

21.10.20 Compliance data relating to grievance handling shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

21.10.21 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.10.22 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.10.23 An internal audit of grievance handling shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

21.10.24 Compliance data relating to grievance handling shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.10.26 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to grievance handling. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

21.10.27 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

21.10.28 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.10.29 Compliance data relating to grievance handling shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

21.10.30 Where an external regulator requests information concerning grievance handling, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An internal audit of grievance handling shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

21.10.31 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.10.32 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

21.10.33 Compliance data relating to grievance handling shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

21.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

21.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

21.11.2 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on grievance handling may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.11.4 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to grievance handling shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.11.5 A failure to comply with the provisions on grievance handling may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.11.6 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.11.7 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

21.11.9 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.11.10 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.11.12 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

21.11.13 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

21.11.14 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

21.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.11.17 A failure to comply with the provisions on grievance handling may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.11.18 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.11.19 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

21.11.20 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

21.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.11.22 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

21.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

21.11.24 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to grievance handling shall be treated as serious misconduct.

21.11.25 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.11.26 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

21.11.27 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to grievance handling shall be treated as serious misconduct.

21.11.28 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.11.29 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to grievance handling shall be treated as serious misconduct.

21.11.30 A failure to comply with the provisions on grievance handling may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

21.11.31 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

21.11.32 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

21.11.33 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

21.12 Review and Amendment

21.12.1 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.12.2 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

21.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

21.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

21.12.5 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.12.6 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to grievance handling, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

21.12.7 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.12.8 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.12.9 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

21.12.10 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.12.11 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

21.12.12 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

21.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

21.12.14 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

21.12.15 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.12.16 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

21.12.17 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.12.18 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

21.12.19 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

21.12.20 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.12.21 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.12.22 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.12.23 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

21.12.24 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

21.12.25 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.12.26 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on grievance handling through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect.

21.12.27 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to grievance handling made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

21.12.29 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

21.12.30 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

21.12.31 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

21.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

21.12.33 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

Chapter 22

Disciplinary Procedures

22.1 Purpose and Scope

22.1.1 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to disciplinary procedures and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company recognises that disciplinary procedures has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

22.1.2 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.1.3 The objective of these provisions on disciplinary procedures is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.1.4 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

22.1.5 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on disciplinary procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.1.6 The Company recognises that disciplinary procedures has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

22.1.7 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on disciplinary procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.1.8 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.1.9 The objective of these provisions on disciplinary procedures is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.1.10 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

22.1.11 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to disciplinary procedures and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

22.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on disciplinary procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.1.13 The objective of these provisions on disciplinary procedures is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

22.1.14 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.1.15 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

22.1.16 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.1.17 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

22.1.18 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on disciplinary procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.1.19 The Company recognises that disciplinary procedures has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

22.1.20 The Company recognises that disciplinary procedures has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.1.21 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on disciplinary procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

22.1.22 The Company recognises that disciplinary procedures has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.1.23 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

22.1.24 The objective of these provisions on disciplinary procedures is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.1.25 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

22.1.26 The objective of these provisions on disciplinary procedures is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.1.27 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to disciplinary procedures and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

22.1.28 The Company recognises that disciplinary procedures has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

22.1.29 The objective of these provisions on disciplinary procedures is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.1.30 The objective of these provisions on disciplinary procedures is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

22.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.1.32 The Company recognises that disciplinary procedures has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.1.33 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on disciplinary procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

22.2 Definitions and Interpretation

22.2.1 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.2.2 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

22.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

22.2.4 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

22.2.5 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.2.6 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

22.2.7 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

22.2.8 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "disciplinary procedures" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

22.2.9 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to disciplinary procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.2.10 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

22.2.11 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to disciplinary procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

22.2.12 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to disciplinary procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

22.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

22.2.15 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.2.16 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

22.2.17 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

22.2.18 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

22.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

22.2.20 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to disciplinary procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.2.21 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

22.2.22 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "disciplinary procedures" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.2.23 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.2.24 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to disciplinary procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

22.2.25 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.2.26 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to disciplinary procedures.

22.2.27 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.2.28 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.2.30 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

22.2.31 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

22.2.32 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

22.2.33 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to disciplinary procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.3 Eligibility and Applicability

22.3.1 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

22.3.3 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on disciplinary procedures. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded.

22.3.4 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

22.3.5 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

22.3.6 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.3.7 Eligibility for disciplinary procedures shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

22.3.8 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded.

22.3.9 Eligibility for disciplinary procedures shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

22.3.10 Eligibility for disciplinary procedures shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

22.3.11 Eligibility for disciplinary procedures shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.3.12 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on disciplinary procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.3.13 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded.

22.3.14 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on disciplinary procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.3.15 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.3.16 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded.

22.3.17 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded.

22.3.18 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.3.19 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.3.20 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.3.21 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

22.3.23 Eligibility for disciplinary procedures shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.3.24 Eligibility for disciplinary procedures shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.3.25 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on disciplinary procedures.

22.3.26 Eligibility for disciplinary procedures shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

22.3.27 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

22.3.28 Eligibility for disciplinary procedures shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

22.3.29 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.3.30 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.3.31 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for disciplinary procedures restricted until the matter is concluded.

22.3.32 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

22.3.33 Eligibility for disciplinary procedures shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

22.4 Responsibilities of Employees

22.4.1 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

22.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of disciplinary procedures as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

22.4.4 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.4.5 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to disciplinary procedures and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

22.4.7 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

22.4.8 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.4.9 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of disciplinary procedures as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

22.4.10 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on disciplinary procedures and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.4.11 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of disciplinary procedures as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

22.4.12 The staff member shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.4.13 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.4.14 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of disciplinary procedures as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

22.4.15 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of disciplinary procedures as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.4.16 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.4.17 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to disciplinary procedures and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

22.4.18 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to disciplinary procedures and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.4.19 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to disciplinary procedures and shall not withhold material facts.

22.4.20 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to disciplinary procedures and shall not withhold material facts.

22.4.21 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to disciplinary procedures and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.4.22 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

22.4.23 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

22.4.24 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of disciplinary procedures as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

22.4.25 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with disciplinary procedures.

22.4.26 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.4.27 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on disciplinary procedures and shall comply with them at all times. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.4.28 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

22.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of disciplinary procedures as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.4.30 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of disciplinary procedures as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on disciplinary procedures and shall comply with them at all times.

22.4.31 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

22.4.32 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with disciplinary procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

22.4.33 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on disciplinary procedures and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

22.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on disciplinary procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.5.2 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to disciplinary procedures to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.5.3 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.5.4 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on disciplinary procedures and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.5.5 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on disciplinary procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

22.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to disciplinary procedures within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on disciplinary procedures and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

22.5.8 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to disciplinary procedures within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to disciplinary procedures to the HR Director without undue delay.

22.5.9 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.5.10 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.5.11 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to disciplinary procedures within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

22.5.12 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

22.5.13 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to disciplinary procedures to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

22.5.14 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to disciplinary procedures within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

22.5.15 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to disciplinary procedures within 15 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.5.16 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on disciplinary procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.5.17 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.5.18 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to disciplinary procedures to the HR Director without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to disciplinary procedures within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

22.5.20 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

22.5.21 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

22.5.22 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on disciplinary procedures and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

22.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on disciplinary procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.5.24 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to disciplinary procedures within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.5.25 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to disciplinary procedures to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.5.26 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to disciplinary procedures within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.5.27 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on disciplinary procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.5.28 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.5.29 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to disciplinary procedures to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

22.5.30 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to disciplinary procedures to the HR Director without undue delay.

22.5.31 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to disciplinary procedures within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on disciplinary procedures and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

22.5.32 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on disciplinary procedures and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

22.5.33 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on disciplinary procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

22.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

22.6.1 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to disciplinary procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

22.6.2 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

22.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

22.6.4 HR shall respond to every written query on disciplinary procedures within 21 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.6.5 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with disciplinary procedures in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

22.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with disciplinary procedures in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.6.8 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to disciplinary procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

22.6.9 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.6.10 HR shall respond to every written query on disciplinary procedures within 7 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

22.6.11 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for disciplinary procedures and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.6.12 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with disciplinary procedures in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall respond to every written query on disciplinary procedures within 10 working days of receipt.

22.6.13 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for disciplinary procedures and shall make them available to all employees.

22.6.14 HR shall respond to every written query on disciplinary procedures within 7 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements.

22.6.15 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with disciplinary procedures in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.6.16 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

22.6.17 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with disciplinary procedures in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.6.18 HR shall respond to every written query on disciplinary procedures within 21 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.6.19 HR shall respond to every written query on disciplinary procedures within 7 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.6.20 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.6.21 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to disciplinary procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.6.23 HR shall respond to every written query on disciplinary procedures within 2 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

22.6.24 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.6.25 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with disciplinary procedures in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

22.6.26 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for disciplinary procedures and shall make them available to all employees.

22.6.27 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to disciplinary procedures.

22.6.28 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.6.29 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for disciplinary procedures and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.6.30 HR shall respond to every written query on disciplinary procedures within 7 working days of receipt. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.6.31 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements.

22.6.32 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.6.33 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to disciplinary procedures and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.7 Procedure and Process Steps

22.7.1 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.7.2 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.7.3 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

22.7.4 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.7.6 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 2 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

22.7.7 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.7.8 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 3 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

22.7.9 The employee shall initiate the process relating to disciplinary procedures by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.7.10 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

22.7.11 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.7.12 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

22.7.14 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 10 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.7.15 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.7.16 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

22.7.17 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.7.18 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

22.7.19 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

22.7.20 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 30 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

22.7.22 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

22.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to disciplinary procedures by submitting an HR portal request to the Head of Department. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

22.7.24 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

22.7.25 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 15 working days of receiving it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.7.26 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

22.7.27 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.7.28 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

22.7.30 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to disciplinary procedures by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

22.7.32 The employee shall initiate the process relating to disciplinary procedures by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.7.33 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 21 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

22.8.1 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.8.2 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

22.8.3 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. All documents relating to disciplinary procedures shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

22.8.4 Records relating to disciplinary procedures shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

22.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.8.6 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

22.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law. All documents relating to disciplinary procedures shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

22.8.8 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

22.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. All documents relating to disciplinary procedures shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

22.8.10 Records relating to disciplinary procedures shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

22.8.11 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.8.12 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.8.13 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

22.8.14 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.8.16 All documents relating to disciplinary procedures shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.8.17 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records relating to disciplinary procedures shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years.

22.8.18 Records relating to disciplinary procedures shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

22.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

22.8.20 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.8.21 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

22.8.22 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Records relating to disciplinary procedures shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years.

22.8.23 All documents relating to disciplinary procedures shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.8.24 All documents relating to disciplinary procedures shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.8.25 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.8.26 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

22.8.27 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.8.28 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

22.8.29 All documents relating to disciplinary procedures shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

22.8.30 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

22.8.31 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.8.32 All documents relating to disciplinary procedures shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.8.33 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to disciplinary procedures that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

22.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

22.9.1 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

22.9.2 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

22.9.3 Exceptions to the provisions on disciplinary procedures may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.9.4 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.9.5 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.9.6 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice.

22.9.7 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

22.9.8 Exceptions to the provisions on disciplinary procedures may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.9.9 Exceptions to the provisions on disciplinary procedures may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.9.10 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.9.12 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.9.13 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice.

22.9.14 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

22.9.15 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

22.9.16 Exceptions to the provisions on disciplinary procedures may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

22.9.17 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

22.9.18 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.9.20 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 30 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

22.9.21 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.9.22 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.9.23 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

22.9.24 Exceptions to the provisions on disciplinary procedures may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

22.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on disciplinary procedures may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.9.26 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.9.27 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

22.9.28 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

22.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

22.9.30 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

22.9.31 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

22.9.32 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.9.33 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

22.10.1 An internal audit of disciplinary procedures shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where an external regulator requests information concerning disciplinary procedures, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources.

22.10.2 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to disciplinary procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.10.3 An internal audit of disciplinary procedures shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

22.10.4 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

22.10.5 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

22.10.6 An internal audit of disciplinary procedures shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Compliance data relating to disciplinary procedures shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

22.10.7 Compliance data relating to disciplinary procedures shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.10.8 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to disciplinary procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.10.10 An internal audit of disciplinary procedures shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.10.11 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to disciplinary procedures.

22.10.12 An internal audit of disciplinary procedures shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

22.10.13 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to disciplinary procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.10.14 Compliance with the provisions on disciplinary procedures shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

22.10.15 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to disciplinary procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

22.10.16 Compliance data relating to disciplinary procedures shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.10.17 Where an external regulator requests information concerning disciplinary procedures, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

22.10.18 Compliance with the provisions on disciplinary procedures shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.10.19 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to disciplinary procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.10.20 An internal audit of disciplinary procedures shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.10.21 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

22.10.22 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.10.23 Where an external regulator requests information concerning disciplinary procedures, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.10.24 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

22.10.25 Compliance data relating to disciplinary procedures shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.10.26 Compliance data relating to disciplinary procedures shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

22.10.27 Where an external regulator requests information concerning disciplinary procedures, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to disciplinary procedures.

22.10.28 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.10.29 An internal audit of disciplinary procedures shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on disciplinary procedures shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where an external regulator requests information concerning disciplinary procedures, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

22.10.31 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to disciplinary procedures. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

22.10.32 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

22.10.33 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to disciplinary procedures.

22.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

22.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A failure to comply with the provisions on disciplinary procedures may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

22.11.2 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on disciplinary procedures may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.11.4 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to disciplinary procedures shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A failure to comply with the provisions on disciplinary procedures may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

22.11.5 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.11.6 A failure to comply with the provisions on disciplinary procedures may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

22.11.7 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.11.8 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

22.11.9 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

22.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.11.11 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to disciplinary procedures shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.11.12 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.11.13 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.11.14 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

22.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.11.16 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to disciplinary procedures shall be treated as serious misconduct.

22.11.17 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.11.18 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to disciplinary procedures shall be treated as serious misconduct. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

22.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

22.11.20 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to disciplinary procedures shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.11.21 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to disciplinary procedures shall be treated as serious misconduct. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.11.22 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.11.23 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.11.24 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

22.11.25 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.11.26 A failure to comply with the provisions on disciplinary procedures may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.11.27 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.11.29 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

22.11.30 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to disciplinary procedures shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

22.11.31 A failure to comply with the provisions on disciplinary procedures may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.11.32 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.11.33 A failure to comply with the provisions on disciplinary procedures may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

22.12 Review and Amendment

22.12.1 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on disciplinary procedures through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

22.12.2 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on disciplinary procedures through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

22.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.12.4 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.12.5 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on disciplinary procedures through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect.

22.12.6 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

22.12.7 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.12.8 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

22.12.9 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.12.10 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on disciplinary procedures through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

22.12.11 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on disciplinary procedures through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.12.12 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

22.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.12.14 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

22.12.15 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

22.12.16 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.12.17 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.12.18 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

22.12.19 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.12.20 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on disciplinary procedures through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

22.12.21 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

22.12.22 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on disciplinary procedures through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect.

22.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

22.12.24 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

22.12.25 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.12.26 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

22.12.27 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

22.12.28 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on disciplinary procedures through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

22.12.29 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

22.12.30 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to disciplinary procedures, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

22.12.31 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to disciplinary procedures made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

22.12.32 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

22.12.33 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

Chapter 23

Whistleblowing

23.1 Purpose and Scope

23.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on whistleblowing. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The objective of these provisions on whistleblowing is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

23.1.2 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.1.4 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

23.1.5 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to whistleblowing and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to whistleblowing and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

23.1.7 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.1.8 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.1.9 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

23.1.10 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.1.11 The objective of these provisions on whistleblowing is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

23.1.12 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The objective of these provisions on whistleblowing is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

23.1.13 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on whistleblowing. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to whistleblowing and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

23.1.15 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.1.16 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on whistleblowing. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

23.1.17 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

23.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

23.1.19 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on whistleblowing. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The objective of these provisions on whistleblowing is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

23.1.20 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The objective of these provisions on whistleblowing is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

23.1.21 The Company recognises that whistleblowing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

23.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.1.23 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on whistleblowing.

23.1.24 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.1.25 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.1.26 The Company recognises that whistleblowing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.1.27 The objective of these provisions on whistleblowing is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.1.28 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.1.29 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

23.1.30 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company recognises that whistleblowing has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

23.1.31 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

23.1.32 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.1.33 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.2 Definitions and Interpretation

23.2.1 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.2.2 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.2.3 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

23.2.4 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.2.5 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

23.2.6 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.2.7 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.2.8 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to whistleblowing. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

23.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "whistleblowing" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

23.2.10 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.2.11 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.2.12 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "whistleblowing" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

23.2.13 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "whistleblowing" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

23.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.2.15 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.2.16 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "whistleblowing" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.2.17 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to whistleblowing.

23.2.18 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

23.2.19 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.2.20 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.2.21 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

23.2.22 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to whistleblowing. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to whistleblowing.

23.2.24 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to whistleblowing.

23.2.25 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to whistleblowing.

23.2.26 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.2.27 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to whistleblowing.

23.2.28 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.2.30 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

23.2.31 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.2.32 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "whistleblowing" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.2.33 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to whistleblowing. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.3 Eligibility and Applicability

23.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on whistleblowing.

23.3.2 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

23.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

23.3.4 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for whistleblowing restricted until the matter is concluded.

23.3.6 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on whistleblowing. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.3.8 Eligibility for whistleblowing shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

23.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on whistleblowing. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.3.11 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

23.3.12 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on whistleblowing. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.3.13 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for whistleblowing restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.3.14 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

23.3.15 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

23.3.16 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

23.3.17 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Eligibility for whistleblowing shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

23.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

23.3.19 Eligibility for whistleblowing shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

23.3.20 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on whistleblowing. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

23.3.21 Eligibility for whistleblowing shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

23.3.22 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on whistleblowing.

23.3.23 Eligibility for whistleblowing shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

23.3.24 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.3.25 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

23.3.26 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on whistleblowing. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for whistleblowing restricted until the matter is concluded.

23.3.27 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility for whistleblowing shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

23.3.28 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.3.29 Eligibility for whistleblowing shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.3.30 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for whistleblowing restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.3.31 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on whistleblowing. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.3.32 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting

Manager. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

23.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for whistleblowing restricted until the matter is concluded. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final.

23.4 Responsibilities of Employees

23.4.1 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

23.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

23.4.3 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The concerned employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

23.4.4 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on whistleblowing and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.4.5 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with whistleblowing. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

23.4.6 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.4.7 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on whistleblowing and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.4.8 The employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

23.4.9 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to whistleblowing and shall not withhold material facts.

23.4.10 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to whistleblowing and shall not withhold material facts. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

23.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

23.4.12 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on whistleblowing and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

23.4.13 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to whistleblowing and shall not withhold material facts.

23.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of whistleblowing as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.4.15 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of whistleblowing as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

23.4.16 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to whistleblowing and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

23.4.17 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with whistleblowing. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.4.18 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.4.19 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on whistleblowing and shall comply with them at all times.

23.4.20 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to whistleblowing and shall not withhold material facts.

23.4.21 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.4.22 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

23.4.23 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with whistleblowing. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.4.24 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on whistleblowing and shall comply with them at all times. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

23.4.26 An eligible employee shall submit a written request to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.4.27 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with whistleblowing. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.4.28 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.4.29 The staff member shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on whistleblowing and shall comply with them at all times.

23.4.30 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.4.31 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of whistleblowing as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

23.4.32 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with whistleblowing. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of whistleblowing as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

23.4.33 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

23.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

23.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on whistleblowing. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

23.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

23.5.4 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to whistleblowing to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.5.5 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to whistleblowing within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

23.5.6 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to whistleblowing to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

23.5.7 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on whistleblowing. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.5.8 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to whistleblowing within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

23.5.9 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to whistleblowing within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

23.5.10 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.5.11 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to whistleblowing to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

23.5.12 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.5.13 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

23.5.14 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to whistleblowing to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.5.16 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.5.17 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on whistleblowing and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

23.5.18 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.5.19 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to whistleblowing to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

23.5.20 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.5.21 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.5.22 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on whistleblowing and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.5.23 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

23.5.24 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

23.5.25 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.5.26 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on whistleblowing. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.5.27 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on whistleblowing and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.5.28 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to whistleblowing within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.5.30 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on whistleblowing. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.5.31 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on whistleblowing and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

23.5.32 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.5.33 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on whistleblowing and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

23.6.1 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for whistleblowing and shall make them available to all employees.

23.6.2 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.6.4 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to whistleblowing. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

23.6.5 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

23.6.6 HR shall respond to every written query on whistleblowing within 21 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.6.7 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.6.8 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.6.9 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.6.10 HR shall respond to every written query on whistleblowing within 5 working days of receipt. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for whistleblowing and shall make them available to all employees.

23.6.11 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to whistleblowing. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.6.12 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for whistleblowing and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.6.13 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

23.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for whistleblowing and shall make them available to all employees.

23.6.15 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.6.16 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

23.6.17 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for whistleblowing and shall make them available to all employees.

23.6.18 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.6.19 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements.

23.6.20 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

23.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on whistleblowing within 21 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

23.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

23.6.23 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for whistleblowing and shall make them available to all employees.

23.6.24 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.6.25 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with whistleblowing in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.6.26 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to whistleblowing. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

23.6.27 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.6.28 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with whistleblowing in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

23.6.29 HR shall respond to every written query on whistleblowing within 10 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to whistleblowing.

23.6.30 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for whistleblowing and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements.

23.6.31 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

23.6.32 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for whistleblowing and shall make them available to all employees.

23.6.33 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to whistleblowing and on the applicable legal requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

23.7 Procedure and Process Steps

23.7.1 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

23.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

23.7.3 The employee shall initiate the process relating to whistleblowing by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.7.4 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

23.7.5 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.7.6 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

23.7.7 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 30 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.7.8 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.7.9 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.7.10 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 15 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.7.11 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.7.12 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

23.7.13 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.7.14 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 5 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

23.7.15 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.7.16 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 3 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.7.17 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

23.7.18 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

23.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to whistleblowing by submitting a written request to the Line Manager. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

23.7.20 The employee shall initiate the process relating to whistleblowing by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

23.7.21 The employee shall initiate the process relating to whistleblowing by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.7.22 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.7.23 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 10 working days of receiving it.

23.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to whistleblowing by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.7.25 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

23.7.26 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

23.7.27 The employee shall initiate the process relating to whistleblowing by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

23.7.28 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

23.7.29 The employee shall initiate the process relating to whistleblowing by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.7.30 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.7.31 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

23.7.33 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

23.8.1 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.8.2 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.8.3 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.8.4 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.8.5 All documents relating to whistleblowing shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.8.6 Records relating to whistleblowing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

23.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

23.8.8 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to whistleblowing that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.8.9 Records relating to whistleblowing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

23.8.10 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.8.11 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.8.12 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to whistleblowing that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.8.14 All documents relating to whistleblowing shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to whistleblowing that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

23.8.15 Records relating to whistleblowing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

23.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

23.8.17 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.8.18 All documents relating to whistleblowing shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Records relating to whistleblowing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

23.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to whistleblowing that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

23.8.20 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

23.8.21 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to whistleblowing that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.8.22 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.8.23 Records relating to whistleblowing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

23.8.24 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to whistleblowing that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.8.25 Records relating to whistleblowing shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

23.8.26 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.8.27 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.8.28 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

23.8.29 All documents relating to whistleblowing shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.8.30 All documents relating to whistleblowing shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.8.31 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. All documents relating to whistleblowing shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

23.8.32 All documents relating to whistleblowing shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.8.33 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

23.9.1 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.9.2 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

23.9.3 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

23.9.4 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 15 working days' written notice. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

23.9.5 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Exceptions to the provisions on whistleblowing may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

23.9.6 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.9.7 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

23.9.8 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

23.9.9 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.9.10 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

23.9.12 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.9.13 Exceptions to the provisions on whistleblowing may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

23.9.14 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.9.15 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.9.16 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.9.17 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.9.18 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on whistleblowing may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

23.9.19 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

23.9.20 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.9.21 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.9.22 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions that affect more than 30 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

23.9.23 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.9.24 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on whistleblowing may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.9.26 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

23.9.27 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.9.28 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

23.9.29 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.9.30 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice.

23.9.31 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.9.33 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

23.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

23.10.1 Compliance data relating to whistleblowing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

23.10.2 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.10.3 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to whistleblowing. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.10.4 Compliance data relating to whistleblowing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

23.10.5 An internal audit of whistleblowing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.10.6 Where an external regulator requests information concerning whistleblowing, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.10.7 An internal audit of whistleblowing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.10.8 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Compliance with the provisions on whistleblowing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

23.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to whistleblowing. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.10.10 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.10.12 Compliance with the provisions on whistleblowing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.10.13 Compliance data relating to whistleblowing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.10.14 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.10.15 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to whistleblowing.

23.10.16 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.10.17 Where an external regulator requests information concerning whistleblowing, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to whistleblowing. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.10.19 Compliance with the provisions on whistleblowing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.10.20 Compliance with the provisions on whistleblowing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

23.10.21 Compliance with the provisions on whistleblowing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to whistleblowing.

23.10.22 An internal audit of whistleblowing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

23.10.23 Where an external regulator requests information concerning whistleblowing, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

23.10.24 Compliance data relating to whistleblowing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

23.10.25 Compliance data relating to whistleblowing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

23.10.26 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to whistleblowing. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.10.27 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

23.10.28 Compliance with the provisions on whistleblowing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Compliance data relating to whistleblowing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

23.10.29 Compliance with the provisions on whistleblowing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.10.30 Compliance with the provisions on whistleblowing shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An internal audit of whistleblowing shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

23.10.31 Where an external regulator requests information concerning whistleblowing, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.10.32 Compliance data relating to whistleblowing shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

23.10.33 Where an external regulator requests information concerning whistleblowing, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

23.11.1 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to whistleblowing shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.11.3 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

23.11.4 A failure to comply with the provisions on whistleblowing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.11.5 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

23.11.6 A failure to comply with the provisions on whistleblowing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.11.7 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

23.11.8 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.11.9 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.11.10 A failure to comply with the provisions on whistleblowing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

23.11.11 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

23.11.12 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

23.11.13 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

23.11.14 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

23.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on whistleblowing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.11.16 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.11.17 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

23.11.18 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

23.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

23.11.20 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to whistleblowing shall be treated as serious misconduct.

23.11.21 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to whistleblowing shall be treated as serious misconduct.

23.11.22 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

23.11.23 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

23.11.24 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to whistleblowing shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

23.11.25 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.11.26 A failure to comply with the provisions on whistleblowing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.11.27 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

23.11.28 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

23.11.29 A failure to comply with the provisions on whistleblowing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

23.11.30 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to whistleblowing shall be treated as serious misconduct.

23.11.31 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.11.32 A failure to comply with the provisions on whistleblowing may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

23.11.33 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

23.12 Review and Amendment

23.12.1 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.12.2 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on whistleblowing through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.12.3 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

23.12.4 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

23.12.5 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.12.6 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

23.12.7 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

23.12.8 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on whistleblowing through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

23.12.9 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on whistleblowing through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

23.12.10 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.12.11 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

23.12.12 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. As an illustration, a request relating to whistleblowing made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document

Control section of this Manual.

23.12.13 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on whistleblowing through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect.

23.12.14 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

23.12.15 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to whistleblowing, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

23.12.16 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

23.12.17 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on whistleblowing through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.12.18 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail.

23.12.19 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on whistleblowing through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

23.12.20 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

23.12.21 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on whistleblowing through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

23.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.12.23 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

23.12.24 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on whistleblowing through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

23.12.25 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

23.12.26 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

23.12.27 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

23.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.12.31 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

23.12.32 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

23.12.33 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

Chapter 24

Health and Safety

24.1 Purpose and Scope

24.1.1 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on health and safety. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.1.2 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

24.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to health and safety and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

24.1.4 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on health and safety. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.1.5 The objective of these provisions on health and safety is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

24.1.6 The objective of these provisions on health and safety is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

24.1.7 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.1.8 The objective of these provisions on health and safety is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.1.9 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.1.10 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to health and safety and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.1.11 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on health and safety. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.1.13 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.1.14 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.1.15 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.1.16 The Company recognises that health and safety has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on health and safety.

24.1.17 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.1.18 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to health and safety and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

24.1.19 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

24.1.20 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to health and safety and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

24.1.21 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on health and safety. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.1.22 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

24.1.23 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to health and safety and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on health and safety. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.1.25 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on health and safety. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company recognises that health and safety has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

24.1.26 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to health and safety and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

24.1.27 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.1.28 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.1.29 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.1.30 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to health and safety and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

24.1.32 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

24.1.33 The Company recognises that health and safety has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.2 Definitions and Interpretation

24.2.1 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "health and safety" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.2.2 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to health and safety.

24.2.3 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

24.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.2.5 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.2.6 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "health and safety" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.2.7 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to health and safety.

24.2.8 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.2.9 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.2.10 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.2.11 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.2.12 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "health and safety" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

24.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

24.2.14 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.2.15 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

24.2.16 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

24.2.17 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

24.2.18 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to health and safety. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

24.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "health and safety" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.2.21 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to health and safety. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

24.2.22 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to health and safety. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.2.24 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to health and safety. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

24.2.25 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to health and safety. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.2.26 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "health and safety" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.2.27 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.2.29 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.2.30 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

24.2.31 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.2.32 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.3 Eligibility and Applicability

24.3.1 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

24.3.2 Eligibility for health and safety shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.3.3 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

24.3.4 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on health and safety.

24.3.5 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

24.3.6 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.3.7 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.3.8 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.3.9 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.3.10 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on health and safety.

24.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.3.12 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.3.13 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

24.3.14 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on health and safety. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.3.15 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded.

24.3.16 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

24.3.17 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.3.18 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.3.19 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

24.3.21 Eligibility for health and safety shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.3.22 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

24.3.23 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on health and safety. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

24.3.24 Eligibility for health and safety shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

24.3.25 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.3.26 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

24.3.27 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.3.28 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on health and safety. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.3.29 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.3.30 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.3.31 Eligibility for health and safety shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

24.3.32 Eligibility for health and safety shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

24.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for health and safety restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

24.4 Responsibilities of Employees

24.4.1 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on health and safety and shall comply with them at all times.

24.4.2 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of health and safety as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.4.3 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts.

24.4.4 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.4.5 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with health and safety. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on health and safety and shall comply with them at all times.

24.4.7 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts.

24.4.8 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with health and safety. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.4.9 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

24.4.10 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on health and safety and shall comply with them at all times.

24.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.4.12 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on health and safety and shall comply with them at all times. The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

24.4.13 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of health and safety as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

24.4.14 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.4.15 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.4.16 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.4.17 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts.

24.4.18 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.4.19 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.4.20 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.4.21 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on health and safety and shall comply with them at all times.

24.4.22 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of health and safety as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

24.4.23 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of health and safety as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.4.24 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with health and safety. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.4.25 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.4.26 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.4.27 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.4.28 An eligible employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.4.29 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with health and safety.

24.4.30 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

24.4.31 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with health and safety.

24.4.32 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to health and safety and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

24.4.33 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of health and safety as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with health and safety.

24.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

24.5.1 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.5.2 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on health and safety. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on health and safety and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

24.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on health and safety and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.5.4 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to health and safety within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to health and safety to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

24.5.5 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

24.5.6 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on health and safety. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

24.5.7 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.5.8 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to health and safety to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

24.5.9 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on health and safety and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.5.10 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to health and safety within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently.

24.5.12 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to health and safety within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on health and safety.

24.5.13 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to health and safety to the Policy Committee without undue delay. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to health and safety within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

24.5.14 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

24.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on health and safety and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

24.5.16 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.5.17 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on health and safety. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently.

24.5.18 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to health and safety within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

24.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.5.20 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.5.21 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to health and safety within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.5.22 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to health and safety to the HR Director without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.5.23 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on health and safety and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

24.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to health and safety to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.5.25 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

24.5.26 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.5.27 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to health and safety within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

24.5.28 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to health and safety within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

24.5.29 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to health and safety to the HR Director without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.5.30 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.5.31 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on health and safety and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

24.5.32 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on health and safety and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

24.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to health and safety within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

24.6.1 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

24.6.2 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to health and safety. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to health and safety and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.6.4 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to health and safety and on the applicable legal requirements. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.6.5 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for health and safety and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.6.6 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for health and safety and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR shall respond to every written query on health and safety within 2 working days of receipt.

24.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with health and safety in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.6.8 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to health and safety. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.6.9 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to health and safety. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with health and safety in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

24.6.10 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for health and safety and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.6.11 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for health and safety and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

24.6.12 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to health and safety and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.6.13 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

24.6.14 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to health and safety and on the applicable legal requirements.

24.6.15 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for health and safety and shall make them available to all employees.

24.6.16 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with health and safety in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.6.17 HR shall respond to every written query on health and safety within 5 working days of receipt. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.6.18 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to health and safety and on the applicable legal requirements.

24.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.6.20 HR shall respond to every written query on health and safety within 2 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.6.21 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

24.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to health and safety and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.6.23 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for health and safety and shall make them available to all employees.

24.6.24 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to health and safety and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.6.25 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for health and safety and shall make them available to all employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.6.26 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with health and safety in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.6.27 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to health and safety. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.6.28 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to health and safety and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.6.29 HR shall respond to every written query on health and safety within 14 working days of receipt. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.6.30 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

24.6.31 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to health and safety. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.6.32 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with health and safety in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall respond to every written query on health and safety within 5 working days of receipt.

24.6.33 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for health and safety and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.7 Procedure and Process Steps

24.7.1 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 21 working days of receiving it. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

24.7.2 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.7.3 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

24.7.4 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

24.7.5 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.7.6 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it.

24.7.7 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.7.8 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

24.7.9 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 10 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.7.10 The employee shall initiate the process relating to health and safety by submitting the approved template to the Head of Department. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

24.7.11 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

24.7.12 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

24.7.13 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

24.7.14 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

24.7.15 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.7.16 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.7.17 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 14 working days of receiving it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The employee shall initiate the process relating to health and safety by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager.

24.7.18 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The employee shall initiate the process relating to health and safety by submitting a written request to the Head of Department.

24.7.19 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.7.20 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

24.7.22 The employee shall initiate the process relating to health and safety by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

24.7.23 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

24.7.24 The employee shall initiate the process relating to health and safety by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

24.7.25 The employee shall initiate the process relating to health and safety by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

24.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.7.27 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.7.28 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.7.29 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

24.7.30 The employee shall initiate the process relating to health and safety by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to health and safety by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

24.7.33 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

24.8.1 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.8.2 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.8.3 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to health and safety that is held about them, subject to applicable law. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

24.8.4 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

24.8.5 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

24.8.6 All documents relating to health and safety shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to health and safety that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

24.8.8 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.8.9 All documents relating to health and safety shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.8.10 All documents relating to health and safety shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.8.11 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.8.12 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.8.13 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

24.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.8.15 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

24.8.16 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

24.8.17 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to health and safety that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

24.8.18 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to health and safety that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

24.8.19 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

24.8.20 Records relating to health and safety shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

24.8.21 Records relating to health and safety shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.8.22 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

24.8.23 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

24.8.24 Records relating to health and safety shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.8.25 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to health and safety that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

24.8.26 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.8.27 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.8.28 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.8.29 Records relating to health and safety shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting

Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

24.8.30 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

24.8.31 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to health and safety that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. All documents relating to health and safety shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

24.8.32 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to health and safety that is held about them, subject to applicable law. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

24.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

24.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

24.9.1 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

24.9.2 Exceptions to the provisions on health and safety may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.9.3 Exceptions to the provisions on health and safety may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

24.9.4 Exceptions to the provisions on health and safety may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

24.9.5 Exceptions to the provisions on health and safety may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.9.6 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

24.9.7 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.9.9 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.9.10 Exceptions to the provisions on health and safety may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on health and safety may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

24.9.12 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

24.9.13 Exceptions to the provisions on health and safety may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

24.9.14 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.9.15 Exceptions to the provisions on health and safety may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

24.9.16 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.9.17 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.9.18 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.9.19 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.9.20 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.9.21 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.9.22 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

24.9.23 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

24.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

24.9.25 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.9.26 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

24.9.27 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.9.28 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 21 working days' written notice.

24.9.29 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

24.9.30 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.9.31 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

24.9.33 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

24.10.1 Compliance data relating to health and safety shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.10.2 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.10.3 An internal audit of health and safety shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.10.4 Where an external regulator requests information concerning health and safety, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

24.10.5 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.10.6 Compliance data relating to health and safety shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.10.7 Compliance data relating to health and safety shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.10.8 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.10.9 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.10.10 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.10.11 Where an external regulator requests information concerning health and safety, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An internal audit of health and safety shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

24.10.12 Compliance data relating to health and safety shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.10.13 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.10.14 Compliance with the provisions on health and safety shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.10.15 Where an external regulator requests information concerning health and safety, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.10.16 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Compliance data relating to health and safety shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

24.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

24.10.18 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.10.19 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

24.10.20 Compliance data relating to health and safety shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.10.21 An internal audit of health and safety shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

24.10.22 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.10.23 An internal audit of health and safety shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.10.24 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.10.25 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.10.26 Compliance with the provisions on health and safety shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.10.28 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.10.29 Compliance with the provisions on health and safety shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.10.30 Where an external regulator requests information concerning health and safety, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

24.10.31 Compliance with the provisions on health and safety shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.10.32 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to health and safety. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

24.10.33 An internal audit of health and safety shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

24.11.1 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.11.2 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on health and safety may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

24.11.4 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.11.5 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to health and safety shall be treated as serious misconduct.

24.11.6 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

24.11.7 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.11.8 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

24.11.9 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to health and safety shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.11.10 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.11.11 A failure to comply with the provisions on health and safety may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to health and safety shall be treated as serious misconduct.

24.11.12 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.11.13 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A failure to comply with the provisions on health and safety may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

24.11.14 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A failure to comply with the provisions on health and safety may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

24.11.15 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to health and safety shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

24.11.16 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

24.11.17 A failure to comply with the provisions on health and safety may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

24.11.18 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.11.19 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.11.20 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

24.11.21 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to health and safety shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.11.22 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to health and safety made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

24.11.23 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

24.11.24 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.11.25 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.11.26 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

24.11.27 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

24.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

24.11.30 A failure to comply with the provisions on health and safety may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.11.31 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

24.11.32 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.11.33 A failure to comply with the provisions on health and safety may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

24.12 Review and Amendment

24.12.1 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

24.12.2 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

24.12.3 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.12.4 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

24.12.5 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on health and safety through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect.

24.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.12.7 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on health and safety through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.12.8 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

24.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.12.10 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.12.11 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

24.12.12 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

24.12.13 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on health and safety through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect.

24.12.14 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.12.15 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on health and safety through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect.

24.12.16 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on health and safety through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

24.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

24.12.18 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

24.12.19 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

24.12.20 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on health and safety through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

24.12.21 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on health and safety through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect.

24.12.22 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

24.12.23 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

24.12.24 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

24.12.25 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

24.12.26 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to health and safety, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

24.12.27 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

24.12.28 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

24.12.29 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

24.12.30 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on health and safety through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.12.31 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

24.12.32 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

24.12.33 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on health and safety through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect.

Chapter 25

Information Security and Acceptable Use

Chapter at a glance

Key provision	Position
Credential policy	a password change every 90 days

25.1 Purpose and Scope

25.1.1 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

25.1.2 The Company recognises that information security and acceptable use has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

25.1.3 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to information security and acceptable use and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.1.4 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on information security and acceptable use. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.1.5 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. The objective of these provisions on information security and acceptable use is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

25.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

25.1.7 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on information security and acceptable use. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to information security and acceptable use and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

25.1.9 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.1.10 The objective of these provisions on information security and acceptable use is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.1.11 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on information security and acceptable use. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The objective of these provisions on information security and acceptable use is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

25.1.12 The objective of these provisions on information security and acceptable use is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.1.13 The objective of these provisions on information security and acceptable use is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.1.14 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to information security and acceptable use and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.1.15 The objective of these provisions on information security and acceptable use is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

25.1.16 The objective of these provisions on information security and acceptable use is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.1.17 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

25.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

25.1.19 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to information security and acceptable use and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

25.1.20 The Company recognises that information security and acceptable use has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

25.1.21 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.1.22 The Company recognises that information security and acceptable use has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.1.23 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.1.24 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.1.25 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

25.1.26 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

25.1.27 The objective of these provisions on information security and acceptable use is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.1.28 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on information security and acceptable use.

25.1.29 The Company recognises that information security and acceptable use has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to information security and acceptable use and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

25.1.30 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to information security and acceptable use and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

25.1.31 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to information security and acceptable use and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

25.1.32 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.1.33 The Company recognises that information security and acceptable use has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.2 Definitions and Interpretation

25.2.1 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.2.2 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to information security and acceptable use.

25.2.3 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.2.4 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to information security and acceptable use. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

25.2.5 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

25.2.6 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.2.7 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.2.8 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

25.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "information security and acceptable use" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

25.2.10 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.2.11 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

25.2.12 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.2.13 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to information security and acceptable use. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.2.14 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to information security and acceptable use.

25.2.15 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

25.2.16 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

25.2.17 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.2.18 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "information security and acceptable use" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

25.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

25.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "information security and acceptable use" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.2.21 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.2.22 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.2.23 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

25.2.24 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

25.2.25 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "information security and acceptable use" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.2.26 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.2.27 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "information security and acceptable use" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.2.28 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to information security and acceptable use.

25.2.29 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to information security and acceptable use.

25.2.30 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

25.2.31 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

25.2.32 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

25.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.3 Eligibility and Applicability

25.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded.

25.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Eligibility for information security and acceptable use shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

25.3.3 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.3.4 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded.

25.3.5 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.3.7 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use.

25.3.8 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.3.9 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

25.3.10 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

25.3.11 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Eligibility for information security and acceptable use shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

25.3.12 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use.

25.3.13 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.3.14 Eligibility for information security and acceptable use shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.3.15 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.3.16 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.3.17 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

25.3.18 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.3.19 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.3.20 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.3.21 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.3.22 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use.

25.3.23 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use.

25.3.24 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

25.3.25 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.3.26 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on information security and acceptable use.

25.3.27 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.3.28 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

25.3.29 Eligibility for information security and acceptable use shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.3.30 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

25.3.31 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

25.3.32 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.3.33 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for information security and acceptable use restricted until the matter is concluded.

Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.4 Responsibilities of Employees

25.4.1 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on information security and acceptable use and shall comply with them at all times. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

25.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.4.3 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to information security and acceptable use and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of information security and acceptable use as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

25.4.4 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.4.5 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on information security and acceptable use and shall comply with them at all times.

25.4.6 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.4.7 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to information security and acceptable use and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.4.8 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to information security and acceptable use and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.4.9 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of information security and acceptable use as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.4.11 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

25.4.12 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 15 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

25.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to information security and acceptable use and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

25.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of information security and acceptable use as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.4.16 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on information security and acceptable use and shall comply with them at all times. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.4.17 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

25.4.18 An eligible employee shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

25.4.19 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with information security and acceptable use. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

25.4.20 The staff member shall submit an HR portal request to the HR Operations team at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

25.4.21 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to information security and acceptable use and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

25.4.22 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.4.23 The staff member shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.4.24 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of information security and acceptable use as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

25.4.25 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with information security and acceptable use. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

25.4.27 The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Operations team at least 14 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

25.4.28 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of information security and acceptable use as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

25.4.30 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with information security and acceptable use.

25.4.31 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of information security and acceptable use as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.4.32 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.4.33 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of information security and acceptable use as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

25.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

25.5.1 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to information security and acceptable use to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on information security and acceptable use.

25.5.2 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to information security and acceptable use within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

25.5.3 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on information security and acceptable use and applies them consistently. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

25.5.4 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.5.5 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to information security and acceptable use within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on information security and acceptable use and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

25.5.6 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.5.7 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to information security and acceptable use within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to information security and acceptable use to the HR Director without undue delay.

25.5.8 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.5.9 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to information security and acceptable use to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

25.5.10 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

25.5.11 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.5.12 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on information security and acceptable use. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

25.5.13 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on information security and acceptable use. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.5.14 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on information security and acceptable use. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

25.5.15 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

25.5.16 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

25.5.17 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on information security and acceptable use. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

25.5.18 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

25.5.19 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on information security and acceptable use and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

25.5.20 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on information security and acceptable use and applies them consistently.

25.5.21 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to information security and acceptable use within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.5.22 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on information security and acceptable use and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.5.23 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on information security and acceptable use and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on information security and acceptable use. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.5.25 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.5.26 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on information security and acceptable use and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.5.27 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.5.28 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on information security and acceptable use and applies them consistently.

25.5.29 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on information security and acceptable use and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on information security and acceptable use and applies them consistently.

25.5.30 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on information security and acceptable use. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.5.31 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to information security and acceptable use to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

25.5.32 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on information security and acceptable use and applies them consistently.

25.5.33 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

25.6.1 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with information security and acceptable use in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.6.2 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for information security and acceptable use and shall make them available to all employees.

25.6.3 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 15 working days of receipt.

25.6.4 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with information security and acceptable use in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

25.6.5 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with information security and acceptable use in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

25.6.6 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 3 working days of receipt. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.6.7 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with information security and acceptable use in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.6.8 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for information security and acceptable use and shall make them available to all employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

25.6.9 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 21 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.6.10 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to information security and acceptable use and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.6.11 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to information security and acceptable use. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 10 working days of receipt.

25.6.12 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for information security and acceptable use and shall make them available to all employees. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.6.13 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 15 working days of receipt.

25.6.14 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 2 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.6.15 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.6.16 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

25.6.17 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.6.18 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 2 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

25.6.19 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for information security and acceptable use and shall make them available to all employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 2 working days of receipt.

25.6.20 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for information security and acceptable use and shall make them available to all employees.

25.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 14 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with information security and acceptable use in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

25.6.22 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 2 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

25.6.23 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with information security and acceptable use in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.6.24 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.6.25 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 15 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

25.6.26 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to information security and acceptable use and on the applicable legal requirements.

25.6.27 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to information security and acceptable use. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

25.6.29 HR shall respond to every written query on information security and acceptable use within 10 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

25.6.30 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

25.6.31 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to information security and acceptable use and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.6.32 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.6.33 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to information security and acceptable use and on the applicable legal requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

25.7 Procedure and Process Steps

25.7.1 Credential policy. User accounts shall be secured through a password change every 90 days.

25.7.2 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.7.3 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.7.4 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.7.6 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.7.7 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

25.7.8 The employee shall initiate the process relating to information security and acceptable use by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.7.9 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.7.10 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

25.7.11 The employee shall initiate the process relating to information security and acceptable use by submitting the approved template to the HR Business Partner. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.7.12 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 3 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.7.14 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.7.15 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

25.7.16 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.7.18 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 30 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

25.7.19 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.7.20 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 7 working days of receiving it. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

25.7.21 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.7.22 The employee shall initiate the process relating to information security and acceptable use by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

25.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to information security and acceptable use by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.7.24 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

25.7.25 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

25.7.26 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

25.7.27 The employee shall initiate the process relating to information security and acceptable use by submitting a written request to the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

25.7.28 The employee shall initiate the process relating to information security and acceptable use by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.7.29 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

25.7.30 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 10 working days of receiving it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The employee shall initiate the process relating to information security and acceptable use by submitting a written request to the Reporting Manager.

25.7.31 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 21 working days of receiving it.

25.7.32 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.7.33 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.7.34 The employee shall initiate the process relating to information security and acceptable use by submitting a written request to the Head of Department. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

25.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

25.8.1 Records relating to information security and acceptable use shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.8.2 Records relating to information security and acceptable use shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

25.8.3 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.8.4 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

25.8.6 Records relating to information security and acceptable use shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.8.7 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.8.8 All documents relating to information security and acceptable use shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.8.9 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.8.10 Records relating to information security and acceptable use shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

25.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.8.12 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

25.8.13 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.8.14 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.8.15 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. All documents relating to information security and acceptable use shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

25.8.16 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records relating to information security and acceptable use shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years.

25.8.17 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

25.8.18 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

25.8.19 All documents relating to information security and acceptable use shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.8.20 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.8.21 All documents relating to information security and acceptable use shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

25.8.22 All documents relating to information security and acceptable use shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.8.23 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

25.8.24 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

25.8.25 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to information security and acceptable use that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

25.8.26 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.8.27 All documents relating to information security and acceptable use shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

25.8.28 Records relating to information security and acceptable use shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

25.8.29 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.8.30 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.8.31 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

25.8.32 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Records relating to information security and acceptable use shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years.

25.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

25.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on information security and acceptable use may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

25.9.2 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.9.3 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

25.9.4 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

25.9.5 Exceptions to the provisions on information security and acceptable use may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

25.9.6 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

25.9.7 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice.

25.9.8 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

25.9.9 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

25.9.10 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

25.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on information security and acceptable use may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

25.9.12 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

25.9.13 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

25.9.14 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

25.9.15 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.9.17 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.9.18 Exceptions to the provisions on information security and acceptable use may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

25.9.19 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.9.20 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

25.9.21 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.9.22 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 10 working days' written notice. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

25.9.23 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

25.9.24 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

25.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.9.26 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.9.27 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.9.28 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.9.30 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.9.31 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.9.32 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

25.9.33 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

25.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

25.10.1 Compliance with the provisions on information security and acceptable use shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Compliance data relating to information security and acceptable use shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

25.10.2 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.10.3 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.10.4 Compliance with the provisions on information security and acceptable use shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Compliance data relating to information security and acceptable use shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

25.10.5 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to information security and acceptable use. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.10.7 Compliance with the provisions on information security and acceptable use shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

25.10.8 An internal audit of information security and acceptable use shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.10.9 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to information security and acceptable use. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.10.10 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to information security and acceptable use. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Compliance with the provisions on information security and acceptable use shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

25.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.10.12 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

25.10.13 Compliance data relating to information security and acceptable use shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.10.14 Compliance data relating to information security and acceptable use shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An internal audit of information security and acceptable use shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer.

25.10.15 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to information security and acceptable use. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.10.16 Compliance data relating to information security and acceptable use shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

25.10.17 Compliance with the provisions on information security and acceptable use shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.10.18 Where an external regulator requests information concerning information security and acceptable use, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee.

25.10.19 Compliance data relating to information security and acceptable use shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.10.20 Compliance with the provisions on information security and acceptable use shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.10.21 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to information security and acceptable use. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.10.22 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to information security and acceptable use. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.10.23 An internal audit of information security and acceptable use shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.10.24 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.10.25 An internal audit of information security and acceptable use shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

25.10.26 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Compliance with the provisions on information security and acceptable use shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

25.10.27 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.10.28 Where an external regulator requests information concerning information security and acceptable use, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.10.29 An internal audit of information security and acceptable use shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

25.10.30 An internal audit of information security and acceptable use shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director.

25.10.31 Compliance data relating to information security and acceptable use shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

25.10.32 An internal audit of information security and acceptable use shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

25.10.33 Where an external regulator requests information concerning information security and acceptable use, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

25.11.1 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to information security and acceptable use shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

25.11.2 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

25.11.3 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to information security and acceptable use shall be treated as serious misconduct. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.11.4 A failure to comply with the provisions on information security and acceptable use may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

25.11.5 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

25.11.6 A failure to comply with the provisions on information security and acceptable use may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to information security and acceptable use shall be treated as serious misconduct.

25.11.7 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

25.11.8 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

25.11.9 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to information security and acceptable use shall be treated as serious misconduct.

25.11.10 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. A failure to comply with the provisions on information security and acceptable use may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

25.11.11 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.11.12 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.11.13 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.11.14 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.11.15 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

25.11.16 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.11.17 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to information security and acceptable use shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A failure to comply with the provisions on information security and acceptable use may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

25.11.18 A failure to comply with the provisions on information security and acceptable use may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

25.11.19 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

25.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.11.21 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

25.11.22 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.11.23 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.11.24 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to information security and acceptable use shall be treated as serious misconduct.

25.11.25 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.11.26 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

25.11.27 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.11.28 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.11.29 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.11.30 A failure to comply with the provisions on information security and acceptable use may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

25.11.31 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

25.11.32 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.11.33 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.12 Review and Amendment

25.12.1 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

25.12.2 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on information security and acceptable use through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

25.12.3 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.12.4 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on information security and acceptable use through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

25.12.5 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to information security and acceptable use, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

25.12.6 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

25.12.7 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

25.12.8 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

25.12.9 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.12.10 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

25.12.11 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

25.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on information security and acceptable use through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

25.12.13 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

25.12.14 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

25.12.15 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

25.12.16 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

25.12.17 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.12.18 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on information security and acceptable use through the HR portal not less than 7 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

25.12.19 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.12.20 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

25.12.21 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

25.12.22 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

25.12.23 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.12.24 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.12.25 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

25.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

25.12.27 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

25.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. As an illustration, a request relating to information security and acceptable use made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

25.12.29 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

25.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

25.12.31 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

25.12.32 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

25.12.33 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail.

Chapter 26

Data Protection and Employee Privacy

26.1 Purpose and Scope

26.1.1 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.1.2 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on data protection and employee privacy. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

26.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

26.1.4 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to data protection and employee privacy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

26.1.5 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on data protection and employee privacy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.1.6 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Company recognises that data protection and employee privacy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

26.1.7 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to data protection and employee privacy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on data protection and employee privacy. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

26.1.9 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to data protection and employee privacy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.1.10 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

26.1.11 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.1.12 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on data protection and employee privacy. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

26.1.13 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.1.14 The Company recognises that data protection and employee privacy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

26.1.15 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.1.16 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on data protection and employee privacy. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.1.17 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.1.18 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

26.1.19 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to data protection and employee privacy and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.1.20 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.1.21 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.1.22 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

26.1.23 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.1.24 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

26.1.25 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

26.1.26 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.1.27 The Company recognises that data protection and employee privacy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.1.28 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.1.29 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

26.1.30 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.1.32 The objective of these provisions on data protection and employee privacy is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.1.33 The Company recognises that data protection and employee privacy has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

26.2 Definitions and Interpretation

26.2.1 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "data protection and employee privacy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

26.2.2 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.2.3 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.2.4 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

26.2.5 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.2.6 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

26.2.7 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.2.8 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.2.9 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "data protection and employee privacy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

26.2.10 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.2.11 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.2.12 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to data protection and employee privacy. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.2.13 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

26.2.14 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

26.2.15 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

26.2.16 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

26.2.17 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.2.18 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.2.19 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "data protection and employee privacy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

26.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.2.21 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to data protection and employee privacy. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.2.22 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to data protection and employee privacy. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "data protection and employee privacy" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

26.2.24 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.2.25 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.2.26 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

26.2.27 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.2.28 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.2.29 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to data protection and employee privacy. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.2.30 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

26.2.31 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

26.2.32 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

26.3 Eligibility and Applicability

26.3.1 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.3.2 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

26.3.3 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on data protection and employee privacy.

26.3.4 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for data protection and employee privacy restricted until the matter is concluded. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

26.3.5 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

26.3.6 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

26.3.7 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

26.3.8 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.3.9 Eligibility for data protection and employee privacy shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for data protection and employee privacy restricted until the matter is concluded.

26.3.10 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on data protection and employee privacy. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.3.11 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.3.12 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on data protection and employee privacy. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Eligibility for data protection and employee privacy shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

26.3.13 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

26.3.14 Eligibility for data protection and employee privacy shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

26.3.15 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.3.16 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on data protection and employee privacy. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

26.3.17 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.3.18 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for data protection and employee privacy restricted until the matter is concluded. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.3.19 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.3.21 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for data protection and employee privacy restricted until the matter is concluded.

26.3.22 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.3.23 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.3.24 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.3.25 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Eligibility for data protection and employee privacy shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

26.3.26 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on data protection and employee privacy.

26.3.27 Eligibility for data protection and employee privacy shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.3.28 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.3.29 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final.

26.3.30 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on data protection and employee privacy. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

26.3.31 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.3.32 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on data protection and employee privacy.

26.3.33 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

26.4 Responsibilities of Employees

26.4.1 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to data protection and employee privacy and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.4.2 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Head of Department at least 3 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

26.4.3 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

26.4.4 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to data protection and employee privacy and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.4.5 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.4.6 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of data protection and employee privacy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with data protection and employee privacy.

26.4.7 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with data protection and employee privacy. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.4.8 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

26.4.9 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to data protection and employee privacy and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.4.10 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of data protection and employee privacy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

26.4.11 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

26.4.12 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with data protection and employee privacy. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to data protection and employee privacy and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy and shall comply with them at all times.

26.4.14 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with data protection and employee privacy. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.4.15 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.4.16 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.4.17 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with data protection and employee privacy. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The staff member shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

26.4.18 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

26.4.19 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

26.4.20 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

26.4.21 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with data protection and employee privacy.

26.4.22 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.4.23 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.4.24 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

26.4.25 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of data protection and employee privacy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

26.4.26 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.4.27 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to data protection and employee privacy and shall not withhold material facts. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.4.28 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.4.29 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Head of Department at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.4.30 The employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.4.31 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of data protection and employee privacy as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

26.4.32 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.4.33 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

26.5.1 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.5.2 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on data protection and employee privacy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.5.4 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on data protection and employee privacy and applies them consistently.

26.5.5 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.5.6 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on data protection and employee privacy. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on data protection and employee privacy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

26.5.8 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.5.9 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on data protection and employee privacy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

26.5.10 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on data protection and employee privacy and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.5.11 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on data protection and employee privacy.

26.5.12 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.5.13 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.5.14 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.5.15 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on data protection and employee privacy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.5.16 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on data protection and employee privacy. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

26.5.17 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on data protection and employee privacy. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

26.5.18 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on data protection and employee privacy. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

26.5.19 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on data protection and employee privacy. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.5.20 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.5.21 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to data protection and employee privacy to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on data protection and employee privacy and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

26.5.22 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on data protection and employee privacy and applies them consistently. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.5.23 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on data protection and employee privacy. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

26.5.24 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to data protection and employee privacy to the HR Director without undue delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.5.25 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.5.26 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on data protection and employee privacy and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.5.27 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on data protection and employee privacy and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.5.28 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.5.29 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.5.30 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.5.31 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to data protection and employee privacy to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.5.32 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to data protection and employee privacy within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.5.33 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

26.6.1 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for data protection and employee privacy and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.6.2 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to data protection and employee privacy. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

26.6.3 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to data protection and employee privacy and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People

Officer.

26.6.4 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to data protection and employee privacy and on the applicable legal requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.6.5 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to data protection and employee privacy. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

26.6.6 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to data protection and employee privacy and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with data protection and employee privacy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

26.6.7 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.6.8 HR shall respond to every written query on data protection and employee privacy within 15 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.6.9 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for data protection and employee privacy and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

26.6.10 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to data protection and employee privacy and on the applicable legal requirements.

26.6.11 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to data protection and employee privacy. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.6.12 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.6.13 HR shall respond to every written query on data protection and employee privacy within 7 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.6.14 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with data protection and employee privacy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

26.6.15 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to data protection and employee privacy and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

26.6.16 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for data protection and employee privacy and shall make them available to all employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.6.17 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.6.18 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.6.19 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis.

26.6.20 HR shall respond to every written query on data protection and employee privacy within 10 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on data protection and employee privacy within 2 working days of receipt.

26.6.22 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to data protection and employee privacy and on the applicable legal requirements. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

26.6.23 HR shall respond to every written query on data protection and employee privacy within 3 working days of receipt. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.6.24 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

26.6.25 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.6.26 HR shall respond to every written query on data protection and employee privacy within 7 working days of receipt. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

26.6.27 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for data protection and employee privacy and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for data protection and employee privacy and shall make them available to all employees.

26.6.29 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.6.30 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with data protection and employee privacy in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

26.6.31 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to data protection and employee privacy. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.6.32 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to data protection and employee privacy and on the applicable legal requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis.

26.6.33 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to data protection and employee privacy. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.7 Procedure and Process Steps

26.7.1 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

26.7.3 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.7.4 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 14 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.7.5 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

26.7.6 The employee shall initiate the process relating to data protection and employee privacy by submitting an HR portal request to the Line Manager. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

26.7.7 The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.7.8 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

26.7.9 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

26.7.10 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.7.11 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.7.12 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

26.7.14 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

26.7.15 The employee shall initiate the process relating to data protection and employee privacy by submitting the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

26.7.16 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

26.7.17 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.7.18 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

26.7.19 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 5 working days of receiving it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

26.7.20 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

26.7.21 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.7.22 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 30 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

26.7.23 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.7.24 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

26.7.25 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

26.7.27 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.7.28 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

26.7.29 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.7.30 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

26.7.31 The employee shall initiate the process relating to data protection and employee privacy by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.7.32 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 5 working days of receiving it. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.7.33 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

26.8.1 All documents relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

26.8.2 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Records relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years.

26.8.3 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

26.8.4 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.8.5 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

26.8.6 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

26.8.7 All documents relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

26.8.8 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to data protection and employee privacy that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

26.8.9 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.8.10 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.8.11 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Records relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 7 years.

26.8.12 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.8.13 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to data protection and employee privacy that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.8.14 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to data protection and employee privacy that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

26.8.15 Records relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 3 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.8.16 All documents relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.8.17 All documents relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

26.8.18 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.8.19 All documents relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to data protection and employee privacy that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

26.8.20 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

26.8.21 Records relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

26.8.22 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.8.23 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.8.24 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

26.8.25 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.8.26 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.8.27 All documents relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.8.28 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

26.8.29 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

26.8.30 Records relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

26.8.31 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to data protection and employee privacy that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

26.8.32 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

26.8.33 Records relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 30 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. All documents relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

26.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

26.9.1 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.9.2 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 5 working days' written notice. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

26.9.3 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.9.4 Exceptions to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

26.9.5 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.9.6 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case.

26.9.7 Exceptions to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.9.8 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.9.9 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.9.10 Exceptions to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

26.9.11 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.9.12 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

26.9.13 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.9.14 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

26.9.15 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.9.17 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

26.9.18 Exceptions to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.9.19 A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

26.9.20 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.9.21 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.9.22 Exceptions to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.9.23 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.9.24 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

26.9.25 Exceptions to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

26.9.26 Exceptions that affect more than 10 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

26.9.27 Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.9.28 Exceptions to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.9.29 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

26.9.30 Exceptions to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 2 working days' written notice.

26.9.31 Exceptions to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.9.32 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.9.33 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

26.10.1 Compliance data relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.10.2 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

26.10.3 An internal audit of data protection and employee privacy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

26.10.4 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.10.5 An internal audit of data protection and employee privacy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.10.6 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.10.7 Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

26.10.8 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Compliance data relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

26.10.9 Where an external regulator requests information concerning data protection and employee privacy, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

26.10.10 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.10.11 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.10.12 An internal audit of data protection and employee privacy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

26.10.13 An internal audit of data protection and employee privacy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.10.14 Compliance data relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.10.15 Where an external regulator requests information concerning data protection and employee privacy, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.10.16 An internal audit of data protection and employee privacy shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.10.17 Where an external regulator requests information concerning data protection and employee privacy, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

26.10.18 Where an external regulator requests information concerning data protection and employee privacy, the request shall be routed through the HR Director. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.10.19 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to data protection and employee privacy. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

26.10.20 Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance data relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

26.10.21 Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.10.23 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

26.10.24 Compliance data relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

26.10.25 Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.10.26 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.10.27 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to data protection and employee privacy. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Compliance data relating to data protection and employee privacy shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

26.10.28 Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.10.29 Where an external regulator requests information concerning data protection and employee privacy, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

26.10.30 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

26.10.31 Compliance with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.10.32 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.10.33 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to data protection and employee privacy. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

26.11.1 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

26.11.2 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

26.11.3 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

26.11.4 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

26.11.5 A failure to comply with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

26.11.6 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

26.11.7 A failure to comply with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

26.11.8 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.11.9 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.11.10 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.11.11 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to data protection and employee privacy, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

26.11.12 A failure to comply with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

26.11.13 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to data protection and employee privacy shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.11.14 A failure to comply with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

26.11.15 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.11.16 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.11.17 A failure to comply with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.11.18 A failure to comply with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.11.19 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.11.20 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to data protection and employee privacy shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.11.21 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to data protection and employee privacy shall be treated as serious misconduct. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. A failure to comply with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

26.11.22 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

26.11.23 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

26.11.24 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

26.11.25 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A failure to comply with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

26.11.26 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

26.11.27 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

26.11.28 A failure to comply with the provisions on data protection and employee privacy may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

26.11.29 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

26.11.30 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

26.11.31 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.11.32 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

26.11.33 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.12 Review and Amendment

26.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

26.12.2 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

26.12.3 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

26.12.4 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.12.5 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.12.6 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

26.12.7 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

26.12.8 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

26.12.9 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

26.12.10 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

26.12.11 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect.

26.12.12 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

26.12.13 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to data protection and employee privacy made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

26.12.14 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

26.12.15 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

26.12.16 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

26.12.17 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

26.12.18 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect.

26.12.19 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

26.12.20 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

26.12.21 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect.

26.12.22 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

26.12.23 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.12.24 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

26.12.25 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

26.12.26 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.12.27 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.12.28 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

26.12.29 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

26.12.30 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

26.12.31 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

26.12.32 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

26.12.33 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on data protection and employee privacy through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

Chapter 27

Social Media and Communications

27.1 Purpose and Scope

27.1.1 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to social media and communications and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

27.1.2 The Company recognises that social media and communications has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.1.3 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

27.1.4 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.1.5 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to social media and communications and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

27.1.6 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

27.1.7 The Company recognises that social media and communications has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.1.8 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.1.9 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on social media and communications. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.1.10 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.1.11 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.1.12 The Company recognises that social media and communications has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

27.1.13 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to social media and communications and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

27.1.14 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to social media and communications and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

27.1.15 The Company recognises that social media and communications has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

27.1.16 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.1.17 The objective of these provisions on social media and communications is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

27.1.18 The objective of these provisions on social media and communications is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on social media and communications.

27.1.19 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.1.20 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on social media and communications. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

27.1.21 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to social media and communications and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

27.1.22 The objective of these provisions on social media and communications is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.1.23 The objective of these provisions on social media and communications is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.1.24 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on social media and communications. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.1.25 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

27.1.26 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on social media and communications. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

27.1.27 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to social media and communications and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

27.1.28 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to social media and communications and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on social media and communications.

27.1.29 The objective of these provisions on social media and communications is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. The Company recognises that social media and communications has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

27.1.30 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.1.31 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

27.1.32 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to social media and communications and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

27.1.33 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.2 Definitions and Interpretation

27.2.1 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

27.2.2 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

27.2.3 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.2.4 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "social media and communications" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

27.2.5 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

27.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to social media and communications.

27.2.7 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.2.8 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to social media and communications.

27.2.9 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.2.10 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.2.11 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to social media and communications. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.2.12 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.2.13 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

27.2.14 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "social media and communications" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

27.2.15 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

27.2.16 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

27.2.17 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to social media and communications. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.2.18 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.2.19 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

27.2.20 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

27.2.21 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

27.2.22 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to social media and communications. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

27.2.23 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to social media and communications. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "social media and communications" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.2.25 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to social media and communications. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.2.26 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

27.2.27 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "social media and communications" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

27.2.28 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "social media and communications" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.2.29 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "social media and communications" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays.

27.2.31 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.2.32 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.2.33 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.3 Eligibility and Applicability

27.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on social media and communications. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.3.2 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

27.3.3 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.3.4 Eligibility for social media and communications shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for social media and communications restricted until the matter is concluded.

27.3.5 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. Eligibility for social media and communications shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

27.3.6 Eligibility for social media and communications shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

27.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on social media and communications. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

27.3.8 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

27.3.9 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

27.3.10 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for social media and communications restricted until the matter is concluded. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.3.11 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

27.3.12 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

27.3.13 Eligibility for social media and communications shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

27.3.14 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.3.15 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.3.16 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for social media and communications restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.3.17 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

27.3.18 Eligibility for social media and communications shall be determined by the HR Operations team on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.3.19 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.3.20 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

27.3.21 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.3.22 Eligibility for social media and communications shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on social media and communications.

27.3.23 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

27.3.24 Eligibility for social media and communications shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.3.25 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for social media and communications restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.3.26 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.3.27 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

27.3.28 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

27.3.29 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.3.30 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on social media and communications. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Eligibility for social media and communications shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

27.3.31 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for social media and communications restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.3.32 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

27.3.33 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for social media and communications restricted until the matter is concluded.

27.4 Responsibilities of Employees

27.4.1 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

27.4.2 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on social media and communications and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with social media and communications.

27.4.3 The concerned employee shall submit a written request to the Head of Department at least 5 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

27.4.4 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with social media and communications. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

27.4.5 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with social media and communications. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.4.6 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on social media and communications and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

27.4.7 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with social media and communications. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

27.4.8 The employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

27.4.9 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with social media and communications.

27.4.10 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with social media and communications. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

27.4.11 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

27.4.12 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

27.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to social media and communications and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.4.15 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

27.4.16 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to social media and communications and shall not withhold material facts. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.4.18 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.4.19 An eligible employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 30 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.4.20 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.4.21 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The employee shall submit the approved template to the HR Business Partner at least 2 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

27.4.22 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on social media and communications and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.4.23 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on social media and communications and shall comply with them at all times. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.4.24 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.4.25 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on social media and communications and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

27.4.26 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with social media and communications. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

27.4.27 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.4.28 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

27.4.29 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with social media and communications. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.4.30 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with social media and communications. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.4.31 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to social media and communications and shall not withhold material facts.

27.4.32 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to social media and communications and shall not withhold material facts. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on social media and communications and shall comply with them at all times.

27.4.33 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of social media and communications as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

27.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

27.5.1 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to social media and communications within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

27.5.2 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on social media and communications and applies them consistently.

27.5.3 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to social media and communications within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.5.4 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on social media and communications. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.5.5 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to social media and communications to the Policy Committee without undue delay. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.5.6 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to social media and communications within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system.

27.5.7 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.5.8 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.5.9 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to social media and communications to the Policy Committee without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to social media and communications within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

27.5.10 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on social media and communications. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.5.11 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on social media and communications and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.5.12 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on social media and communications and applies them consistently. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.5.13 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on social media and communications and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on social media and communications and applies them consistently.

27.5.14 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.5.15 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to social media and communications within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on social media and communications and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

27.5.17 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to social media and communications to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.5.18 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

27.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to social media and communications within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to social media and communications to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

27.5.21 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on social media and communications and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.5.22 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on social media and communications and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

27.5.23 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on social media and communications and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

27.5.24 The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on social media and communications and applies them consistently. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.5.25 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to social media and communications within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.5.26 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to social media and communications to the HR Director without undue delay.

27.5.27 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on social media and communications and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.5.28 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to social media and communications to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.5.29 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on social media and communications and applies them consistently. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to social media and communications to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

27.5.30 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

27.5.31 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to social media and communications within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.5.32 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to social media and communications to the Chief People Officer without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

27.5.33 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter.

27.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

27.6.1 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to social media and communications and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

27.6.2 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to social media and communications and on the applicable legal requirements.

27.6.3 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for social media and communications and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to social media and communications and on the applicable legal requirements.

27.6.4 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with social media and communications in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.6.5 HR shall respond to every written query on social media and communications within 7 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.6.6 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to social media and communications and on the applicable legal requirements.

27.6.7 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

27.6.8 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for social media and communications and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

27.6.9 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.6.10 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with social media and communications in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.6.11 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with social media and communications in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.6.12 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to social media and communications. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. HR shall respond to every written query on social media and communications within 14 working days of receipt.

27.6.13 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Head of Human Resources on a quarterly basis. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.6.14 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. HR shall respond to every written query on social media and communications within 21 working days of receipt.

27.6.15 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to social media and communications.

27.6.16 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with social media and communications in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

27.6.17 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to social media and communications. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR shall respond to every written query on social media and communications within 30 working days of receipt.

27.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to social media and communications and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

27.6.19 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to social media and communications. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

27.6.20 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with social media and communications in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

27.6.21 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for social media and communications and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

27.6.22 HR shall respond to every written query on social media and communications within 15 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with social media and communications in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

27.6.23 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to social media and communications. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.6.24 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to social media and communications. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

27.6.25 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for social media and communications and shall make them available to all employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

27.6.26 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to social media and communications. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.6.27 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

27.6.28 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.6.29 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.6.30 HR shall respond to every written query on social media and communications within 5 working days of receipt. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to social media and communications and on the applicable legal requirements.

27.6.31 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with social media and communications in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.6.32 HR shall respond to every written query on social media and communications within 2 working days of receipt. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.6.33 HR shall respond to every written query on social media and communications within 5 working days of receipt. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Chief People Officer on a quarterly basis.

27.7 Procedure and Process Steps

27.7.1 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

27.7.2 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

27.7.3 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

27.7.4 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

27.7.5 The employee shall initiate the process relating to social media and communications by submitting the prescribed form to the Line Manager. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

27.7.6 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

27.7.7 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Policy Committee within 14 working days of receiving it.

27.7.8 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

27.7.9 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.7.10 On receipt of the request, the HR Operations team shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The employee shall initiate the process relating to social media and communications by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team.

27.7.11 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.7.12 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.7.13 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

27.7.14 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

27.7.15 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

27.7.16 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.7.17 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.7.18 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

27.7.19 The employee shall initiate the process relating to social media and communications by submitting the approved template to the Reporting Manager. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.7.20 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

27.7.21 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

27.7.22 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

27.7.23 The employee shall initiate the process relating to social media and communications by submitting a written request to the HR Business Partner. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.7.24 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 10 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.7.25 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.7.26 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

27.7.27 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 7 working days of receiving it. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The employee shall initiate the process relating to social media and communications by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Business Partner.

27.7.28 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.7.29 The employee shall initiate the process relating to social media and communications by submitting an HR portal request to the HR Operations team. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from an eligible employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

27.7.30 On receipt of the request, the Line Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.7.31 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 3 working days of receiving it. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.7.32 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

27.7.33 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

27.8.1 All documents relating to social media and communications shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

27.8.2 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

27.8.3 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.8.4 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. All documents relating to social media and communications shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

27.8.6 All documents relating to social media and communications shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.8.7 All documents relating to social media and communications shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

27.8.8 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

27.8.9 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. All documents relating to social media and communications shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

27.8.10 Records relating to social media and communications shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

27.8.11 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.8.12 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Records relating to social media and communications shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years.

27.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

27.8.14 All documents relating to social media and communications shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.8.15 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

27.8.16 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

27.8.17 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

27.8.18 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.8.19 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.8.20 All documents relating to social media and communications shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

27.8.21 Records relating to social media and communications shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 14 years. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

27.8.22 All documents relating to social media and communications shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

27.8.23 Records relating to social media and communications shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 10 years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored.

27.8.24 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

27.8.25 Records relating to social media and communications shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.8.26 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.8.27 All documents relating to social media and communications shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.8.28 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

27.8.29 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to social media and communications that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

27.8.30 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

27.8.31 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to social media and communications that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

27.8.32 Records relating to social media and communications shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 21 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.8.33 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

27.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

27.9.1 Exceptions to the provisions on social media and communications may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

27.9.2 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.9.3 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

27.9.4 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

27.9.5 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

27.9.6 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.9.7 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies.

27.9.8 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.9.9 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.9.10 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.9.11 Exceptions to the provisions on social media and communications may be granted only in writing by the HR Director and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

27.9.12 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.9.13 A request for an exception shall be made in an HR portal request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

27.9.15 Exceptions that affect more than 14 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.9.16 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 14 working days' written notice. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Exceptions to the provisions on social media and communications may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

27.9.17 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.9.18 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

27.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.9.20 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

27.9.21 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

27.9.22 Exceptions that affect more than 21 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Exceptions to the provisions on social media and communications may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons.

27.9.23 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.9.24 Exceptions that affect more than 15 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.9.25 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Exceptions that affect more than 7 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information.

27.9.26 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

27.9.27 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.9.28 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

27.9.29 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.9.30 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 7 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.9.31 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.9.32 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.9.33 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

27.10.1 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

27.10.2 An internal audit of social media and communications shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Compliance with the provisions on social media and communications shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

27.10.3 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to social media and communications.

27.10.4 Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

27.10.5 Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager.

27.10.6 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.10.7 Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.10.8 An internal audit of social media and communications shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

27.10.9 Compliance with the provisions on social media and communications shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.10.10 Where an external regulator requests information concerning social media and communications, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to social media and communications.

27.10.11 Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.10.12 An internal audit of social media and communications shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.10.13 Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

27.10.14 An internal audit of social media and communications shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.10.15 Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.10.16 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

27.10.17 Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. An internal audit of social media and communications shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

27.10.18 An internal audit of social media and communications shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Chief People Officer. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Compliance with the provisions on social media and communications shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

27.10.19 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.10.20 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.10.21 Where an external regulator requests information concerning social media and communications, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require.

27.10.22 Compliance with the provisions on social media and communications shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.10.23 Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.10.24 Where an external regulator requests information concerning social media and communications, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to social media and communications.

27.10.25 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to social media and communications. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.10.26 Where an external regulator requests information concerning social media and communications, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.10.27 Compliance with the provisions on social media and communications shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.10.28 Where an external regulator requests information concerning social media and communications, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.10.29 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to social media and communications. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees.

27.10.30 Compliance data relating to social media and communications shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An internal audit of social media and communications shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources.

27.10.31 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Where an external regulator requests information concerning social media and communications, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

27.10.32 Where an external regulator requests information concerning social media and communications, the request shall be routed through the Policy Committee. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

27.10.33 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

27.11.1 A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

27.11.2 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to social media and communications shall be treated as serious misconduct. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

27.11.3 A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.11.4 A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

27.11.5 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.11.6 A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.11.7 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to social media and communications shall be treated as serious misconduct.

27.11.8 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

27.11.9 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.11.10 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

27.11.11 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.11.12 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to social media and communications shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.11.13 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

27.11.14 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

27.11.15 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

27.11.16 A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.11.17 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to social media and communications shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

27.11.18 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

27.11.19 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.11.20 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

27.11.21 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.11.22 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to social media and communications shall be treated as serious misconduct.

27.11.23 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.11.24 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

27.11.25 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to social media and communications shall be treated as serious misconduct. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.11.26 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

27.11.27 A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to social media and communications shall be treated as serious misconduct.

27.11.28 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to social media and communications shall be treated as serious misconduct.

27.11.29 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to social media and communications shall be treated as serious misconduct. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record.

27.11.30 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.11.31 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

27.11.32 A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

27.11.33 A failure to comply with the provisions on social media and communications may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.12 Review and Amendment

27.12.1 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

27.12.2 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.12.3 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.12.4 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.12.5 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

27.12.6 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.12.7 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

27.12.8 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on social media and communications through the HR portal not less than 21 days before it takes effect. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

27.12.9 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

27.12.10 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

27.12.11 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

27.12.12 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.12.13 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

27.12.14 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on social media and communications through the HR portal not less than 3 days before it takes effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

27.12.15 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

27.12.16 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect.

27.12.17 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on social media and communications through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect.

27.12.18 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Policy Committee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to social media and communications, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

27.12.19 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on social media and communications through the HR portal not less than 10 days before it takes effect. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

27.12.20 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

27.12.21 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.12.22 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

27.12.23 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.12.24 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

27.12.25 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Policy Committee before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law.

27.12.26 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

27.12.27 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to social media and communications made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

27.12.28 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

27.12.29 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

27.12.30 The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

27.12.31 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

27.12.32 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

27.12.33 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date.

Chapter 28

Company Assets and Equipment

28.1 Purpose and Scope

28.1.1 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company assets and equipment and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

28.1.2 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.1.3 The Company recognises that company assets and equipment has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

28.1.4 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on company assets and equipment. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.1.5 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on company assets and equipment. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The Company recognises that company assets and equipment has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

28.1.6 The Company recognises that company assets and equipment has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.1.7 The Company recognises that company assets and equipment has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.1.8 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.1.9 The objective of these provisions on company assets and equipment is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.1.10 The Company recognises that company assets and equipment has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

28.1.11 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on company assets and equipment. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

28.1.12 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company assets and equipment and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. The Company recognises that company assets and equipment has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

28.1.13 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on company assets and equipment. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

28.1.14 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

28.1.15 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

28.1.16 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company assets and equipment and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

28.1.17 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

28.1.18 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.1.19 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

The objective of these provisions on company assets and equipment is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

28.1.20 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.1.21 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.1.22 The objective of these provisions on company assets and equipment is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

28.1.23 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company assets and equipment and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.1.24 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

28.1.25 The objective of these provisions on company assets and equipment is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

28.1.26 The objective of these provisions on company assets and equipment is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company assets and equipment and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

28.1.27 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company assets and equipment and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

28.1.28 The Company recognises that company assets and equipment has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.1.29 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on company assets and equipment. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

28.1.30 The Company recognises that company assets and equipment has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.1.31 The objective of these provisions on company assets and equipment is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict.

28.1.32 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.1.33 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to company assets and equipment and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

28.2 Definitions and Interpretation

28.2.1 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.2.2 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.2.3 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.2.4 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

28.2.5 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.2.6 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the concerned employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.2.7 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.2.8 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

28.2.9 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.2.10 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.2.11 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company assets and equipment. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.2.12 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.2.13 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.2.14 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.2.15 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.2.16 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company assets and equipment. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.2.17 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company assets and equipment" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.2.18 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to company assets and equipment. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.2.19 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role.

28.2.20 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.2.21 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.2.22 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.2.23 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company assets and equipment" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

28.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "company assets and equipment" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

28.2.25 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

28.2.26 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.2.27 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.2.28 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.2.29 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.2.30 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.2.31 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.2.32 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.2.33 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team.

28.3 Eligibility and Applicability

28.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company assets and equipment. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.3.2 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company assets and equipment. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

28.3.3 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company assets and equipment restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.3.4 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.3.5 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company assets and equipment. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

28.3.6 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company assets and equipment. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

28.3.8 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.3.9 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

28.3.10 Eligibility for company assets and equipment shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

28.3.11 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.3.12 Eligibility for company assets and equipment shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.3.13 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.3.14 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.3.15 Where eligibility is disputed, the concerned employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.3.16 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.3.17 Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Policy Committee, whose decision shall be final. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company assets and equipment.

28.3.18 Eligibility for company assets and equipment shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.3.19 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

28.3.20 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company assets and equipment. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.3.21 Eligibility for company assets and equipment shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.3.22 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

28.3.23 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company assets and equipment restricted until the matter is concluded. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

28.3.24 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

28.3.25 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

28.3.26 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on company assets and equipment.

28.3.27 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements.

28.3.28 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company assets and equipment restricted until the matter is concluded. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.3.29 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company assets and equipment restricted until the matter is concluded. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.3.30 Where eligibility is disputed, an eligible employee may refer the question to the HR Director, whose decision shall be final. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.3.31 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

28.3.32 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for company assets and equipment restricted until the matter is concluded. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

28.3.33 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

28.4 Responsibilities of Employees

28.4.1 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.4.2 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company assets and equipment and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The staff member shall submit a written request to the Line Manager at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

28.4.3 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company assets and equipment as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

28.4.4 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company assets and equipment as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

28.4.6 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company assets and equipment as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

28.4.7 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.4.8 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.4.9 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.4.10 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company assets and equipment and shall comply with them at all times. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.4.12 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

28.4.13 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company assets and equipment and shall not withhold material facts. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

28.4.14 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company assets and equipment and shall not withhold material facts. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company assets and equipment and shall comply with them at all times.

28.4.15 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.4.16 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.4.17 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company assets and equipment as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR.

28.4.18 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

28.4.19 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company assets and equipment as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

28.4.20 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.4.21 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company assets and equipment as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment.

28.4.22 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.4.23 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company assets and equipment and shall not withhold material facts. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.4.24 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

28.4.25 The employee shall submit an HR portal request to the Line Manager at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.4.26 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company assets and equipment as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company assets and equipment and shall not withhold material facts.

28.4.27 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.4.28 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment.

28.4.29 The concerned employee shall submit the approved template to the Line Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.4.30 Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with company assets and equipment. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.4.31 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company assets and equipment as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay.

28.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on company assets and equipment and shall comply with them at all times. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of company assets and equipment as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

28.4.33 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to company assets and equipment and shall not withhold material facts. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

28.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

28.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on company assets and equipment and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

28.5.2 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company assets and equipment to the Policy Committee without undue delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.5.3 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.5.4 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.5.5 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.5.6 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.5.7 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on company assets and equipment and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company assets and equipment to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay.

28.5.8 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 21 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.5.9 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company assets and equipment and applies them consistently. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

28.5.10 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on company assets and equipment and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

28.5.11 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company assets and equipment to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment.

28.5.12 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

28.5.13 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company assets and equipment to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

28.5.14 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

28.5.15 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.5.16 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.5.17 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on company assets and equipment and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

28.5.18 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company assets and equipment and applies them consistently. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.5.19 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on company assets and equipment and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment.

28.5.20 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the HR Operations team shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.5.21 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

28.5.22 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

28.5.23 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company assets and equipment and applies them consistently. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment.

28.5.24 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.5.25 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on company assets and equipment and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

28.5.26 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company assets and equipment to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company assets and equipment and applies them consistently.

28.5.27 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to company assets and equipment to the HR Director without undue delay.

28.5.28 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

28.5.29 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.5.30 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on company assets and equipment. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file.

28.5.31 The HR Business Partner shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on company assets and equipment and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 30 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register.

28.5.32 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 3 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

28.5.33 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to company assets and equipment within 5 working days and shall record the outcome in the central HR repository.

28.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

28.6.1 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company assets and equipment and on the applicable legal requirements. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.6.2 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company assets and equipment and shall make them available to all employees. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.6.3 HR shall respond to every written query on company assets and equipment within 14 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company assets and equipment and shall make them available to all employees.

28.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.6.5 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company assets and equipment and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with company assets and equipment in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

28.6.6 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company assets and equipment. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.6.7 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company assets and equipment and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.6.8 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company assets and equipment and on the applicable legal requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.6.9 HR shall respond to every written query on company assets and equipment within 30 working days of receipt. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with company assets and equipment in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

28.6.10 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company assets and equipment.

28.6.11 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.6.12 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company assets and equipment and shall make them available to all employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

28.6.13 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

28.6.14 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company assets and equipment. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis.

28.6.15 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.6.16 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company assets and equipment and shall make them available to all employees. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.6.17 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the Policy Committee on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.6.18 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company assets and equipment and on the applicable legal requirements.

28.6.19 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company assets and equipment and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.6.20 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.6.21 HR shall respond to every written query on company assets and equipment within 5 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.6.22 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with company assets and equipment in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

28.6.23 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with company assets and equipment in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

28.6.24 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company assets and equipment and on the applicable legal requirements. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

28.6.25 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company assets and equipment and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.6.26 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company assets and equipment. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.6.27 HR shall ensure that its own staff are trained on the provisions relating to company assets and equipment and on the applicable legal requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

28.6.28 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company assets and equipment and shall make them available to all employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.6.29 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company assets and equipment. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.6.30 HR shall respond to every written query on company assets and equipment within 10 working days of receipt. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

28.6.31 HR shall respond to every written query on company assets and equipment within 5 working days of receipt. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

28.6.32 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to company assets and equipment. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with company assets and equipment in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

28.6.33 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for company assets and equipment and shall make them available to all employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.7 Procedure and Process Steps

28.7.1 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

28.7.2 On receipt of the request, the Head of Department shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.7.3 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 15 working days of receiving it.

28.7.4 On receipt of the request, the Reporting Manager shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.7.5 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.7.6 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.7.7 Where additional information is needed, the HR Operations team shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.7.8 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the departmental register and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the HR Director within 14 working days of receiving it.

28.7.9 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the employee's personnel file and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments.

28.7.10 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. The employee shall initiate the process relating to company assets and equipment by submitting the approved template to the Line Manager.

28.7.11 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.7.12 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the HR information system and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.7.13 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter.

28.7.14 Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.7.15 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Chief People Officer within 3 working days of receiving it. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

28.7.16 The employee shall initiate the process relating to company assets and equipment by submitting the approved template to the HR Operations team.

28.7.17 The decision shall be communicated to an eligible employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.7.18 Once the decision is communicated, HR shall update the central HR repository and shall initiate any consequential action, such as payroll adjustments. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. Where additional information is needed, the Line Manager shall request it from the concerned employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided.

28.7.19 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.7.20 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

28.7.21 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

28.7.22 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.7.23 An employee who is dissatisfied with the decision may appeal to the Head of Human Resources within 2 working days of receiving it. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.7.24 Where additional information is needed, the Reporting Manager shall request it from the employee and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. The decision shall be communicated to the employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified.

28.7.25 The decision shall be communicated to the staff member in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

28.7.26 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final.

28.7.27 Where additional information is needed, the HR Business Partner shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.7.28 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.7.29 The employee shall initiate the process relating to company assets and equipment by submitting the prescribed form to the Reporting Manager. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.7.30 Where additional information is needed, the Head of Department shall request it from the staff member and the period for decision shall be suspended until it is provided. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.7.31 On receipt of the request, the HR Business Partner shall acknowledge it in writing and shall review it against the criteria set out in this Chapter. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.7.32 The appeal shall be decided by a person who was not involved in the original decision, and the outcome shall be final. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.7.33 The decision shall be communicated to the concerned employee in writing, stating the reasons where the request has been declined or modified. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.8 Documentation and Record Keeping

28.8.1 Records relating to company assets and equipment shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.8.2 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures.

28.8.3 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. All documents relating to company assets and equipment shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

28.8.4 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

28.8.5 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.8.6 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

28.8.7 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company assets and equipment that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.8.8 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

28.8.9 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. All documents relating to company assets and equipment shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

28.8.10 Records relating to company assets and equipment shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 15 years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.8.11 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company assets and equipment that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

28.8.12 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company assets and equipment that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

28.8.13 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

28.8.14 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed.

28.8.15 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.8.16 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.8.17 Where records are held electronically, regular back-ups shall be taken and tested to ensure that they can be restored. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.8.18 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. All documents relating to company assets and equipment shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

28.8.19 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company assets and equipment that is held about them, subject to applicable law. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

28.8.20 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company assets and equipment that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.8.21 All documents relating to company assets and equipment shall be stored in the departmental register and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.8.22 Every form submitted under this Chapter shall be dated, signed or electronically authenticated, and filed on the day it is processed. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. All documents relating to company assets and equipment shall be stored in the HR information system and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

28.8.23 Records relating to company assets and equipment shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.8.24 All documents relating to company assets and equipment shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel.

28.8.25 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company assets and equipment that is held about them, subject to applicable law. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.8.26 All documents relating to company assets and equipment shall be stored in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.8.27 All documents relating to company assets and equipment shall be stored in the central HR repository and shall be accessible only to authorised personnel. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.8.28 An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company assets and equipment that is held about them, subject to applicable law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.8.29 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion.

28.8.30 At the end of the retention period, records shall be destroyed securely in accordance with the Company's records management procedures. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. An employee may request a copy of any record relating to company assets and equipment that is held about them, subject to applicable law.

28.8.31 Records relating to company assets and equipment shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 2 years.

28.8.32 Records relating to company assets and equipment shall be retained for the period required by law and in any event for not less than 5 years. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.8.33 Records shall be accurate, complete and legible, and corrections shall be made by a dated annotation rather than by deletion. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.9 Exceptions and Special Approvals

28.9.1 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.9.2 Exceptions to the provisions on company assets and equipment may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

28.9.3 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.9.4 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.9.5 A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.9.6 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.9.7 Every exception shall be recorded in the central HR repository together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A request for an exception shall be made in the approved template and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

28.9.8 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.9.9 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.9.10 Exceptions that affect more than 5 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

28.9.11 Every exception shall be recorded in the employee's personnel file together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.9.12 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.9.13 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.9.14 Exceptions that affect more than 2 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

28.9.15 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

28.9.16 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees.

28.9.17 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.9.18 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.9.19 Every exception shall be recorded in the HR information system together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.9.20 Every exception shall be recorded in the departmental register together with the reasons for it and the period for which it applies. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.9.21 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.9.22 A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.9.23 Exceptions to the provisions on company assets and equipment may be granted only in writing by the Head of Human Resources and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.9.24 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.9.25 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. A request for an exception shall be made in the prescribed form and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

28.9.26 Exceptions to the provisions on company assets and equipment may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.9.27 Exceptions to the provisions on company assets and equipment may be granted only in writing by the Chief People Officer and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. A request for an exception shall be made in a written request and shall explain why the standard provision cannot reasonably be applied.

28.9.28 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

28.9.29 Exceptions that affect more than 3 employees shall be reported to the senior leadership team for information. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice.

28.9.30 Exceptions to the provisions on company assets and equipment may be granted only in writing by the Policy Committee and only where there are compelling business or personal reasons. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.9.31 An exception granted in one case shall not be treated as a precedent for any other case. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.9.32 The Company may withdraw an exception at any time by giving the employee 3 working days' written notice. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.9.33 No exception shall be granted that would contravene applicable law or that would result in unfair treatment of other employees. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.10 Compliance, Monitoring and Audit

28.10.1 An internal audit of company assets and equipment shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Head of Human Resources. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.10.2 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.10.3 Where an external regulator requests information concerning company assets and equipment, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

28.10.4 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.10.5 Compliance with the provisions on company assets and equipment shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.10.6 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company assets and equipment. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.10.7 Compliance data relating to company assets and equipment shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

28.10.8 Compliance data relating to company assets and equipment shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.10.9 Compliance with the provisions on company assets and equipment shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.10.10 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

28.10.11 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company assets and equipment. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.10.12 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.10.13 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Compliance with the provisions on company assets and equipment shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

28.10.14 Compliance data relating to company assets and equipment shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.10.15 Compliance data relating to company assets and equipment shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company assets and equipment.

28.10.16 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

28.10.17 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

28.10.18 Where an external regulator requests information concerning company assets and equipment, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer.

28.10.19 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.10.20 Where an external regulator requests information concerning company assets and equipment, the request shall be routed through the Head of Human Resources. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

28.10.21 An internal audit of company assets and equipment shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date.

28.10.22 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.10.23 Compliance with the provisions on company assets and equipment shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

28.10.24 Employees and managers shall give auditors access to the records and information they reasonably require. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Reporting Manager. Where an external regulator requests information concerning company assets and equipment, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

28.10.25 Where an external regulator requests information concerning company assets and equipment, the request shall be routed through the HR Director.

28.10.26 An internal audit of company assets and equipment shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the HR Director. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.10.27 Where an external regulator requests information concerning company assets and equipment, the request shall be routed through the Chief People Officer. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.10.28 Compliance with the provisions on company assets and equipment shall be monitored by HR through periodic reviews and spot checks.

28.10.29 Any deficiency identified shall be addressed through a corrective action plan with an owner and a completion date. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

28.10.30 The Company shall comply with all statutory returns and inspections that relate to company assets and equipment. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.10.31 Compliance data relating to company assets and equipment shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. An internal audit of company assets and equipment shall be carried out at least once every two years and the findings shall be presented to the Policy Committee.

28.10.32 Compliance data relating to company assets and equipment shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

28.10.33 Compliance data relating to company assets and equipment shall be reported to the Board in aggregate and shall not identify individual employees. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

28.11 Non-Compliance and Corrective Action

28.11.1 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

28.11.2 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.11.3 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company assets and equipment shall be treated as serious misconduct. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself.

28.11.4 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.11.5 A failure to comply with the provisions on company assets and equipment may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company assets and equipment shall be treated as serious misconduct.

28.11.6 A failure to comply with the provisions on company assets and equipment may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.11.7 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.11.8 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company assets and equipment shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

28.11.9 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company assets and equipment shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.11.10 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion.

28.11.11 A failure to comply with the provisions on company assets and equipment may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made.

28.11.12 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.11.13 A failure to comply with the provisions on company assets and equipment may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

28.11.14 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

28.11.15 A failure to comply with the provisions on company assets and equipment may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.11.16 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

28.11.17 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company assets and equipment shall be treated as serious misconduct.

28.11.18 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company assets and equipment shall be treated as serious misconduct. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.11.19 A failure to comply with the provisions on company assets and equipment may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.11.20 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

28.11.21 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.11.22 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company assets and equipment shall be treated as serious misconduct. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.11.23 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.11.24 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. A failure to comply with the provisions on company assets and equipment may result in disciplinary action in accordance with the Disciplinary Procedures Chapter.

28.11.25 Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

28.11.26 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

28.11.27 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.11.28 Deliberate falsification of any information given in relation to company assets and equipment shall be treated as serious misconduct. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.11.29 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

28.11.30 The seriousness of the action taken shall depend on the nature of the breach, its consequences and the employee's previous record. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.11.31 Minor or inadvertent breaches shall ordinarily be dealt with by informal counselling and a written record of the discussion. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

28.11.32 An employee against whom action is proposed shall be given a fair opportunity to respond before any decision is made. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where a breach has caused financial loss to the Company, the Company may recover the amount to the extent permitted by law.

28.11.33 A manager who knowingly permits a breach of these provisions shall be regarded as having committed a breach himself or herself. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.12 Review and Amendment

28.12.1 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company assets and equipment through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect.

28.12.2 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.12.3 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company assets and equipment through the HR portal not less than 2 days before it takes effect.

28.12.4 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to company assets and equipment made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

28.12.5 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

28.12.6 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company assets and equipment through the HR portal not less than 15 days before it takes effect.

28.12.7 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

28.12.8 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.12.9 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.12.10 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

28.12.11 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.12.12 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company assets and equipment through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.12.13 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.12.14 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

28.12.15 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. The Company reserves the right to modify, suspend or withdraw any provision of this Chapter at any time, subject to law.

28.12.16 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

28.12.17 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company assets and equipment through the HR portal not less than 30 days before it takes effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.12.18 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.12.19 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the HR Director shall prevail. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

28.12.20 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect.

28.12.21 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Chief People Officer before they take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

28.12.22 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Chief People Officer shall prevail.

28.12.23 In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual.

28.12.24 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company assets and equipment through the HR portal not less than 14 days before it takes effect. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner. In the event of an ambiguity, the interpretation adopted by the Head of Human Resources shall prevail.

28.12.25 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.12.26 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

28.12.27 Employees shall be notified of every amendment to the provisions on company assets and equipment through the HR portal not less than 5 days before it takes effect. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

28.12.28 A record of amendments shall be maintained in the Document Control section of this Manual. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

28.12.29 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the HR Director before they take effect. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

28.12.30 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

28.12.31 Proposed amendments shall be circulated to the policy committee and approved by the Head of Human Resources before they take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

28.12.32 Unless the amendment states otherwise, it shall apply only to events occurring on or after its effective date. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

28.12.33 This Chapter shall be reviewed by HR at least once every twelve months, or earlier if there is a change in law. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to company assets and equipment, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

Chapter 29

Transfers and Relocation

29.1 Purpose and Scope

29.1.1 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.1.2 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to transfers and relocation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.1.3 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.1.4 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director.

29.1.5 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to transfers and relocation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

29.1.6 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to transfers and relocation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

29.1.7 The Company recognises that transfers and relocation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

29.1.8 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on transfers and relocation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.1.9 The objective of these provisions on transfers and relocation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.1.10 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

29.1.11 The objective of these provisions on transfers and relocation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made.

29.1.12 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.1.13 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. The Company recognises that transfers and relocation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

29.1.14 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.1.15 The objective of these provisions on transfers and relocation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.1.16 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on transfers and relocation. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee.

29.1.17 The Company recognises that transfers and relocation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

29.1.18 The objective of these provisions on transfers and relocation is to ensure consistency, fairness and transparency in the way decisions are made. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.1.19 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to transfers and relocation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.1.20 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to transfers and relocation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location.

29.1.21 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to transfers and relocation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.1.22 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to transfers and relocation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter.

29.1.23 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.1.24 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.1.25 Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.1.26 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to transfers and relocation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

29.1.27 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on transfers and relocation. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. The Company recognises that transfers and relocation has a direct effect on employee experience and shall administer this Chapter in good faith.

29.1.28 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.1.29 This Chapter should be read together with the Code of Conduct and the other Chapters of this Manual that bear on transfers and relocation. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.1.30 Nothing in this Chapter limits the rights available to employees under applicable law, which shall prevail in the event of any conflict. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.1.31 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Where this Chapter refers to the Company, it includes all subsidiaries and business units that have adopted this Manual.

29.1.32 This Chapter sets out the Company's approach to transfers and relocation and the standards that apply to every employee in every location. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.1.33 These provisions apply to all permanent, fixed-term and probationary employees unless a specific category is excluded in this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.2 Definitions and Interpretation

29.2.1 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.2.2 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For example, if the staff member is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.2.3 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.2.4 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.2.5 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.2.6 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.2.7 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included.

29.2.8 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

29.2.9 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.2.10 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom an eligible employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

29.2.11 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.2.12 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Reporting Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.2.13 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.2.14 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

29.2.15 Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to transfers and relocation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.2.16 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if an eligible employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.2.17 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.2.18 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Business Partner fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

29.2.19 The term "HR" means the Human Resources function, including HR Business Partners and the HR Operations team. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.2.20 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it.

29.2.21 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual.

29.2.22 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.2.23 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.2.24 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to transfers and relocation.

29.2.25 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.2.26 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the staff member reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Headings are used for convenience only and shall not affect the interpretation of any provision relating to transfers and relocation.

29.2.27 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.2.28 Where a period is expressed in days, the day on which the relevant event occurs is excluded and the last day of the period is included. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.2.29 A reference to a "working day" is a reference to any day on which the relevant office is open for business, excluding weekly offs and public holidays. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.2.30 For the purposes of this Chapter, the expression "transfers and relocation" has the meaning that is ordinarily attributed to it in Company practice and in this Manual. A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages.

29.2.31 The term "Line Manager" means the person to whom the employee reports for day-to-day work, and includes any person formally designated to act in that role. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.2.32 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.2.33 A reference to "written" or "in writing" includes communication by e-mail or through the HR portal, but excludes informal chat messages. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.3 Eligibility and Applicability

29.3.1 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on transfers and relocation. Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours.

29.3.2 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for transfers and relocation restricted until the matter is concluded. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.3.3 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on transfers and relocation. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.3.4 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final.

29.3.5 Eligibility for transfers and relocation shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

29.3.6 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Eligibility for transfers and relocation shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

29.3.7 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on transfers and relocation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.3.8 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.3.9 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on transfers and relocation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.3.10 Employees who are on notice, suspended or under investigation may have their eligibility for transfers and relocation restricted until the matter is concluded.

29.3.11 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record. Where eligibility is disputed, the staff member may refer the question to the Chief People Officer, whose decision shall be final.

29.3.12 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. Eligibility for transfers and relocation shall be determined by the Head of Department on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

29.3.13 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.3.14 Eligibility for transfers and relocation shall be determined by the Line Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.3.15 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on transfers and relocation. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.3.16 Eligibility for transfers and relocation shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.3.17 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. To illustrate, where the Reporting Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

29.3.18 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.3.19 Eligibility for transfers and relocation shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.3.20 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.3.21 Where eligibility is disputed, the employee may refer the question to the Head of Human Resources, whose decision shall be final. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.3.22 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on transfers and relocation. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

29.3.23 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.3.24 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on transfers and relocation. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.3.25 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.3.26 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on transfers and relocation. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract.

29.3.27 Eligibility for transfers and relocation shall be determined by the HR Business Partner on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.3.28 Part-time employees shall be eligible on a pro-rata basis, calculated by reference to their contracted hours. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.3.29 Every employee who has completed the qualifying period specified in this Manual is eligible to benefit from the provisions on transfers and relocation. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits an HR portal request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

29.3.30 Eligibility under this Chapter does not create an entitlement to any particular outcome and is subject to business requirements. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail.

29.3.31 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.3.32 Eligibility for transfers and relocation shall be determined by the Reporting Manager on the basis of the employee's grade, employment category and length of service.

29.3.33 Employees on probation shall be eligible only to the extent expressly stated in this Chapter or confirmed in the employment contract. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee.

29.4 Responsibilities of Employees

29.4.1 The employee shall submit a written request to the HR Business Partner at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.4.2 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.4.3 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on transfers and relocation and shall comply with them at all times. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.4.4 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to transfers and relocation and shall not withhold material facts. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

29.4.5 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of transfers and relocation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.4.6 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to transfers and relocation and shall not withhold material facts. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.4.7 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on transfers and relocation and shall comply with them at all times. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

29.4.8 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of transfers and relocation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.4.9 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to transfers and relocation and shall not withhold material facts. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the Policy Committee. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with transfers and relocation.

29.4.10 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on transfers and relocation and shall comply with them at all times. The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the HR Business Partner at least 21 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect.

29.4.11 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.4.12 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the staff member may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer.

29.4.13 The staff member shall submit a written request to the Reporting Manager at least 7 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

29.4.14 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of transfers and relocation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR.

29.4.15 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to transfers and relocation and shall not withhold material facts.

29.4.16 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of transfers and relocation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with transfers and relocation.

29.4.17 The concerned employee shall submit the prescribed form to the Line Manager at least 10 working days before the date on which the relevant action is to take effect. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.4.18 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.4.19 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Business Partner or to HR. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

29.4.20 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

29.4.21 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of transfers and relocation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.4.22 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to transfers and relocation and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR.

29.4.23 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. Employees shall cooperate fully with any review, verification or inquiry carried out by HR in connection with transfers and relocation.

29.4.24 Employees are responsible for keeping their personal details in the HR portal up to date so that notices can be delivered without delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Head of Department shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received. Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of transfers and relocation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority.

29.4.25 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the HR Operations team or to HR.

29.4.26 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Line Manager or to HR. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.4.27 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to transfers and relocation and shall not withhold material facts. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on transfers and relocation and shall comply with them at all times.

29.4.28 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to transfers and relocation and shall not withhold material facts. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.4.29 Employees shall treat all information obtained in the course of transfers and relocation as confidential and shall not disclose it without authority. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.4.30 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Head of Department or to HR. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to transfers and relocation and shall not withhold material facts.

29.4.31 Employees shall provide complete and accurate information when dealing with matters relating to transfers and relocation and shall not withhold material facts. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.4.32 Each employee shall familiarise themselves with the provisions on transfers and relocation and shall comply with them at all times. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.4.33 An employee who becomes aware of any breach of these provisions shall report it promptly to the Reporting Manager or to HR.

29.5 Responsibilities of Line Managers

29.5.1 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on transfers and relocation. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit.

29.5.2 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on transfers and relocation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. To illustrate, where the Head of Department fails to act within the prescribed period, the concerned employee may escalate the matter directly to the Chief People Officer. Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on transfers and relocation.

29.5.3 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on transfers and relocation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.5.4 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.5.5 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a provision of this Chapter and a term of the employment contract differ, the term that is more favourable to the employee shall prevail. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to transfers and relocation to the Chief People Officer without undue delay.

29.5.6 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated.

29.5.7 A Line Manager shall not make any commitment on behalf of the Company that is inconsistent with this Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.5.8 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on transfers and relocation and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.5.9 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on transfers and relocation and applies them consistently.

29.5.10 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on transfers and relocation. The Company's decision under this provision shall not affect any statutory right of the employee. By way of illustration, where the employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Operations team.

29.5.11 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on transfers and relocation. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits the prescribed form after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Head of Department.

29.5.12 Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to transfers and relocation to the Head of Human Resources without undue delay. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise.

29.5.13 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the staff member submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager. The Line Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on transfers and relocation and applies them consistently.

29.5.14 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to transfers and relocation within 2 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.5.15 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. By way of illustration, where an eligible employee submits a written request after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the HR Business Partner.

29.5.16 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on transfers and relocation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. For example, if the employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager.

29.5.17 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on transfers and relocation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.5.18 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on transfers and relocation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.5.19 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.5.20 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on transfers and relocation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR.

29.5.21 The Reporting Manager shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on transfers and relocation and applies them consistently. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise.

29.5.22 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Cost implications, where relevant, shall be borne by the department concerned unless the Company decides otherwise. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits.

29.5.23 Where a decision of a Line Manager may have a significant effect on an employee, the manager shall consult HR before the decision is communicated. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. To illustrate, where the Line Manager fails to act within the prescribed period, an eligible employee may escalate the matter directly to the Head of Human Resources.

29.5.24 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on transfers and relocation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years.

29.5.25 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on transfers and relocation.

29.5.26 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to transfers and relocation within 14 working days and shall record the outcome in the employee's personnel file. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned.

29.5.27 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to transfers and relocation within 10 working days and shall record the outcome in the departmental register. The time limits in this Chapter are intended to ensure prompt resolution and shall be observed strictly by all concerned. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the HR Business Partner shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.5.28 Line Managers shall act on each request relating to transfers and relocation within 7 working days and shall record the outcome in the HR information system. Where the person responsible is absent, the matter shall be dealt with by a person of equivalent seniority nominated by HR. An example would be an employee who is absent on the day a decision is due; the decision shall then be delivered to the personal e-mail address on record.

29.5.29 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on transfers and relocation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. By way of illustration, where the concerned employee submits the approved template after the prescribed period, the request shall be treated as late and may be declined at the discretion of the Line Manager.

29.5.30 The Head of Department shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on transfers and relocation and applies them consistently. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.5.31 The HR Operations team shall ensure that every member of the team understands the provisions on transfers and relocation and applies them consistently. This provision shall be applied consistently, and any deviation shall be recorded together with the reason for it. To illustrate, where the HR Operations team fails to act within the prescribed period, the employee may escalate the matter directly to the HR Director. Line Managers are accountable for escalating any unresolved matter relating to transfers and relocation to the HR Director without undue delay.

29.5.32 Line Managers shall attend the training offered by HR on transfers and relocation and shall refresh that training at least once every two years. No employee shall be victimised or treated less favourably for exercising a right under this Chapter in good faith.

29.5.33 Line Managers shall treat all team members fairly and shall not allow personal preferences to influence decisions on transfers and relocation. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail.

29.6 Responsibilities of Human Resources

29.6.1 HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to transfers and relocation.

29.6.2 HR shall respond to every written query on transfers and relocation within 10 working days of receipt.

29.6.3 HR shall monitor compliance with this Chapter and shall report significant trends to the HR Director on a quarterly basis. Employees should seek guidance from HR if they are unsure how this provision applies to their situation.

29.6.4 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case.

29.6.5 HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it. Notices under this Chapter shall be treated as having been received on the next working day after they are sent by e-mail. As an illustration, a request relating to transfers and relocation made on a Friday shall be treated as received on the following Monday for the purpose of calculating time limits. HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with transfers and relocation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter.

29.6.6 HR shall treat all personal information received in connection with transfers and relocation in accordance with the Data Protection Chapter. This requirement applies equally to all grades, locations and employment categories unless this Chapter expressly provides otherwise. HR shall interpret and administer this Chapter and shall provide advice to employees and managers on matters relating to transfers and relocation.

29.6.7 HR shall respond to every written query on transfers and relocation within 21 working days of receipt. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.6.8 HR shall respond to every written query on transfers and relocation within 21 working days of receipt. This provision is intended to be supportive rather than punitive and shall be interpreted in that spirit. For instance, where two employees make competing requests relating to transfers and relocation, the Line Manager shall decide on the basis of business need and the order in which the requests were received.

29.6.9 HR shall maintain the forms, templates and portal workflows required for transfers and relocation and shall make them available to all employees. The Company will apply this provision reasonably and shall have regard to the individual circumstances of each case. For example, if the concerned employee is transferred to another department during the process, the matter shall continue to be dealt with under this Chapter by the new Line Manager. HR may issue guidance notes from time to time to clarify the application of this Chapter, and such notes shall be read as part of it.

